Leaders Balk at Ceiling On Aid; House Speeds Bill in Night Session

Democrats Doubt Concession Would Sway Opponents; Voting Begins Today

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

In a drab night session, with barely a score of weary members on the floor, the House at 10:50 last night concluded three days of debate on the "all-out" aid-to-England bill.

General arguments closed before deserted galleries. The chamber will be transformed into the scene of brisk action at 11 a. m. today when members start voting on the bill and amendments.

Pending contact with the White House expected this morning, leaders were still standing firmly against any fixed ceiling on financial aid to Britain. Republican opponents continued to clamor for this and other concessions.

Administration amendments, now numbering four, may be increased to six before the day is over, but committee leaders served notice they would not materially weaken the bill in order to pile up a large ballot.

G. O. P. Maps Strategy

Approving aid to England, but criticizing the bill's grant of powers to the President, Republicans prepared sheafs of amendments for presentation today. These would restrict aid to a $2,000,000,000 "loan," specifically prohibit convoys by the Navy or the repairing of British ships in American harbors, and would require Army and Navy "certification" of the loans of arms.

The Foreign Affairs Committee's Democratic majority claimed enough votes to repulse all of these and to pass the bill with only slight changes by Friday night.

Cheekers counted 111 speeches pro and con in three days as the last one droned to a close at 10:50.

Earlier, Majority Leader John W. McCormack took the well of the chamber to warn against "hair-splitting."

"This is no time for division," he asserted. "This is one time for unity. Division at this time will result in harm. It might result in destruction."

Committee Session Called

For the second time in two days, Democratic members of the Foreign Affairs Committee will meet in executive session this morning to consider possible slight changes.

Two further "clarifications" will be considered in addition to the

A pretty Vassar graduate yesterday threw the House of Representatives into turmoil by rising in the galleries in a black robe and death's head mask and moaning a protest against the lease-lend bill.

The woman gave her name as Margaret Russell, of New York City. She appeared to be in her twenties but told police she was 34. She was released after two hours' questioning and was reported on her way back to New York last night.

Representative Young (Democrat), of Ohio, was speaking when the woman jumped up from her

Senators Call For Lindbergh Aid Bill Views

Flier Appears Today; Catholic U. Professor Hits Lend-Lease Plan

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

With Col. Charles A. Lindbergh scheduled to appear today, the Senate Foreign Relations committee yesterday heard arguments against the aid-to-Britain bill from personalities so diverse as these:

Prof. Herbert Wright, of Catholic University; President James S. Kemper, of the United States Chamber of Commerce; Gerald L. K. Smith, friend and associate of the late Huey P. Long, and President Alan Valentine, of the University of Rochester.

In a statement submitted to the committee, President Philip Murray, of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, criticized several features of the bill without either supporting it or opposing it as a whole—but he demanded fuller information on "the facts which give rise to the grave necessity for such extraordinary legislation."

Although Col. Lindbergh had indicated reluctance to appear before

Leaflets to Bear Willkie Attack Home to Nazis

British Plan to Scatter Them; He Flies Home By New African Route

By the Associated Press

London, (Thursday), Feb. 6—Wendell Willkie's parting denunciation of the Nazi regime—made in a direct radio message read to the land of his ancestors—already is on the way to the German people by the "underground route," and will be scattered far and wide over Germany in a special "leaflet raid."

"Tell the German people that we German-Americans reject and hate the aggression and lust for power of the present German government," Willkie said in the message he left in London. It was his parting gift to the bomb-battered land in which he has spent the last ten days and was intended for a country where listening to foreign broadcasts is a crime.

Willkie left Lisbon late tonight aboard the Pan American Dixie Clipper for the United States by way of Bolama in Portuguese Guinea, Trinidad and Puerto Rico.

He thus was making the pioneer flight over the alternate route of Pan American Airways from Europe to the United States. The course

Roosevelt Grips Housing Reins

The President has taken personal charge of the drive to provide housing for workers, The Post learned last night, coincident with a Federal Works Agency announcement that it had made definite assignments for 43 housing projects covering 13,200 dwelling units all over the country.

The FWA order thus gave the Federal Security Administration the go-ahead signal for construction of 1,000 new dwellings at Grenebelt, Md., to furnish housing for workers pouring into Washington under the national defense program. The Greenbelt additions, it was said, will fit in with the existing plans of the model village, 12 miles outside of the District in Prince Georges County.

The hand of President Roosevelt was seen in the action of the FWA. Apparently provoked by the delay in building defense homes, and disputes between Government agencies over who should build them, the President has written

Prosecution Speaks First

Plot to Crush Group Health Charged as A. M. A. Trial Opens

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Condemning the organized medical profession for alleged "conspiracy to crush and destroy" Group Health Association, the Federal Government yesterday opened its case against the American Medical Association, five of its officers and 15 Washington physicians.

More than two years after indictment of the defendants, the trial got under way in District Court with selection of a jury that includes two women, and denial by Justice James M. Proctor of a defense motion to exclude certain portions of the indictment.

Of the 20 accused doctors, charged jointly with the A. M. A., the District Medical Society and two other A. M. A. affiliates, with violating the Sherman Antitrust Law, only Dr. Francis X. McGovern was absent from the courtroom as John Henry Lewin opened the Government's case.

William E. Leahy, of defense counsel, explained that Dr. McGovern, who is chairman of the District Medical Society's executive board, is ill. Dr. Coursen B. Conklin, secretary and also a defendant, was prevented by a professional case from being present when the trial opened at 10 a. m., but he appeared shortly before the noon recess was called.

Denial by Justice Proctor of the motion attacking the indictment was, in effect, a split victory for both sides. Its rejection favors the prosecution, but, by being placed in the record without prejudice, it fulfills a purpose in event of a defense appeal from the jury's verdict.

The same true bill was quashed outright by Justice Proctor in July, 1939, on the grounds that its drafting was faulty and the practice of medicine is not a trade within the mean-

Greeks Ask None but Best U. S. Planes

Reject U. S. Offer Of 30 Now With Navy and Hold Out For Newest Ships

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Greece, holding out for preferred orders of the newest American-made warplanes, has turned down a free offer of 30 older Grumman naval fighters, Secretary of the Navy Knox disclosed yesterday.

Knox revealed at the same time that arrangements had been made for China to obtain 100 planes now being built in the United States for Great Britain. He said that China had asked for 500 warplanes for use against Japan, and that Britain had agreed to accept deferred deliveries on 100 of the craft it has on order.

One-Third Combat Ships

The American aircraft production situation has considerably "brightened" recently, Knox said, in reporting that 296 planes were delivered to the Navy in January.

He said that manufacturers were catching up with deliveries, which had fallen 30 per cent behind schedule several months ago. One-third of the 296 planes received last month were combat craft, it was said.

The Navy chief said the planes offered to the Greeks were now on the Wasp, the fleet's newest aircraft carrier, and were "good ships, especially for training, though not new." He said he didn't know what authority of law there was for offering the planes free of charge, but "guessed" they could be classified as "obsolete."

"If I were fighting the Italians, I'd take them in a minute," Knox added.

Training Pace Speeded

Later, a spokesman at the Greek Legation said that the offer had not been rejected by his government, but that instructions were being awaited from Athens.

Reviewing the naval situation, Knox said that within a little over a year the Navy's air training stations will be turning out 560 pilots a month. Plane deliveries to the Navy have been stepped up considerably, he said, since October, when but 100 were received. During the last four months 686 planes were delivered, two-fifths of them combat craft.

He also reported that:

The Navy recruiting drive set a record of 10,655 voluntary enlistments in January.

American patrol planes have already been operating at the new $4,860,000 naval air base at Argentia, Newfoundland.

Better than one training plane a day is being turned out at the naval

Mission Work Wins Praise

By Robert Tate Allan
The Post's Church Editor

The spiritual impact of the National Christian Mission yesterday brought demands for additional meetings, increased already high attendance at programs and drew praise from persons in many walks of life.

It was a day in which the mission speakers uttered fervent pleas for Christian unity, for a revival of Christianity in the home and for a "revitalized religious heart." Those elements, they said, would help construct a new world order.

From the pulpit of Foundry Methodist Church, Dr. E. Stanley Jones last night told 2,000 persons—including an overflow crowd of 500 by amplifiers—that Christianity can save civilization.

That is possible, he said, "if we turn to it wholeheartedly with sincere national and personal repentance for our neglect and rejecton,

'I Agree With You,' First Lady Tells Brooklyn Strikers

New York, Feb. 5 (INS).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt told 1,500 strikers at a mass meeting today that "I am afraid I agree with you."

She spoke to the strikers, mostly women, in a hall a few blocks from the Brooklyn plant of the Leviton Manufacturing Co., where the workers walked out August 27 and which they have been picketing ever since. She was loudly cheered.

"I want to leave with you," the President's wife said, "my sense of gratitude in that you have stood together to gain things that will make life better for your group as a whole."

Petain Offers His Power To Darlan to Thwart Laval; R. A. F. Sows Fire in Nazi Ports

Thousands Cheer From Dover Cliffs As Planes Swarm To New Attack

By Thomas C. Watson
International News Service Staff Writer

London, Feb. 5.—Great red glares tonight lit the French coast from Calais to Boulogne as R. A. F. planes returned to the attack in a speedy follow-up to the most damaging daylight assaults yet made on the German invasion springboards.

Pillars of flame and smoke leaped 9,000 feet into the air above Calais, Boulogne, Bordeaux, Ostend and other cities on the German-occupied coast when several score British planes dropped tons of bombs on Nazi bases despite furious German opposition.

Waves of German raiders swept over the English coast for four hours in the night and split up for widespread attacks on London and several other English centers.

Battle Over Channel

Large numbers of explosive and incendiary bombs fell on central and suburban London. Many houses were demolished and numerous casualties were caused, but fires started by incendiary bombs were doused quickly.

An air battle raged over the English Channel during the British attacks on more than 800 miles of Belgian and French coast-line. Britain announced that seven German planes were shot down during the day, two of them in combat over the Channel. Five British fighter planes are missing.

(Berlin asserted that 17 R. A. F. planes were shot down, and Germany suffered no plane losses. The attack on Calais was beaten off, according to the Nazis, and all British bombs fell into the water without causing any damage on the German base.

Gun Positions Blasted

(Berlin admitted, however, that the attack on the French coast was the opening raid in what is expected to become a series of large-scale assaults "for which the Luftwaffe is prepared.")

Fresh raids on the French and Belgian coasts from Bordeaux to Ostend followed some of the greatest and most widespread British attacks on the Reich and German-occupied areas since the war began. Huge fires and explosions were caused overnight in Duesseldorf (Germany admitted that the center

Duce's Troubles Increase

Italians Flying Aid to Tepeleni, Flee to Bengasi 30 Miles a Day

Advances Speeded Up In Libya, East Africa, British Report

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, Feb. 5.—The main body of Italian troops in Libya, falling back upon Bengasi just ahead of the pursuing British armored battalions, was reported tonight to have been pushed to a point 60 to 70 miles from that strongly fortified base in a retreat proceeding at the rate of 30 miles a day.

Elsewhere over the whole vast area of the African struggle new successes were claimed for British arms and a military spokesman thus summed up:

"The tempo of our advances on both fronts (in Libya and in Italian East Africa) has shown a marked speeding up."

In the running rear guard Italian action along the Libyan coast, the British high command announced, 400 Fascist stragglers already have fallen captive, and there were indications that the full shock power of the British forces soon would be turned upon Bengasi itself—an important port lying 325 miles from the Egyptian frontier.

Far to the south, in Italian Eritrea, Italian Ethiopia and Italian Somaliland, the British land offensive went on in cooperation with a British bombing offensive over thousands of miles which was said to have destroyed 24 Italian planes, aside from

Greeks Rush Supplies By Handcart, Hurl In All Guns and Men

By the Associated Press

Bitolj, Yugoslavia, Feb. 5.—Italy was reported in dispatches to this border town tonight to be rushing reinforcements by air to help the hard-pressed defenders of Tepeleni.

The Greeks, nevertheless, were said to be expecting the fall of the town at any hour and were moving every available soldier and gun into battle.

Long lines of trucks and horse-drawn vehicles and of hand carts pushed by peasant women were reported flowing toward the Tepeleni area, laden with much needed Greek supplies landed at Salonika a few days ago from British transports.

One report said two torpedoes, apparently fired by a Greek or British submarine at a large Italian transport, crashed and exploded on the beach at Petrovac near Port Budva on the Adriatic Sea late last night. The Italian ship, of more than 8,000 tons, was reported to have escaped undamaged.

The bodies of 27 Italian sailors washed ashore were buried on Yugoslav islands. There were reports from many Yugoslav ports that hundreds of oil barrels have been washed ashore along with the wreckage of ships bearing Italian markings, indicating that British and Greek submarines are taking a heavy toll in the Adriatic.

Traffic Enforcement Tightened

Keech Shakes Up Office; Judges Clash on Uniform Penalties

By Howard F. Wentworth

Transfer of an assistant district prosecutor from Police Court and drastic reforms in methods of handling major traffic cases were ordered yesterday by Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech.

His action followed personal investigation of a case in which serious charges against a motorist were nolle prossed and papers listing a lesser count were filed.

In a memorandum to the Commissioners, Keech said he would transfer Assistant Corporation Counsel Ralph Quinter, jr., today from Police Court to the District Building. He said Quinter "used extremely bad judgment" in modifying the charge.

To replace Quinter, Keech named Edward W. (Chic) Thomas, veteran member of the corporation counsel's staff. Thomas, it was announced, will be in direct charge of the Police Court office—making the first time

Police Court judges clashed last night over the advisability of adopting uniform penalties for traffic violations but agreed that another judge is needed to expedite jury trials as members of the Senate and House District Committees sat jointly.

Presiding Judge John P. McMahon defended the court against statements by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, that "traffic cases are juggled around until a lenient judge is found" and stoutly objected to uniform penalties as proposed by Judge George D. Neilson.

Judge Walter J. Casey sided with McMahon against uniform fines and warned the chairman against a "hysterical" approach to the traffic problem.

Casey also complained against special privileges for a minority of motorists, such as employes of embassies and legations, and warned

Tug of War

By Ralph E. Heinzen,
United Press Staff Writer

Vichy, Feb. 5.—Marshal Petain tonight offered to surrender his direct control of the French government to Admiral Darlan in a compromise with Pierre Laval's demand that he be installed as premier over a Vichy regime hand-picked by him.

Admiral Darlan, closest confidant of Petain, leaves for Paris at 11 a. m. tomorrow in another effort to reach an agreement with Laval and the latter's German supporters and solve the 7-week-old crisis in French-German relations.

Rather than submit to Laval's "pretentious" demands for almost dictatorial powers, the 84-year-old Petain was understood to have told his council of ministers in an hour-long session late today that he is prepared to give up his direct leadership of the government, retaining only the title of chief of state.

Laval's Action Unrevealed

Under the proposed compromise Admiral Darlan would become premier—there is no premier now—and be built up as the most powerful figure of defeated France, while Laval would be compelled to take a secondary role.

The situation remained extremely critical tonight, with no indications as to whether Laval, with strong Nazi backing, would accept such a compromise with the demands which he sent to Vichy Tuesday with Darlan.

Laval's demands, as reported in reliable quarters, include:

1. That he be named premier of France, giving him far greater authority than he held when Petain ousted him on December 14 as vice premier and foreign minister.

2. That he be empowered to name an entirely new cabinet.

3. That he be held responsible only to a national assembly—hand-picked by himself in the same manner as the cabinet.

The critical state of affairs for Petain and his authoritarian regime of French reconstruction was revealed clearly when six undersecretaries of state attended today's council of ministers at which the Laval demands were studied.

May Explain to People

This indicated that all of the ministers may have been called in to place their resignations in Petain's hands, to be used without delay in event of a new emergency.

The marshal was understood to be considering explaining the acute situation to his people in a nationwide radio broadcast.

Petain's compromise proposal would give Darlan, as premier, the right to form a cabinet and give

Shoe Leather Faces Export Regulation

By Alfred Friendly.
Post Staff Writer

Export of shoe sole leather, enormous quantities of which recently have been bought by Russians for probable German military use, soon will be placed under license control, it was learned last night.

Shortage of the leather, also due to recent large purchases by the American Army, has been a major factor in increasing the price of Army footwear, it was said.

Russian imports of the leather, used almost exclusively for military shoes, totaled 6,172,267 pounds, with a value of $2,179,828, in November and December. The amounts are larger than total exports of this type of leather by the United States in the five preceding years.

Leather Price Goes Up

Amtorg, Soviet trading agency, appeared only in a few small purchases, early in September. The remainder of the orders placed in that month and in October were undertaken by commission brokers, and not until 30 days after the material was shipped in November did Customs Bureau figures reveal the destination.

Defense officials are convinced that Russia will either transship the leather to Germany, or will manufacture the shoes, which, in turn, will be sent to meet Nazi military requirements.

Result of the buying, which took place at the same time the American Army went into the market for huge amounts of shoes, was to raise the price of the leather from about 32 cents in July to the present figure of 42 to 45 cents, officials said.

Other purchases of a special chrome retan leather for military shoe uppers, were traced to a Hungarian destination and also are believed to have been bought for German use.

U. S. May Use Rubber

The possibility was mentioned that if the scarcity continued, the Army might amend its specifications to use a rubber composition sole.

Army shoe prices, purchasing experts of the Office of Production Management revealed, have risen from an average of $2.51 per pair in August to $3.32 for the last purchase in December. Increase in the cost of materials was put at 45 cents, with the other 36-cent rise due to the spreading of the orders to smaller firms, whose higher bids raised the average.

Turkish, Yugoslav Envoys Air Nazi Threat With Eden

London, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—The Turkish and Yugoslav ministers to Britain were understood to have discussed the possibility of a German drive through Bulgaria and the danger of a future Nazi puppet administration in Sofia with Foreign Minister Anthony Eden today after reports that Germany has renewed demands on Bulgaria to join the Axis.

The new demands on Bulgaria were reported to have been conveyed by Col. Parvan Draganoff, Bulgarian Minister to Berlin, who arrived in Sofia today.

Dr. Rustu Aras, Turkish Minister to London, and Ivan Soubotitch, Yugoslav Minister here, visited the foreign office this afternoon and were understood to have discussed the possibility of a German drive through Bulgaria.

Grable Extortion Suspect Held In $8,500 Bail

Philadelphia, Feb. 5 (AP).—A young singing waiter stood nervously before Commissioner Norman J. Griffith today and heard a Federal agent accuse him of attempting to extort $8,500 from Movie Actress Betty Grable.

The voice of James David Thompson, 24, was scarcely audible as he pleaded innocent. The commissioner set his bail at $8,500—"The same price you fixed on Miss Grable's peace of mind."

Thompson will be rearraigned February 19. FBI agents said they needed more time to complete their investigation.

Agent C. H. King testified Thompson sent a letter to the actress January 24, warning that "my partner on the coast will take care of you" unless the money was forwarded by mail.

Rents Increase In Defense Areas

Special studies of a dozen defense areas have shown that rents have risen in the last year from 6 to 29 per cent, Miss Harriett Elliott, consumer member of the Defense Commission, reported yesterday.

In letters to officials of local defense councils and governors of States where defense activity is concentrated Miss Elliott warned that rising rents in a few communities might start a general price spiral. She said that rent increases were found to be greatest in the lower brackets, and asked that community action be taken "to see that local conditions do not create a national problem."

four minor modifying amendments the committee has already approved.

They are:

A provision that nothing in the bill would affect the existing law prohibiting the shipment of materials in American ships into war zones.

Some restrictions on the life of contracts and agreements the President would be authorized to enter into before expiration of the act.

Democrats Skeptical

Members of the Democratic majority on the committee virtually have abandoned hope of winning many conversions from the Republican opposition by more far-reaching changes, one of their number said.

Administration opposition to a fixed "top" on the aid authorization was said to be based, first on the lack of knowledge of how much aid would be required, and the psychological effect that sharp limitations would have on British morale.

"Even if we put a $5,000,000,000 limitation in the bill, some people would say we were giving the President a blank check and that Congress had been given an order to appropriate that amount," Speaker Rayburn told reporters.

Both Rayburn and McCormick sat in with committee Democrats at an executive conference called to consider "clarifying" changes. The contract and merchant ship proposals may be put into written form at the meeting today.

McCormack Attacks Inaction

McCormack, in his House floor appeal for "action," discounted charges that the bill itself would "lead to war" and declared that with the President at the helm it would have a contrary influence.

"Inaction is an open invitation to attack later, either from an economic or military angle, or through a combination of both," McCormack said.

"What do you think Nazi Germany and army-controlled Japan will do to the United States in case of an Axis victory?" he was asked.

His speech, in effect, was a repetition of the two-way attack warnings voiced earlier in debate, based on confidential testimony given the committee by high Army and Navy officers.

"Act," shouted McCormack. "Act while we still have friends around us and before it is too late. . . . If Hitler wins, I wouldn't want to have it on my conscience that I had done nothing to prevent it."

"War Bill," Short Says

Controlling time for the minority, Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, sent Representative Dewey Short (Republican), of Missouri into the well with an opposition retort.

Short resumed the Republican attack on Presidential powers.

"This is a war bill, a dictatorship bill, and you can't repeal those things; it raises a Hitler in America to get one 4,000 miles away," said the Missourian.

"You can sprinkle this measure with perfume and pour powder on it, but it still needs an undertaker."

Representative Andrews, of New York, ranking Republican member of the Military Affairs Committee, took a more conciliatory stand. He promised to vote for the bill "if reasonable amendments are adopted" and declared there must be some "give" by the President in order to achieve unity.

Limitation Urged

"Why not put some limitation on the expenditures which may be made under this bill?" asked Andrews. "I venture to say that a majority of the Democratic members would welcome such an amendment. And I say further that it would be smart politics for the President to go along with them."

Representative Kee, of West Virginia, one of the ranking Democratic committeemen who favors standing by the bill as reported, told the House that the measure was "neither hastily drawn nor ill-considered."

He said it was written with "studied care" to effectively aid England because: "If the torch should fall from England's hand, it must be caught and carried by us."

Concessions made by the committee, including the 2-year time limit, promptly have been made fresh targets by the opposition, he argued.

"Now we find that this concession is unsatisfactory to the objectors and a new criticism is offerred," Kee said. He appealed to the House to "lay aside petty things" and to "unite as one man."

Knutson Calls for Its Defeat

Two Minnesota Republicans, Representatives Knutson and O'Hara, appealed for defeat of the bill in its present form.

Knutson charged the Administration was preparing to repeat what he called the "folly' of 1917-1918 and embark on another war. O'Hara declared the bill would "change our form of Government, dissipate our resources, endanger our defenses and . . . decimate the youth of our land."

Representative Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts, asking outright defeat of the bill, said it meant adoption by this Government "of a policy of unrestrained, brutal, naked power politics."

To the opposition arguments, Representative Eberharter of Pennsylvania, Democratic member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, replied that "everybody" is agreed on an aid-England policy and that the President is the only man Constitutionally qualified to administer that policy.

"For myself, I am willing to entrust him," said Eberharter. "As a practical matter, I do not see how it is possible to effectively provide for the only kind of aid which will achieve the purposes we all have in mind without granting of emergency power to the President."

Son of Lease-Lend Bill Critic Joins R. A. F.

Representative Johns (Republican), of Wisconsin, told the House last night that it was with "a heavy heart" that he opposed the lease-lend bill.

"The only child I possess in the world telephoned me that he had enlisted in the R. A. F. and would go into training soon," he continued.

He said his son, Newman, 26, who has been flying for several years, would leave for Canada in a month for advanced training, then go to England.

Wood Contradicted

Meanwhile, Acting Secretary of the Treasury Herbert E. Gaston formally stated that Gen. Robert E. Wood, president of the America First Committee, was "completely incorrect" in his allegation Tuesday that the Treasury figures for British assets in this country apparently did not include the value of certain large corporations and real estate holdings.

Asserting that the Treasury "has made a careful recheck of its figures in the light of Gen. Wood's assertions," Gaston wrote that all such assets were included in the Treasury estimate of $900,000,000 for British direct investments in the United States.

However, Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, stated that he intended to ask the Treasury if all assets of British insurance companies in this country had been taken into account. Treasury officials informed The Post yesterday that these were included along with the others.

Asked about a report that the pending bill was "accompanied by definite commitments by Britain to us regarding the British fleet."

Secretary Hull said at his press conference yesterday that he was aware of no new commitments. But he recalled that last year the British had given formal assurances that, in case of disaster to the British Isles, the fleet would not be surrendered or scuttled, but would be sent overseas to defend the Empire.

In his testimony before the Foreign Relations Committee yesterday, Dr. Wright, professor of International Law at Catholic University here, denounced the proposed-aid-to-Britain bill as "an unwarranted, unnecessary and excessive delegation of power by the Congress to the Chief Executive, the exercise of which might very easily involve us in war or a violation of international law or both."

Calls It Gangsterism

The argument that the United States can safely violate international law because Germany will not declare war on that grounds alone is "the very nullification of law," said the bearded professor. "It is the philosophy of the gangster and the racketeer . . . It is with bad grace that a nation excoriates a violator of international law while at the same time itself offers a bad example of law observance."

Declaring "my sympathies are entirely with the people of Great Britain," Dr. Wright added, "I want to keep the United States out of war more than I want to help them (the British), and also keep the United States' record of law observance more than I want to help them."

Kemper, president of several insurance companies as well as of the United States Chamber of Commerce, speaking for the chamber, asserted that "the enactment of this legislation would not contribute to the defense of the United States, and that . . . the bill should not, in its present form at least, become the law of the land."

Kemper tangled sharply with several Administration Senators in his interpretation of the bill notably when he presented the view of the Chamber's board of directors that the measure would allow the President to seize private property that might have military use "regardless of law," and spend funds "without the prior knowledge of the Congress."

Chamber Trusts Congress

Both Kemper and Wright agreed that Congress should at least amend the bill to establish a special bipartisan Congressional committee to pass on the transfer of arms to Britain and to limit specifically the amount of financial help to be given in this measure. Other suggestions included imposing a time limitation and specifying the nations to be assisted and the types of materials to be sent to them.

"You'd rather trust the Congress than the President?" Majority Leader Barkley finally asked Kemper.

"Yes, but not entirely so," said the witness. "But we don't think the situation has got to the point where Congress should abdicate and go home—or abdicate and stay here."

"Well," observed Senator Barkley, "in view of the general attitude of the United States Chamber of Commerce toward Congress in recent years, it's refreshing to know they at last have great confidence in it."

In reply to questions of Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, and Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island, Kemper said that the chamber had taken no formal steps to prevent profiteering on war contracts, that the members probably would not oppose legislation to that end, but that it would be unnecessary.

"Every effort," said the witness, "has been made to cooperate wholeheartedly without reference to profit and at considerable inconvenience and possible loss."

"By and large," he declared, "business has been doing a swell job. The men in the Defense Commission and the services think so—why don't you ask them about that?"

Smith, former Long disciple in Louisiana and now national chairman of the "Committee of 1,000,000," warned that if the bill is passed, President Roosevelt would become "the most powerful man on earth" and "economic dictator" of the United States and other nations.

Dr. Valentine, a Rhodes scholar and former editor of the American Oxonian, called for rejection of the aid-to-Britain bill, but the extension of "financial and material assistance to Great Britain provided such aid is in each instance formally approved by Congress."

U. S. Lines' Ships Transferred To Subsidiary for War Duty

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Flying the flag of Panama, five freighters owned by a subsidiary of the United States Lines soon will begin carrying planes, munitions and other war supplies to England.

The Maritime Commission yesterday granted approval to the lines to sell them to the North Atlantic Transport Co., a subsidiary.

This will mark a sharp change in the policy of the Roosevelt Administration. However, the various transactions preparatory to sending the American-owned ships through the combat zone have caused hardly a ripple of excitement in Washington.

In November, 1939, two months after the outbreak of the European war and shortly after the passage of the Neutrality Act, the United States Lines sought to transfer eight of its ships to a subsidiary company in Panama so that they might sail to Britain and France.

The result was a major controversy. The United States Maritime Commission had decided to approve the transfer, but Secretary of State Hull vigorously protested, arguing that to send American-owned ships through the combat zone even though they flew a Panamanian flag would be a violation of the spirit of the Neutrality Act.

The late Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, asked what the United States was going to do if the Germans torpedoed ships flying the flag of Panama. Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, denounced the plan as "a subterfuge and a clear violation" of the spirit of the Neutrality Act.

President Roosevelt, who was in Hyde Park when the storm broke, ordered the Maritime Commission to delay a decision. A few days later, at a White House press conference, the President indicated that he had vetoed the transfer plan. He said he agreed with Secretary Hull in part. But the important question, he said, was whether the United States wanted to put a Central American republic in a position different from our own with respect to neutrality. He said the more the Administration thought this over, the more it was convinced that this was not the right thing to do.

Ultimately the United States Lines sold the President Harding, the American Importer and the other ships in question to a Belgian concern in which it retained an interest. Five of the vessels have been sunk, one is missing and the other two are plying between New York and the British Isles.

seat, held one hand aloft and cried "My novena, my novena!" She later told police she had shouted, "Death is the victor!"

Members shouted "Take her away." Gallery attendant hustled her to the office of the House Sergeant at Arms, where she was questioned by Capitol and Metropolitan Police.

The woman said she was a native of Denton, Tex., and had studied at Vassar. She had with her a pamphlet called "The Flame," written by "Andra," which she said was her pen name. The pamphlet was described by police as an invitation to attend a meeting of the "New Woman's Party" at Carnegie Hall in New York.

Police said she apparently had entered the gallery in her black robe, similar to an academic gown, and then suddenly slipped on the weird mask. She told officers she had been taken into the gallery, one reserved for guests of Representatives, by a secretary to Representative Rankin (Republican), of Montana. This was denied at Miss Rankin's office. Doorkeepers said Miss Russell had tried for the last two days to gain admission to that part of the gallery.

New York dispatches said the woman no longer lived at 206 West Ninety-second Street, the address she gave police here.

President Isaiah Bowman of Johns Hopkins University will preside at the morning session. Seven sectional meetings will be held at the afternoon conference which opens at 2 p. m. John D. was adopted to avoid groundswells and other bad landing conditions sometimes prevalent at the Azores. The plane's earliest possible arrival in New York would be Saturday, Pan American said, but it probably will not reach its destination until Sunday.

The Daily Herald told of the plans to "bomb" Germany with leaflets bearing the Willkie message and added:

"Already printed copies of it are on their way to the German people through a multitude of underground channels."

Willkie's message to the German people climaxed a 10-day tour of England in which he talked to Britons of all classes—from dwellers in battered slums to Prime Minister Churchill and the King and Queen—and left with them the promise to do all he could "to help Britain in her fight for freedom."

Proud of German Blood

"I am purely of German descent," the 1940 Republican Presidential contender said in his message. "My family name is not Willkie, but Willicke. My grandparents left Germany 90 years ago because they were protestants against autocracy and demanded the right to live as free men. I, too, claim that right.

"I am proud of my German blood. But I hate aggression and tyranny.

"Tell the German people that my convictions are shared to the full by the overwhelming majority of my fellow countrymen of German descent. They, too, believe in freedom and human rights."

Willkie left for Lisbon from the Bristol Airport this morning after a quick trip with Mayor T. H. J. Unleddown through the city's bombed sections.

"Pretty bad, pretty bad," Willkie commented as he passed wrecked buildings.

"Keep your chins up!" he exhorted the people.

Senate Seeks Walter-Logan Bill Substitute

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

A special Senate Judiciary subcommittee will open hearings next week in a new Congressional effort to improve procedure of Federal agencies through legislation acceptable both to the White House and the sponsors of the original Walter-Logan bill.

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, head of the subcommittee, yesterday told The Post he favored legislation along the lines of the majority report of the Attorney General's committee, "but including stronger provision for judicial review of the agencies' ruling."

The majority of the committee appointed in 1939 by Attorney General Murphy and headed by Dean Acheson, now Assistant Secretary of State, recommended creation of a new Federal office to review the practices of administrative agencies, appointment of "hearing commissioners" within each agency and a provision that no Government officials investigating or presenting cases should participate in deciding them.

Bills Introduced Jointly

Hatch and Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, have jointly introduced bills embodying the recommendations of both the majority and minority reports of the Attorney General's committee. This was done, Hatch said, "to get both reports out in front of us as a basis for discussion."

The minority report, signed by three of the committee's 12 members, proposed a statutory "code of ethics" for Federal administrative agencies and took issue with the majority report's assertion that adequate opportunities for judicial review of the bureaus' rulings now exist.

Hatch said his subcommittee would call as witnesses Attorney General Jackson, members of the Acheson committee and spokesmen for the American Bar Association and other groups which advocated the Walter-Logan bill.

Hatch Outlines Objective

"We are going to work hard to get out a bill that Congress will pass and the President will approve," Hatch said. "We're trying to produce legislation, not just keep an argument going." He recalled that Mr. Roosevelt told him in November he was "sympathetic to the objectives" of the Walter-Logan bill.

Hatch was one of the leading Senate backers of the Walter-Logan bill, which was approved by a 3-1 vote by the House last April, passed the Senate by a 27-25 vote in November and was vetoed by President Roosevelt. House proponents of the bill were unable to muster a two-thirds majority to override the President's veto.

Representative Walter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, cosponsor of the original bill, said yesterday he plans to draft legislation "working in ideas from the old bill and both the majority and minority reports."

Assurances Lacking

The Acheson committee majority report gives no assurance that citizens dealing with administrative agencies will get "a fair hearing before impartial judges," he said. "The greatest need is to have somebody a complaint can be made to, aside from the superior of the person complained about."

Walter said hearings before his subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee might begin before the Senate subcommittee had completed its hearings. He expressed confidence that the House would approve a "model bill" drawing on proposals in the Walter-Logan bill and majority and minority reports of the Acheson committee.

Members of Walter's subcommittee are Representatives Bryson (Democrat), of South Carolina; Thom (Democrat), of Ohio; Gwynne (Republican), of Ohio, and Vreeland (Republican), of New Jersey.

The Senate subcommittee on administrative procedure includes Hatch, O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming; Chandler (Democrat), of Kentucky; Austin (Republican), of Vermont, and Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut.

ACTRESS' DAMAGE SUIT IN DEADLOCK—A New York Supreme Court jury deliberated two hours yesterday and then was dismissed when it reported it could not reach a verdict in the $50,000 damage suit filed by Actress Erin O'Brien-Moore (shown) against John J. Arkansas and Michigan Clash On Reapportioning Mehods

The sovereign States of Michigan and Arkansas limbered up slide rules and calculating machines yesterday as battle lines formed for an internecine and mathematical war between the two over the method of reapportioning House seats.

As hostilities began, the Arkansas delegation stood four-square behind a bill authored by one of its members, Representative Gathings (Democrat) and reported to the House by its Census Committee yesterday. It proposes that seats be apportioned on the 1940 population figures in accordance with a new and intricate mathematical formula known as "equal proportions."

This system, favored by mathematical experts in the Census Bureau and learned societies would work out so that there would be no change from the present figures in the number of Representatives from each State.

Finds High Favor in Arkansas

It endears itself particularly to the Arkansas delegation because the alternate method, equally intricate, known as "major fractions," would cause Arkansas to lose one seat in the House.

This method, which will take effect automatically in a few weeks unless other legislation is adopted, has no little appeal to the Congressmen from Michigan, since Arkansas' loss would be the Wolverine State's gain.

To make everybody happy, the House Census Committee also reported a bill yesterday written by Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, which would reapportion by adding 15 seats to the House's present quota of 435.

The confused situation of Congressional districts has has been thrice confounded by the 1940 census, an analysis of which, released yesterday, shows that the largest district is 13 times as populous as the smallest.

Discrepancies Increased

Population changes in the last decade, the data showed, have increased the discrepancies which already existed, primarily in New York and Illinois. Neighboring districts in metropolitan New York range from a low of 70,307 inhabitants to 911,210. Theoretically, all districts are supposed to be equal in population. The Nation's average for 435 House seats was 301,164, as of the date of the 1940 census.

Representative Dickstein (Democrat), of New York, has the dubious honor of representing the smallest district, which dropped to its present figure from 90,671 in 1930. Largest district in the Nation is that of Representative Schuetz (Democrat), of Illinois, who has 914,053 constituents in Chicago and Cook County.

Redistricting is left to the individual States.

Citizens Propose 10 P. M. Curfew For Liuquor Stores

Closing of District liquor stores at 10 p. m. on week nights and midnight on Saturdays was asked last night by the Friendship Citizens Association members, who denounced the proposal to advance the Saturday night curfew from midnight to 2 a. m.

The citizens also opposed any increase in local taxes "until such time when the District residents are represented in the body levying taxes."

They went on record against any increase in gasoline taxes, proposed by the House Traffic Subcommittee to finance traffic safety measures for the city. And they backed the proposed crosstown bus, P. U. C. hearings on which will be held next Tuesday.

New members admitted at last night's meeting were Mrs. Clara C. Brown and Miss Mary Brown, of 3901 Albemarle Street Northwest. Martin A. Cook presided in the absence of President S. J. Flickinger.

Draft Appeals Board Decisions To Be Publicized

Plans to publicize decisions of the District Selective Service Appeals Board to aid in producing greater uniformity in the decisions of local boards on deferment cases were being drawn last night.

This action followed a conference yesterday between high Selective Service officials here and representatives of the District C. I. O. Industrial Union Council.

The council representatives, led by Roy Patterson, were told by Spencer Gordon, chairman of the Registrants Advisory Board, that a month ago one-third of the local boards were too stringent in dependency cases, in his opinion.

William E. Leahy, chairman of the appeals board, revealed that greater uniformity has been produced since then by action of the appeals board in reversing local board decisions. He said that about 30 per cent of the cases coming to the board have been reversed.

Two Defense Strikes End, Another Starts

By the Associated Press

Strikes were settled in Bridgeville, Pa., and Detroit yesterday, another was called at a La Crosse, Wis., rubber plant, and negotiations between strikers and employers in Milwaukee and Chicago remained deadlocked.

C. I. O. workers at the Universal Cyclops Corporation, of Bridgeville, voted to return to work pending an attempt to settle differences during a 15-day truce. The plant, which makes tool steel and speciality steel, has $4,000,000 of defense orders and employs 1,400.

The Detroit strike, involving two plants which manufacture copper tubing for military planes and trucks, ended the day after it began. The firms—the Flex-o-Tube Co. and the R. H. Jolly Co.—agreed to negotiate contracts with the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers.

Officials of the C. I. O. United Rubber Workers said 800 men had left their jobs at the La Crosse Rubber Mills. They complained that the company had violated seniority rules.

The Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing Co. at Michigan City, newly reopened after a 12-day strike, stopped production again when men on two assembly tracks refused to return. An A. F. L. spokesman said the company declined to consider demands of a grievance committee.

At the Allis-Chalmers Co. in Milwaukee, strike-bound for two weeks, 16 men failed to report to carry out an assignment to prepare national defense supplies for shipment. H. W. Story, company vice president, said he had been informed that they were stopped by lookouts of the striking C. I. O.-U. A. W. Eight men reported for such work, however. The strike of 7,000 employes has stopped work on $40,000,000 of defense orders.

Some 6,500 tractor workers of the International Harvester Co. remained away from their jobs in Chicago pending further conferences between their representatives and company officials. There was no indication that a quick settlement was in sight.

Between 1,400 and 1,700 striking members of the A. F. of L. electrical workers union were told by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt in Brooklyn that she was grateful that they had "stood together to gain things that will make life better for your groups as a whole." The workers, mostly women, struck against the Leviton Manufacturing Co. six months ago, demanding higher wages.

Detroit, Feb. 5 (AP).—The United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.), holding out the threat of a strike, today forwarded to the Ford Motor Co. a series of demands which include an immediate collective bargaining conference and a minimum hourly wage increase of 10 cents for all production employes.

J. G. Townsend Backed for Martin's Post

Former Senator John G. Townsend, of Delaware, last night was reported to have important backing for election as chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Townsend meanwhile was expected to be reappointed chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee.

He headed the Senatorial committee in the last two campaigns, gaining Senate Republican seats in both, but losing his own Senate chair in November.

The Delaware Republican, who remained on good terms with all party factions in the last campaign, will be proposed as a compromise for the national chairmanship if the resignation of Chairman Joseph W. Martin, jr., is accepted on March 24.

Wants to Step Down

Martin, who wants to step down to give his full time to his House minority leadership duties, has called a meeting of the committee on that date to hand in his resignation.

An effort will be made to persuade Martin to remain, and if this fails the committee will proceed to select a successor.

Townsend was not on a list of ten possible candidates recently mentioned by Martin. That list included, among others, close friends and some former managers of most of the Republican Presidential possibilities in the last campaign.

"Neutral" Sought

One view expressed here is that neither Wendell Willkie, New York District Attorney Dewey, Senator Taft, of Ohio, or any other prominent figure in the last G. O. P. Presidential preliminaries would wish one identified with their own campaigns placed in the office.

On the "all should have an equal foothold" theory, the committee was expected to choose a neutral candidate, friendly to all factions but committed to none. It is in this connection that Townsend's name was being mentioned.

Party leaders are urging that the committee fill the post only on a temporary basis at the March meeting, postponing until some later date the selection of a permanent chairman to chart the lines of the 1944 campaign

Sen. Reed Must Stay At Home for 2 Weeks

Senator Clyde M. Reed (Republican), of Kansas, has been ordered by his physician to remain in his apartment for two weeks, it was learned yesterday. The Senator was released Tuesday from Walter Reed Hospital where he was treated for an ear ailment.

Meanwhile, Representative Mary Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, was expected to return to her office today after a day's absence because of illness. Representative Norton fainted at the White House Congressional reception Tuesday night.

Mentioned to Head G. O. P. Committee

JOHN G. TOWNSEND, former Delaware Senator, is reported to have important backing for election as chairman of the Republican National Committee. The resignation of National Chairman Joseph W. Martin, jr., is expected March 24

Ford Plant At Alexandria Gets U.S. Order

The Ford Motor Co.'s Alexandria, Va., branch will receive a new $312,600 order for motor vehicles, the War Department disclosed yesterday, less than a week after denying Ford a $10,000,000 order because the company rejected labor stipulations in the specifications for bids.

The War Department explained that the new order represented exercise of a 90-day option to increase a contract for light cars awarded last November 21. Ford received a $2,012,700 Army contract in November.

A final decision on whether Henry Ford's views on labor policy will disqualify him from contracts was yet to be made, but meanwhile War Department officials apparently rebuffed a suggestion by Ford that his plants turn out complete bombing planes on a mile-long assembly line.

Officers said they were still sticking to a plan for Ford to make bomber parts which would be assembled by aircraft companies elsewhere.

This disclosure followed a trip by two Air Corps officials to Detroit last Saturday to complete arrangements for the manufacture in Ford plants of parts and subassemblies to be used in the manufacture of bombers at a new plant to be operated by the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, at Forth Worth, Tex., and another new plant to be operated by the Douglas Aircraft Corporation, at Tulsa, Okla.

Though Ford representatives made a counteroffer to produce entire bombers, along the banks of the River Rouge, the War Department delegation returned here and submitted recommendations to higher authorities ignoring this counterproposal.

The officers who made the trip were Gen. Oliver P. Echols, chief of the material division of the Air Corps, and Gen. George H. Brett, chief of the Air Corps.

Their recommendations were not disclosed, but it was generally assumed in the light of subsequent War Department statements that the officers had decided against the counterproposal.

Ford showed the officers a scale model of a mile-long assembly plant he proposed to build.

Knox Tells Of Air Attack On Illustrious

Secretary Knox said yesterday that the British aircraft carrier Illustrious, surviving a direct hit by a 1,000-pound bomb during heavy Axis air attacks, had arrived in Alexandria, Egypt, from Malta, under her own power.

During a discussion of air power vs. sea power, at his press conference, the Navy chief disclosed that about 80 men were killed and 20 British bombing planes destroyed during the 7-hour attack launched by German and Italian dive-bombers and torpedo-planes January 10.

"Despite the all-out blow of a 1,000-pound bomb landing squarely on her deck," he declared, "the ship managed to get into port at Malta and then went on to Alexandria. The heavy assault didn't even affect its maneuverability."

Knox noted that an aircraft carrier is much less heavily armored than a battleship, and in addition disclosed that the Illustrious was nearly stripped of its complement of defense fighter planes when the attack occurred. For a reason not revealed the ship was "stocked" with bombing planes at the time, he said.

His statement was the first revelation that the Illustrious had left Malta, where it was the object of renewed attacks by Axis bombers.

Press Indorses Secrecy Proposal

Secretary Knox said yesterday that he had received the practically unanimous indorsement from the press of the Nation to a proposal that it voluntarily withhold from publication defense information which might aid "unfriendly powers."

Following a meeting with representatives of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, Knox said the body and affiliated groups had promised fullest cooperation in withholding from publication data about the Navy that is not officially released.

He disclosed that he had written to all publishers and other agencies disseminating news, asking that they not publish information regarding the movements of naval vessels, planes or bodies of troops or other personnel, new ships, planes, bases or "secret" equipment, unless such data is released for publication by the Navy Department.

"My request brought forth almost complete assurance of cooperation," he stated. "Only two or three thought it amounted to censorship, which is the last thing I would propose.

"What we want to do is stop the publication of such information that might be embarrassing to the Navy or might aid unfriendly powers."

It's 'Franklin' And 'Winston' Now, Paper Says

London (Thursday), Feb. 6 (AP).—The Daily Mail said today that Prime Minister Winston Churchill and President Roosevelt had become "Winston" and "Franklin" to each other in transatlantic telephone conversations since the arrival here of Harry L. Hopkins.

Soon after he arrived, the Mail said, Hopkins telephoned the President from 10 Downing Street, the Prime Minister's residence, and after some conversation said: "I'm sitting here with Winston. Would you like to have a word with him?"

"They've been Franklin and Winston ever since," the newspaper added.

Ominous Hand of Fabled Curse Seen in Lord Lambton's Suicide

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 5.—A legendary story of a titled family's "curse" dating back to the twelfth century crusades—the curse of the Lambton worm—was revived today by the shotgun death of the 20-year-old Lord Lambton.

The body of the young nobleman, the son and heir of the fifth Earl of Durham, was found yesterday slumped over a fountain on the front lawn of his country estate near Woolder, Northumberland.

A coroner gave a verdict that Lambton died of a "self-inflicted" wound while of "unsound mind."

One shell had been fired from a double-barreled shotgun which was found near the body. The youth was clothed as if for an early-morning hunt. He recently had been registered for military service.

The origin, circumstances and history of the ancient "curse" are vague, and accounts fail to show how frequently the family suffered tragedy from the twelfth century to modern times, but several members have met untimely deaths in recent years.

The legend says that one of the earliest Lambtons slew a worm so huge that it could wind itself around a hill near the family castle. The price of his victory was a pledge that he should kill the next living creature he met. He saw his father next—and did not kill him. For this, the Lords Lambton for nine generations were "doomed" to suffer.

Gervasse Lambton, the 25-year-old cousin of the present earl, disappeared from a Red Sea liner in 1937.

Another cousin was killed and his wife seriously injured in a traffic collision in England a year later.

Beatrix, wife of the fourth earl, fell while shopping for a granddaughter's wedding present in 1937 and died a week later—on the wedding day. Eight years earlier her husband had died four months after succeeding to the title.

White House Press Corps Is 'Mugged,' Fingerprinted

Washington correspondents learned what it means to be 'mugged" and fingerprinted yesterday as they lined up in the White House billiard room to comply with Secret Service identification orders.

All members of the White House Correspondents Association and the Congressional press galleries who regularly attend the White House press conferences were notified to have their fingers smudged and their pictures taken yesterday or today.

The move is one of a series of steps being taken under the defense program to check persons entering and leaving public buildings. Guards recently have been doubled in Capitol subways, where reporters are required to sign and show their gallery cards when using the passages after regular sessions.

House Rules Unit May Act Tomorrow On Funds for Dies

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, told the House yesterday that the Rules Committee probably would act tomorrow on a resolution to continue the Dies Committee on un-American activities for 15 months and supply it with an appropriation of $150,000.

Later, Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, said in a House speech that fifth-column activity "has been served by the inexcusable delay" in providing the Dies Committee with "sufficient funds" to continue its investigation of un-American activities. The authority and funds were exhausted a month ago.

Thomas, a committee member, referred to the forthcoming session of the American Youth Congress here and declared the organization was "under the complete domination of Stalin's agents."

Roosevelt Will Guide Lagging Housing Plans

letters to the heads of all agencies concerned.

In them, he has called for an immediate report on building activities. He also has ordered the agencies to send him weekly reports. Besides this, Defense Housing Coordinator C. ". Palmer is under instructions from the President to report to him weekly on agencies that are lagging, or are not cooperating.

Each of the department heads was informed of the President's order to Palmer, and the final paragraph of the President's letter ordered housing chiefs to pass his letter around to subordinates.

May Be Aimed at Chief

Officials in some of the agencies believe the President's orders were aimed at Palmer rather than at individual agencies. It is no secret that the appointment of Palmer as defense housing coordinator in the office of emergency management caused a storm of protest. But the President's personal supervision of the defense housing program and his orders to Palmer are understood to have "appeased" the critics.

Meantime, Palmer yesterday announced that Congress would be asked to enact three measures designed to speed the construction of defense homes. Thy are:

1. An amendment to the Federal Housing Act which would set up a separate defense housing insurance fund of $10,000,000 to be used to underwrite $100,000,000 in private construction mortgages.

2. A request for a $150,000,000 appropriation. These funds would be controlled by the President.

3. An appropriation of $6,750,000 to provide temporary shelter, trailers or mobile units, in areas where the acuteness of the need will not wait upon ordinary construction procedure.

The FHA amendment would permit defense homes to be sold to defense workers with no down payment, or they could be offered for rent at reasonable prices.

Has Completed Few

Funds have been appropriated for 68,458 dwelling units, but to date only 1,314 have been completed. Under construction are 34,791 units. FHA, through private funds, is building additional homes.

Congress on September 9, 1940, appropriated $100,000,000 for Army and Navy defense homes. The Navy has most of its $50,000,000 allocated and 16,915 dwelling units well along toward completion. The Army kept only $5,000,000 and turned $45,000,000 over to Public Buildings Administration.

On October 14, Congress appropriated $150,000,000 for defense housing. The funds have been allocated between PBA, U. S. Housing Authority and Farm Security Administration.

All of the $250,000,000 has been allocated, but contracts for some of the homes haven't been drawn and signed. The number of dwelling units allocated to each housing agency follows; PBA, 17,377; USHA, 6,635; Navy, 17,035; Army, 825; Farm Security, 200; and Defense Homes (RFC), 2,044.

Since Palmer has been made Defense Housing Coordinator, his spokesman said, more than 17,000 dwelling units have been projected. Palmer first was appointed housing coordinator for the National Defense Commission, a job that didn't carry any authority. Officials in Palmer's office admit now that the original appointment confused everyone, including Palmer, which led to misunderstandings all around.

Sympathies Questioned

Palmer's critics say he is unsympathetic with public housing, a complaint that has been taken direct to the President. As evidence, his critics are known to have produced a speech which Palmer made last fall in Philadelphia which apparently confused his standing in the matter. Moreover, a Palmer consultant, Philip Norton, last week made a speech in Los Angeles in which he was quoted as saying that "there's no need for more Government housing."

Palmer will make a speech himself in Los Angeles on Friday at which time it is said he will make plain his views on public housing. Palmer was chairman of the Atlanta Housing Authority, which is credited with being one the best in the country.

aircraft factory at Philadelphia—only Government-operated plane plant in the country.

By July, each of the 13 existing Naval Reserve aviation bases—one of which is here—will be equipped to give elimination training to 100 students monthly. With three more now building, a total of 1,200 embryo pilots can be sent to the three air training bases every 30 days.

The Stearman division of Boeing Aircraft Co., at Wichita, set a record for the defense program in turning out an average of 12 training planes a day during the last two weeks January.

In this connection, it was recalled that a Stearman official told the House Naval Committee on January 14 that the wings and fuselages for 110 planes were stacked at the plant, delivery delays of a few small parts holding up their completion.

British Reject Appeal of Former U. S. Embassy Aide

London, Feb. 5 (INS).—Tyler Kent, former American Embassy clerk held on espionage charges, was still in custody tonight after a British court of appeals turned down his appeal after a two-day secret hearing.

Kent acted as his own counsel in seeking dismissal of the charges. He was dismissed from his embassy post following Scotland Yard disclosures that he was using the American diplomatic pouch to send messages out of England.

Kent's home is in Washington, where his mother, Mrs. Annie Hendren Patrick Kent, lives. He attended St. Alban's Shool and George Washington University before entering the diplomatic service.

A. M. A. Conspired to Destroy G. H. A., Federal Attorneys Charged as Trial Opens Here

ing of the Sherman Act. His decision subsequently was reversed by the Appellate Court.

Adjourning court at 4:25 p. m. until 10 a. m. today, Justice Proctor delivered a 15-minute lecture to the jury in which he informed the 12 members and 2 alternates they would not be confined and impressed upon them the gravity of discussing or reading about the case.

In his 67-minute opening statement, only partly delivered when adjournment time came and which will be resumed this morning, Lewin accused the 20 doctors not only of conspiring against GHA, a Federal workers' medical care cooperative, but of bringing 12 Washington hospitals into the alleged conspiracy.

The accused medical leaders are Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the A. M. A. Journal; Dr. Olin West, secretary and general manager of the association, which has 109,000 members; Dr. William C. Woodward, retired director of its Bureau of Legal Medicine and Legislation; Dr. William Dick Cutter, secretary of the A. M. A. Council on Medical Education and Hospitals, and Dr. Roscoe G. Leland, director of the Bureau of Medical Economics.

All of the above are from Chicago, headquarters of the association. The 15 Washington defendants, all members of the District Medical Society, are as follows:

Dr. Thomas E. Neill, president of the local society during the alleged boycott and coercion of GHA; Dr. William M. Sprigg, who was chairman of the executive committee; Dr. Edward Hiram Reede, vice chairman; Dr. Coursen B. Conklin, secretary; Dr. John Ogle Warfield, jr., chairman of the hospital committee; Dr. Robert Arthur Hooe, chairman of the disciplinary committee, and Dr. Arthur C. Christie, Dr. James B. G. Custis, Dr. Leon Alphonse Martel, Dr. Thomas E. Mattingly, Dr. Francis X. McGovern, Dr. William Joseph Stanton, Dr. Prentiss Willson, Dr. Wallace M. Yater and Dr. Joseph Rogers Young.

These men, said the 41-year-old Lewin, a special assistant to the Attorney General, strove determinedly to block organization of Group Health Association in 1937 and then, when its clinic was opened in November of that year, to obstruct and handicap its practice.

Emphasizing that the newly organized cooperative, founded with the financial support of a $40,000 "loan" from the Home Owners Loan Corporation, did all in its power to enlist the aid and cooperation of the local medical society, Lewin said Dr. Neill was even offered the post of surgeon on its staff.

This gesture was a dismal failure and the society deliberately set out to "crush and destroy" GHA, Lewin charged, by:

(1) Preventing any of its more than 800 members from accepting jobs on the new clinic's staff or consulting with GHA physicians.

(2) Obstructing the association's attempts to staff its clinic with non-members of the society.

(3) Attacking those men who joined the clinic staff in order to hasten their resignations or bring them into professional disrepute.

(4) Inducing all of the local private hospitals to join in the boycott by refusing courtesy privileges to GHA practitioners.

Lewin, who, with Grant W. Kelleher, is carrying the Government's case under supervision of Thurman Arnold, head of the Department of Justice trust division, gave two illustrations of the alleged boycott.

One, a heart specialist called in as a consultant in the illnesses of two GHA members, was instructed by Dr. Neill, as president of the medical society, not to deal face-to-face with the patients' doctor. This, said Lewin, occurred in the spring of 1938.

Tells of Alleged Haggling

Second, the case of a GHA laboratory technician, dangerously ill and in need of an immediate operation, who was sent to Garfield Hospital and turned over to a surgeon affiliated with the medical society.

"This surgeon," said the prosecutor, "permitted the patient to remain a long time without attention, her life in danger, while he haggled with the Group Health doctor over whether he would be permitted by the society to take the case.

"He agreed to perform the operation only after he was assured by the GHA doctor that he was entering the patient in the hospital as his own private patient and not as a member of GHA."

Victims of the "conspiracy," Lewin declared, were Group Health Association itself, the doctors "who claimed the right to pursue their callings unhampered by the defendants," the physicians who were intimidated against joining the GHA staff or serving as consultants and the 12 private hospitals willing to admit GHA physicians and patients, but talked out of doing so by the Medical Society.

He stressed the point that the co-operative, which is situated in the 1300 block of I Street Northwest, is not a Governmental agency, but an independent, private corporation.

"Although organized by employes of the Government, it was not sponsored by the Government," he said. "It had its merits and, since nothing is perfect, it may have had its imperfections.

"Nevertheless, whatever shortcomings it may have had it was entitled to protection of the law. And it is not sponsored by the Government in this case except that the Government considers itself under the same duty to prosecute those who commit unlawful restraints upon it as when such restraints are imposed upon any other business activity."

The jury for the trial, first of its kind ever to be conducted in the United States, was sworn in at 12:50 a. m. after nearly three hours of questioning. Its two women members are Mrs. Edna Hayes O'Neil, 51, 1330 Otis Place Northwest, a housewife, and Mrs. Madelyn M. McDowell, 44, 727 Irving Street Northwest, colored, a milliner.

The other jurors are Reuben Acton, jr., 33, 1310 North Carolina Avenue Northeast, salesman; Edwin H. Ayers, 46, 6213 Thirtieth Street Northwest, gas dealer; Jesse Ellis Porter, 45, 6688 Thirty-second Place Northwest, engineer; Columbus Facchina, 28, 1215 Quincy Street Northwest, businessman; Joseph F. Taylor, sr., 38, 2711 Twelfth Street Northeast, floor manager.

Remaining jurors are Washington W. Horad, 45, 540 Twenty-fourth Street Northeast, postman; Egbert H. Irwin, 39, 3808 Benton Street Northwest, salesman; Otho T. M. King, 31, 1210 Orren Street Northeast, salesman; Eugene B. Magruder, 41, 3500 Fourteenth Street Northwest, foreman, and Charles A. Marggraf, 32, 222 Kentucky Avenue Southeast, salesman.

Selected as alternates were Lloyd F. Hadaway, 26, 217 Twelfth Street Northeast, an assistant theater manager, and Frank E. McCrink, 41, 729 Tuckerman Street Northwest, an electrician.

Each side exhausted its three peremptory challenges in selection of the jury. In the seating of the alternates, the defense used the two peremptory challenges to which it was entitled and the prosecution did not employ its one.

Early in the opening day of the trial, Justice Proctor informed the defendants that they would be permitted to leave the courtroom to attend patients. (The case is expected to consume at least six weeks.)

However, this privilege does not apply—at least not so broadly—to Dr. Fishbein and the other four non-practicing A. M. A. officials from Chicago who might wish to be excused for conferences or other work incidental to participation of American doctors in the national defense program.

Among courtroom spectators yesterday were Dr. Daniel L. Borden, incumbent president of the District Medical Society, and Edward M. Curran, United States Attorney.

10 Die as Fire Sweeps Room In Quilt Plant

By the United Press

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 5.—Fire which swept rapidly through loose cotton on the third floor of the New Haven Quilt & Pad Co. today killed ten men trapped by walls of flame across the exits.

The plant was working on defense orders totaling $2,000,000.

Fire and smoke were so intense that other workers were driven from the building after a futile attempt to halt the blaze.

"We stood outside for about 20 minutes before we realized that some of the men were still in the building," Foreman Isadore Donner said.

All the men were working in one department. A spark from a carding machine, used to fluff cotton, ignited a pile of loose cotton. Nearby bales went up quickly.

"Right after the cotton caught fire flame shot across the doorway," Donner related. He said he and ten other workers fought the fire with hand extinguishers until they were forced to run for their lives.

"Through it all," he said, "we didn't hear any screams or noise to indicate that some of the men had been trapped or overcome."

Three men jumped from a third story window to the plant's rear yard and were injured seriously.

About 80 persons were in the building when the fire started. The company employs about 300 in three shifts. Since summer the company has been making blankets and comforts for the Army.

The fire was confined to the department in which it broke out.

Separate investigations were begun by police, the fire department and the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The F. B. I. inquiry, it was explained, was routine, in view of the company's engagement on Government work.

District Guard Troops Arrive At Ft. Meade

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Fort Meade, Md., Feb. 5.—The first 250 District Guardsmen to begin this year of field training settled down here tonight, some in their own quarters, some in barracks borrowed because their own were not ready.

The Twenty-ninth Division Special Troops, who arrived this morning, were transferred to barracks in the area assigned to the 104th Quartermaster Regiment, when they found carpenters still busy on their own quarters. The District Battalion of the Quartermaster Regiment, arriving this afternoon, moved into their camp at once.

Arrival of the District Quartermaster outfit almost completed the first full regiment in camp. With the exception of parts of two Richmond, Va., companies, the 104th with its motor transport is here.

1,000 Expected by Thursday

Orders issued today will bring the number of District troops at Meade to 1,000 or 1,100 men by Thursday. Elements of the 104th Medical Regiment, of Maryland and Virginia, began arriving late today and all elements of the regiment are expected tomorrow and Friday. The organization is commanded by Col. Dwight H. Mohr, of Baltimore.

Headquarters of the division's three brigades also are scheduled to reach Meade in the next two days. These are the Fifty-eighth Infantry Brigade, of Maryland, commanded by Brig. Gen. Amos W. W. Woodcock and comprising the 115th and 175th Infantry; the Eighty-eighth Brigade, of Virginia, commanded by Brig. Gen. George M. Alexander, and comprising the 116th and 176th Infantry, and the Fifty-fourth Artillery Brigade, commanded by Brig. Gen. William H. Sands and comprising the 110th Field Artillery of Maryland; 111th Field Artillery of Virginia, and the 176 Field Artillery of Pennsylvania.

Next District troops to be sent to Meade, it was expected today, will be the 121st Engineers. Col. John W. Oehmann, regimental commander, said he expected his outfit would leave Washington Saturday or Sunday. The 104th Ordnance Company, commanded by Capt. Melvin H. Harris, is expected to be ordered here early next week.

Col. Conquest Goes to Richmond

Lieut. Col. Edwin P. Conquest, of Richmond, division intelligence officer, was unexpectedly ordered to Richmond yesterday to become acting executive officer of the 176th Infantry. Col. J. Fulmer Bright, former mayor of Richmond, was disqualified on physical examination.

While it could not be officially confirmed that Col. Conquest would be the next commander of the regiment, his appointment would place him directly in line for the post should Col. Bright's appeal from the medical board's finding fail. He was succeeded as division intelligence officer by Lieut. Col. George Henderson, of Cumberland, Md.

Lieut. Col. Churchill Gibson, of Richmond, division chaplain, also disqualified by the medical board, has been replaced by Lieut. Col. Fred C. Reynolds, Chaplain Corps, of Baltimore.

Delays in receiving and installing heating plants have accounted chiefly for the failure of Fort Meade to be ready for troops of the division promptly after induction into Federal service. Installation of these plants is being rushed, but it is not expected the entire division will be in camp before the end of February.

They're the Cream of Graduating Naval Class

Senior Middies Have Holiday, Rest Continue Routine Work

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 5.—A "N" dance for senior letter men and a hop for other first-class members offered the principal relaxation to midshipmen participating in graduation week activities at the United States Naval Academy tonight.

The brace of dances followed first-class honor awards and a 52-to-27 basketball victory by the Middies over the University of Maryland's quintet.

Only the members of the graduating class were at liberty during the day. Second, third and fourth classmen, who ordinarily have no classes during graduation week, attended drill and recitations as usual.

And only graduated letter men were permitted to attend the "N" dance. In previous years all Naval Academy athletes went to this event.

During the day Midshipman William M. Nicholson, of Pasadena, Calif., was named honor man of the graduating class.

Honors for second highest standing went to Midshipman Frank M. Sanger, jr., Wilmington, Del., and Midshipman Francis P. Cuccias, Woodhaven, N. Y., ranked third.

They and their 397 senior classmates are to be graduated Friday in the midyear exercises brought about by the national defense program and its need for increased Navy officer personnel.

It was announced that Midshipmen Sanger and Cuccias would receive commissions as ensigns in the Navy. Midshipman Nicholson's application for a commission in the line is pending, Academy officials announced.

Cargo Ship Bill Passed by House, Goes to President

The House completed Congressional action yesterday on an emergency bill carrying $313,500,000 for construction of 200 new cargo ships described by President Roosevelt as necessary to protect the United States against a world shortage of such vessels.

The measure now goes to the White House.

Final action on the bill came when the House accepted Senate amendments, including one which would give the Maritime Commission $65,000,000 additional contractual authority to carry on its regular shipbuilding program.

The new cargo ships would cost a total of $350,000,000, but $36,500,000 to start preliminary work on new facilities for construction of the vessels already has been made available from other sources.

Henderson Quits Priorities Board For Lack of Time

Leon Henderson, New Deal economist, submitted to President Roosevelt his resignation as a member of the Office of Production Management priorities board before departing recently on a Florida vacation, it was learned from a reliable source yesterday. It is expected that the resignation will be accepted.

Principal reason for the resignation, it was believed, is that Henderson feels the priorities job demands full-time attention which he is unable to give without neglecting his duties as national defense commission member in charge of price stabilization.

In addition, however, Henderson is known to hold opinions differing markedly in certain fields from his colleagues on the priorities board. He is said to feel that he can carry on his work better through direct relationship with the board chairman, E. R. Stettinius, jr., than as a member of the body.

Bishop Freeman To Lead Hospital Graduation Ritual

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will lead graduation exercises for the 1941 class of Grey Ladies for the Episcopal Hospital, at 11 a. m. Thursday in the hospital chapel.

Graduates include Mrs. Robert Studds, Mrs. John Calhoun, Miss Mary Ann Ferrandou, Mrs. George H. Clarke, Mrs. R. C. Alexander, Mrs. Lyle O'Rourke, Miss Suzanne Slingluff, Mrs. Merton English, Mrs. Isabelle Austen Badger and Mrs. Oswald Ryan.

Miss Mabel T. Boardman, chairman of volunteer special services for the District Red Cross Chapter, will greet the class, and Mrs. Albert N. Baggs, chairman of the central committee of the District Red Cross hospital and recreation corps, will read the pledge of the Grey Ladies. Deaconess A. E. MacDonald, superintendent of the hospital, will award certificates.

Speaker Calls Freedom of U. S. Women 'Enviable'

Women in Washington may not know it, but they're pretty lucky, according to Senorita Minerva Bernadino, vice chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women. Speaking last night at the first session of American University's graduate school lecture series on "The Status of Women in the World Today."

For one thing, women in Argentina and Columbia may not obtain a divorce under any circumstances, she said. Practically nowhere in South America can a woman enter the professions, she added. And in only six Latin American countries do women have "any semblance of a vote."

Her commission, the senorita said, is striving to get equal civic and political rights for women throughout the Americas so that they will be in the "enviable" position of women here.

Her talk was the first of 13 lectures to be given weekly at the downtown school, at 1901 F Street Northwest.

Dealer Taken Up on His Offer To Lease Machine Tools for $1

A Chicago second-hand machine tool dealer, has been taken up on an offer to lease his supply for $1 a year per machine to British and American defense industries, it was learned last night.

A spokesman of the Office of the Production Management said that the dealer, Louis E. Emerman, had come to Washington after complaints over prices he was charging the British purchasing commission, and after receipts of a telegram from O. P. M. Machine Tool Director Mason Britton asking him to cease all deliveries.

Emerman, whose firm is said to control almost 85 per cent of the prime used machine tools, offered, in order to prove his "patriotism," to lease all of his stock of some 3,000 machines at $1 a year until new machine tools could be obtained or until an equitable purchase price could be agreed upon, according to the spokesman.

Complains of "Red Tape"

Yesterday, from Chicago, Emerman complained that he had heard nothing since from the O. P. M., that "official red tape" was causing a bottleneck in defense production and that he was ready to turn over 373 machines to the British as soon as he had clearance.

The O. P. M. official, however, denied that Emerman had "heard nothing." He said that a draft contract for leasing of the machines at $1 each to the British had been drawn up and sent to Emerman within a few days after his trip here. Since then, he said, Emerman made a few modifications which the British were willing to accept, but has not yet delivered. He added that the O. P. M. will see to it that American manufacturers "jump at the chance" to acquire the rest of Emerman's stock at the $1 a year figure.

Flanders Named Administrator

Other machine tool developments yesterday:

Ralph E. Flanders, president of the Jones & Lawson Machine Co., Springfield, Vt., was appointed group administrator of the O. P. M. priorities division tools and equipment section.

The Commerce Department revealed that American exports of industrial machinery in 1940 reached an all-time high valuation of more than $450,000,000, 55 per cent above the 1939 figure. Machine tool shipments in December, it was added, had a total value of almost $25,000,000, of which Great Britain absorbed more than $19,500,000. Exports of machine tools to Russia were valued at $459,960, and consignments to Japan were $664,849.

Committee Begins Study of Camp For College Men

By the Associated Press

A House Appropriations Subcommittee began a quiet study yesterday of an "experimental" Civilian Conservation Corps camp for college graduates which was started recently in Vermont.

The subcommittee, headed by Representative Tarver (Democrat), of Georgia, questioned James J. McEntee, CCC director, about the project, known as Camp William James, which was opened near Sharon, Vt., early in January.

Some committee members criticized the project on the ground that it smacked of Germany's work camps.

House committee members said after yesterday's inquiry they believed the CCC was not in favor of the idea underlying the camp, which Aiken said had President Roosevelt's approval. But the committee decided to hold further hearings on the matter at a later date.

Verne Marshall Appears Before Jury

Verne Marshall, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, editor who is chairman of the No Foreign War Committee, made a belated appearance yesterday before the special District grand jury investigating suspected violations of the election laws.

Among other witnesses yesterday were Joseph N. Pew, jr., Pennsylvania Republican leader, and his brothers, J. Howard Pew, president, and J. Edgar Pew, vice president, of the Sun Oil Co.

Dr. Holmes Urges War On 5th Column

An appeal to the peoples of America to unite, even to form a "sixth column," if necessary, against forces threatening democracy was made yesterday by a speaker representing the National Christian Mission.

Dr. Harry N. Holmes, a New Yorker, who was born in Australia, made the appeal before nearly 100 members of the Rotary Club at a luncheon in the Willard Hotel.

"We live," Dr. Holmes stated, "in a crucial period of life. In the space of a single generation we are experiencing the greatest breakdown in civilization since the fall of Rome."

Continuing his theme of unity, Dr. Holmes declared that "our very objectives in the United States are based, somehow, on the faith that springs from the church." "Let us not," he said, "still the great voices that ask us to make the contributions that made this country great."

Dr. Holmes, who made his first appearance since returning from a Canadian speaking tour, is field secretary of the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches, founded by Andrew Carnegie.

Applause greeted him yesterday when he closed his address with the appeal for a united front against the "Fifth Column" and subversive forces in general. He will speak again today at a meeting of the Kiwanis Club in the Mayflower Hotel.

In his address yesterday, Dr. Holmes declared that the way of America is closely knit with the way of the church. "If churches were eliminated," he said, "our democracy would, in a few years, become so corrupt that it would not endure."

For 20 years the mission representative was associated with the Y. M. C. A. and was stationed several years in the Orient.

and provided we discover a more vital type of Christianity than we now have.

"We can thank the totalitarianisms of our day for one thing," he continued. "They have broken the mold of our individualistic thinking, and have made us think in terms of wholes. They have helped us discover how totalitarian our gospel is; it is more totalitarian than the totalitarianisms, for it goes from the innermost thought to the outermost rims of the social, national and international life and demands that all life come under a single sway—the will of God."

Dr. Jones was presented by Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor, Dr. John R. Edwards, pastor of Union Methodist Church, spoke briefly.

Overflow crowds also were reported at the other area mass meetings in various communities, and also at the programs in high schools, colleges, before service clubs and at other places. The Rev. John L. Mixon, general seminar chairman, said yesterday that attendance at the Calvary seminars had doubled since Monday.

In the again-filled World Relations seminar during the afternoon, Dr. Adolf Keller, Swiss churchman, declared:

"It is, I believe, easier in this country to lay a certain pressure of Christian public opinion upon Senators and Congressmen than it would be on the continent. You have a dynamic influence of opinion in this country that no European country has."

Earlier in the day, the lack of religion in the modern home was severely criticized by Dr. Jeffares McCombe, Scotch-Irish pastor of the Methodist Church of St. Andrew and St. Paul, New York, and chairman of the department of evangelism of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

"What use is a home?" he asked. "We get our education in public schools, our religion in the church. We die in a hospital and are buried from the mortician's parlor. In fact, science has so revolutionized the American home that it is useful merely as a postoffice address and a place in which to change our clothes for the next appointment."

Dr. McCombe spoke at the Women's Christian Life Forum at Metropolitan Presbyterian Church.

Meanwhile, the Right Rev. Thomas C. Darst, Episcopal Bishop of East Caroline, made a stirring plea for Christian unity in an address at a ministers' gathering at Calvary Baptist Church.

"Today the church is a broken, divided thing," he warned, "and until it comes back to unity with God and in God, it can never save a broken and divided world."

Nurses at Sibley Hospital wanted a mission program. So, tomorrow at 7:15 p. m., Mrs. Philip Lee, nurse to Fred Snite, of the iron lung, and Mr. Lee will sing and speak to the group.

Students at the National Park Junior College, Forest Glen, Md., were so impressed by Mission Evangelist Dr. George Heaton, that he's going back tonight to speak at dinner. Pastor of the First Baptist Church of Lynchburg, Va., he will lead a discussion afterward.

Four of the mission team leaders and one local mission worker were luncheon guests yesterday at the home of former Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, Methodist layman.

There is as great a need for spiritual defense today as material defense, Roper told the group, as he praised the mission's objectives. At the table were Dr. Jones, Dr. Jesse M. Bader, National Christian Mission director; Methodist Bishop Paul B. Kern, of Nashville; Dr. Adolf Keller, of Geneva, Switzerland; Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, and Mrs. Roper. The Ropers are members of Mount Vernon Church.

Meanwhile, a Post reporter, seeking to discover what the man in the street thinks about the objectives of the National Christian Mission, and the church in general, got this response:

Irving Thrift, middle-aged cab driver, while admitting that he hadn't "been in church for several years," said he thought the mission was a "wonderful thing for Washington."

"It should be on a larger scale, with more Gospel music," he added.

Mrs. Millie Kahanov, proprietor of a delicatessen at 1711 Seventeenth Street Northwest, said she had been reading about the mission's objectives, and its stress on the church's increased responsibility in social, economic and other problems.

"Church and synagogues," she said, "without neglecting their worship services, should make better provisions for their young people's recreational activities."

"If they did, our young people wouldn't go around to these dance halls," she declared.

The mission was called "the greatest thing that ever came to Washington" by John A. Patterson, sr., retired assistant superintendent of the binding department of the Government Printing Office.

Belgian Claim Ties Up French Funds in U. S.

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—A fight by the Belgian government in exile to get possession of about $260,000,000 in gold shipped to France for safekeeping in the Nazi invasion of Belgium was disclosed tonight through announcement of a court move to tie up French funds here as security for the treasure.

Georges Theunis, one-time prime minister of Belgium, now a representative in the United States of the exiled government at London, told the story of the struggle for the missing gold in announcing litigation over French funds frozen in this country since the fall of France.

He said State Supreme Court Justice Morris Eder late today authorized a writ to tie up the French funds. Theunis added he expected it to be served tomorrow.

Asserting the Belgian government at London had been informed the gold was being shipped by airplane from Africa to France for delivery to the German masters of Belgium, Theunis revealed a legal action to attach Bank of France funds at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York up to $260,000,000 in compensation for the metal sent to France last May.

It was the first important litigation involving huge foreign-owned assets frozen in this country since the Nazi conquest of the continent began.

Keech Shakes Up His Department

in three years the Police Court branch has had a chief prosecutor.

On another front in the District's war against traffic lawlessness, Representative William Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, chairman of a special House subcommittee on traffic, last night met for the second time within a week for round-table discussions with police, traffic and civic leaders.

The meeting was underway at 7:30 on Capitol Hill. Schulte is charged by the House District Committee with an investigation of local conditions with a view to recommending remedies.

The Police Court shake-up order followed disclosure of Quinter's action by The Post.

In a specific recommendation for speeding justice in major traffic cases, Keech suggested that the Police Court judges take over jury trials following their regular daily duty in the District and United States branches.

Calls Delays Unnecessary

"It is my opinion," said Keech, "that more than 2½ days a week should be allotted to the District for the trial of traffic jury cases.

"If it is possible," he continued, "the judges who sit in the District and United States branches of police court should be provided with an adequate number of jurors to hear such cases after the completion of their assignments in the two branches specified."

Keech contended long trial delays are unnecessary and hinder proper prosecution of flagrant traffic offenders.

"Acquittal of the guilty does not serve to deter reckless driving, driving while drunk and leaving after colliding," said Keech. "But timely convictions and adequate penalties will materially assist in any program looking to the making of the streets of Washington safe."

Keech instructed his Police Court staff that alteration, modification or dismissal of original charges is not to be considered unless death intervenes or material witnesses have left this jurisdiction.

Must Explain Nolle Prosse

In cases where a nolle prosse has been entered, Keech ordered that a full statement be sent him immediately—"setting forth facts justifying such action and clearly accounting for the change."

Under new procedures ordered by Keech, his assistants will make a thorough investigation of each case and secure written statements from all witnesses, it was announced.

He instructed that lack of interest on the part of complaining witnesses following the payment of damages should not be considered sufficient cause for reducing or quashing charges.

"The corporation counsel's office in Police Court is not a collection agency," said Keech. "The mere payment of damages has nothing to do with the prosecution of a case."

He added it was the duty of the prosecutors to "follow through" on a case and leave the defendant's conviction or acquittal up to a jury.

Keech also announced that consideration is being given to the legality of filing a new information to cover the original charge in the case Quinter nolle prossed.

"Looking to the ultimate desire of all worthy citizens," Keech declared, "the streets can be made safer by proper police enforcement, by diligent and proper prosecution, and by the administration of adequate penalties by the court upon conviction."

Driver Gets 45 Days To Think It Over

"From the facts that's the kind of driving that's killing people in this town. Forty-five days."

That's what Judge John P. McMahon said yesterday in traffic court as he sentenced Ossie J. Inscoe, 25, of Rollins Fork, Va.

Inscoe, who was convicted last month of reckless driving, was not given the alternative of paying a fine and being relieved of the jail term.

Scot, 9, Hopes 'I'll Like It Here,' Wants to Join British Navy

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Michael Storrie, 9-year-old Scot refugee, would like to join the British navy, but he's looking forward to living for a while on a Fairfax County farm and riding his own pony there.

Michael is here, guest of Mr. and Mrs. George C. McIntosh, of Clifton Station, Va., by right of his own poise and courage and the tentative leniency of the Justice Department. He left his school near London 16 days ago, but when he reached New York Monday his entry papers had been lost. Immigration officials allowed him to stay pending an appeal to the Attorney General, or recovery of the missing document with the necessary visa.

After a look at the McIntosh farm, Michael yesterday went with Mrs. McIntosh to visit her mother, Mrs. Lou Spencer, of 4441 Nineteenth Street North, Arlington, Va., and there told about himself and the journey that brought him to this country.

For the last five months he had been in a school at Bedford, about 15 miles from London, with neither his mother nor father near.

Although close to London, Michael said "we didn't have any bombs," and the children at school were able to play about as usual. He flew from England to Lisbon, and there for four days visited his father, James McIntosh, mining engineer. Later he saw his mother, Mrs. Kathleen McIntosh, for three and a half hours in Bermuda.

Michael said he misses England, even with the war, and misses his friends, and he wants to go back. The war, he said, "isn't on my mind," but he added that he is pretty sure England will win.

A sturdy lad, with big brown eyes set in a serious face, and light brown hair, Michael showed a knack of saying precisely what he thinks.

To a question of what he liked to do "besides study," he said quickly:

"I don't like studies."

He added later that history was an exception to this rule. He does like football, swimming, and just "playing about." He also likes dogs—he made friends with Mrs. Spencer's dog, part collie and part spitz, in no time.

Michael thought it was too early, after only 48 hours in this country, to say whether he would like it here, but he said, "I hope I'm going to like it." One thing he wanted was to have his picture taken so his father might see it.

To his new foster parents, Michael already rates as "swell." He endeared himself to McIntosh by wanting to help bring in the eggs on the farm.

Only trouble about this was that there are no chickens on the farm as yet, so Michael said he would find something else to do.

He made a hit with Mrs. McIntosh with the announcement that it would be his pleasure to light her cigarettes for her.

Both Mr. and Mrs. McIntosh are in the real estate business in Arlington. They were married last September, and planned at that time to take two young English brothers as refugees. Later they heard reports, still unverified, that both youngsters had died. They heard about Michael through the Soroptomist Club, in which Mrs. McIntosh is active.

McIntosh said he planned to see Justice Department officials today about Michael's appeal from the deportation order issued at Ellis Island, and he is also writing Michael's father to see what can be done there about getting another visa.

Judges Clash Over Uniform Penalties

that until this discrimination is removed that the public will not have the proper respect for traffic regulations.

All three judges concurred that a single Traffic Court judge, as previously proposed by Schulte, would be of little value because all major offenses go to jury trials.

Participating in the free-for-all inquiry were Senator Reynolds, chairman of the Senate District Committee, and Senator Burton, chairman of the Senate Traffic Subcommittee.

Judge Neilson, citing figures based on his last month's duty in traffic court, stated that speeding is a large contributing factor to accidents.

He outlined his own system of uniform fines ranging from $5 to $25, and said he saw no reason why the judges could not agree on a similar formula. Such a plan, he added, would create more respect for the law among motorists and the general public.

Known as a "Tough Judge"

Neilson, under questioning, said that he thought uniform penalties would be preferable to a single traffic court judge.

"You're known as a tough judge," commented Schulte. "Some others are not."

A few minutes later Judge McMahon, in explaining his reason for opposing Neilson's plan, said:

"I used to be regarded as a hard-boiled judge, but I see someone else has taken my place."

Casey attacked uniform penalties as a "well sounding catch phrase" but insisted that it would not result in equal justice. He cited a hypothetical case of a truck driver caught speeding in his private automobile. A $25 fine in his case, the judge said, would be much more serious than a similar fine to a man of means.

"What About Victims?"

"What about the persons that truck driver may kill?" interrupted Schulte. "If we go along on your theory of sympathizing with a poor man's family, we're going to have more than 79 deaths next year."

"That's a conclusion you have no justification for," Casey retorted. "Every case should have individual consideration."

Casey told the subcommittee that he noted frequently in the press that employes of embassies and legations are excused for traffic violations. He argued that their immunity is not absolute and that in many cases they are not entitled to it. Police can file complaints with the State Department, he said.

"What do the taxi drivers think of such immunity?" he asked. "Unless you cure disrespect for the law, you won't get anywhere."

He added that it is necessary to win the confidence of the average motorist "who has no contact on Capitol Hill or elsewhere" and who doesn't have a low license number.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, interjected that so far as diplomatic immunity is concerned some cases are reported to the Commissioners who in turn obtain apologies from the ambassadors or ministers.

"As for low auto tag numbers," he added, "they don't mean a thing to us. It's just another automobile. If No. 1 speeds, we'll go after just as fast as we would after No. 1,001."

"Who's got No. 1?" asked Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts.

"One of the Commissioners," replied Brown.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer recommended an increase in police assigned to traffic and motorcycle duty, more Police Court judges, more money for traffic lights, signs and engineers. He recommended a chemical test of drunken driving, off-street parking, more parking meters, and additional funds for traffic education.

Cites Figures on Deaths

Inspector Arthur E. Miller cited figures on traffic deaths and commented that they indicated that "we must do something to control speed."

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, said that recommendations based on a highway survey and an off-street parking survey will be ready in April.

Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech agreed to recommend that the Public Utilities Commission make an investigation to determine whether buses are occupying too much curb space.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights
Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.
When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Dr. Hazen Hits Social Disease Control in D. C.

Washington's program for control and prevention of venereal diseases was roundly criticized yesterday by Dr. H. H. Hazen, president of the District Social Hygiene Society.

His attack was coupled with a warning from Ray H. Everett, executive secretary of the society, that the health of soldiers stationed in nearby military camps is threatened by failure of local authorities to suppress solicitation by prostitutes.

Both spoke at a luncheon in the Y. W. C. A. at Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest, where the society marked "National Social Hygiene Day," which was observed by 5,000 other groups throughout the country. More than 200 social workers and civic leaders attended.

Miss Mary Craig McGeachy, representative of Ministry of Economic Warfare at the British Embassy, and Mrs. Florence Kerr, assistant commissioner, Work Projects Administration, also spoke, but on different subjects.

Dr. Hazen assailed lack of financial aid for an adequate fight against venereal diseases in the District. He said less than 7 cents per capita is expended for prevention purposes, while 75 cents per capita is spent for care of the syphilitic insane.

Budget Paring Attacked

"It would seem obvious," he said, "that we are too busy repapering the house to mend the leaky roof."

He said that proposed budgets for control work are pared down by the Commissioners.

Dr. Hazen recalled Mrs. Roosevelt's recent criticism of conditions at Freedmen's Hospital, where only small portions of new syphilis and tuberculosis wards are in use because of inadequate personnel.

"Congress," he said, "appropriates funds for new buildings, then fails to provide ways and means for sufficient operating personnel."

He also condemned the attitude of certain hospital superintendents, whom he said, "do not care to treat venereal diseases—at least until they have reached the distressing proportions of aneurysm or paresis."

Everett pointed out that although there is little "organized" prostitution in Washington, it has been found that there is "considerable solicitation on the streets—especially of men in military service."

"Program Must Be Total"

To a large extent, Everett declared, the courts have failed to cooperate in suppressing the practice, and convictions are far below the the number of arrests.

He said soldiers coming into Washington from nearby cantonments "must be protected."

"Our preparedness program must be total," he added.

In line with this, it was announced yesterday by Assistant Surgeon General R. A. Vonderlehr, of the United States Public Health Service, that more than 5,000 cases of syphillis already have been found among selective service candidates.

The society heard Miss McGeachy describe the part women are playing in Britain's defense program. She compared the services of American social hygiene workers now in England with the "Eagle Squadron" of U. S. fliers who are helping the R. A. F. drive off Nazi air attacks.

"Both are rendering services for which my country is deeply grateful," said Miss McGeachy.

Women in Britain are not merely replacing men who have been called to military service, she told the group, but are doing specialized jobs requiring skill and ability in various fields.

"For instance," she related, "if a woman is driving an ambulance or truck, she must know how to repair that ambulance or truck under all kinds of conditions."

The W. V. S.—Women's Volunteer Service—numbers between 800,000 and 1,000,000 members, Miss McGeachy declared. Some 2,000 of them are air raid wardens, she added.

"We can take it," smiled the blonde English woman, "and Britain's spirit will go on."

Mrs. Kerr described hunger, poverty, disease and ignorance as the four greatest dangers of democracy.

"We may think of national defense too narrowly in terms of armies and armaments," she said, "but there could be no more serious mistake than to suspend civilian defense work."

Marion Talley Says Husband Tried to Blackmail Her

Threatened Malicious Publicity Unless He Got $150,000, She Says

By Alexander Kahn
United Press Staff Writer

Hollywood, Feb. 5.—Marion Talley, of the opera and movies, tonight charged in Superior Court that her estranged husband, Adolph Ekstrom, attempted to blackmail her with threats of "malicious publicity" unless she gave him $150,000 and custody of their 5-year-old daughter, Susan.

(A Supreme Court Division in New York today denied dismissal of Eckstrom's suit for separation, charging Miss Talley with improper conduct with seven men and for custody of their child. Miss Talley failed simultaneously in an effort to have his suit made two actions.)

The former Kansas diva made the blackmail accusation in documents filed to amplify her charges of cruelty on which she seeks a divorce from Eckstrom, New York music instructor.

She said that in December, 1936, Eckstrom demanded $150,000 and custody of Susan, threatening that unless he received the money and the child he would lower her in the eyes of her friends and the public through "malicious publicity."

Miss Tally said she rejected the "blackmailing" demands and the custody case was adjucated in her favor in 1939, only to be followed by another attempt at alleged blackmail last October when she filed suit for divorce here.

The second time, she said, Eckstrom charged that if she did not comply with his demand for the child, he would file an action in New York for separation charging her with "acts of misconduct with seven men."

Miss Talley again turned down the demands for the child, the complaint said, and Eckstrom brought the charges in New York in which he accused her of being indiscreet with Edgar Bergen, radio ventriloquist; the late Rust Heinz, wealthy socialite; Eric Rhodes, actor; Arthur Rosenstein, movie music coach; Aubrey Scotto, movie director; Jean Sablon, French singer, and John S. Keith, New York attorney.

Miss Talley said when the last demand for the child was made an attorney showed her and Keith a copy of the complaint naming the seven men and said it would be destroyed if she would give up her daughter.

MARION TALLEY

Miss Talley said she turned down the proposal and said she intended keeping her daughter, allowing Eckstrom to have custody of the child only during the summer as decreed by the courts.

The Eckstroms separated May 20, 1935, Eckstrom remaining in New York and Miss Talley coming here for film engagements. At the time they parted, she said, Eckstrom informed her that he would not remain true to her during their separation.

The singer said that when she "ceased providing the defendant husband with money he commenced to become cruel, sarcastic and bitter in his letters."

Then, she said, from December, 1935, until July 18, 1935, Eckstrom concealed their daughter from her and it was not until afterward that she learned he was living in a four-room apartment with a housekeeper and "one Esther Lundell in a relationship not looked upon approvingly by the general public."

R. A. F. Bathes Nazi Bases In Flames

of Dusseldorf was damaged), Brest, Cherbourg, Dunkerque, Dieppe, Ostend and Vannes.

Watchers on the British southeast coast tonight saw columns of fire stretching up from Calais, Cap Gris Nez and Boulogne. Miles of low clouds, which served as protection for the British night raiders, were turned to crimson by the fires.

Thuds of explosions throughout the day and evening could be heard all the way across the Channel. Some of the blasts came from the vicinity of Cap Gris Nez, where the German Big Berthas which frequently shell the English coast are clustered.

Thousands stood atop the white chalk cliffs of Dover and cheered the high-flying British planes as they dashed to France and returned. In spite of German contentions that the Luftwaffe beat them off, the R. A. F. squadrons returned to their home bases in perfect formation.

No enemy opposition was discernible from the English coast, although air ministry announcements confirmed that a fight occurred over the Channel.

Describing the wide activities of the R. A. F. Tuesday night and Wednesday, in the biggest 24-hour sweep in many weeks, the air ministry said:

"Bombers Tuesday night attacked Dusseldorf, where fires broke out and a locomotive was set afire. High explosives hit two rail junctions.

"Other aircraft bombed the docks at Brest. A large red fire and heavy explosions were caused.

"Dock facilities at Dunkerque, Dieppe and Ostend received direct hits. Other targets successfully attacked included the airdromes at Vannes and St. Omer, the docks at Bordeaux, and Cherbourg, where docks and ship repair yards were straddled by bombs in two visits."

One of the most persistent raids was carried out on Brest, it was announced. At the height of the attack a giant fire broke out, apparently in an oil storage depot, followed by a blinding explosion in which flames leaped 200 feet into the air.

The raid on Duesseldorf lasted an hour and a half, during which some of the heaviest types of bombs were dropped on the industrial city. Many fires were started, the air ministry said, adding:

"Aircraft which were unsuccessful in locating Duesseldorf owing to bad weather proceeded to alternative targets in the neighborhood. One plane attacked an airport at an altitude of less than 1,000 feet and machine-gunned buildings, trucks and troops. Then it proceeded to a large factory, which was bombed and machine-gunned from a low level."

Queen Elizabeth Thanks U. S. For Gifts at Relief Exhibit

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

London, Feb. 5.—The English attitude to America for relief work was expressed by Queen Elizabeth today when she visited the English-Speaking Union's display of gifts received from the United States.

"I only want to say how delighted and touched I have been to see all these lovely things here today," the Queen said to members of the union and other relief agencies and to representatives of the United States Embassy. "I can only thank you from the bottom of my heart."

The Queen visited Dartmouth House, headquarters of the English-Speaking Union, attended by Lady Hyde. She was wearing a pink beige two-piece suit trimmed with nutria with a velvet bag and hat, gloves and shoes to match.

In one of the union's rooms representative samples of gifts received from all over the United States were on display. There were dolls from New York, shoes from Boston, sea boot stockings from Cincinnati, wool sweaters, gift bags and children's garments from other cities.

The Queen was particularly interested in some of the thousands of service woollies knitted by the union in the United States and a selection of beautifully executed children's clothing.

Her Majesty also saw a consignment of children's clothing, which had formed part of a show arranged by the English-Speaking Union in New York early last December to celebrate the completion of the union's first year of war relief work for Britain.

One of the items which took the Queen's eye particularly was a doll in a blue and white striped dress sent from New York. Another exhibit which attracted attention was letters from recipients of American gifts, which are being forwarded to the donors. One youth of eight recounted his recent adventure on being evacuated in these terms:

"I saw a concert and a wrecked Messerschmitt. A bomb fell on our house, but mummy found some knives."

The English-speaking union has received more than 65,000 garments, mostly handmade, for distribution among the British armed forces and civilians; special contributions for the crews of the former American destroyers; ambulances and mobile first aid posts and feeding posts; a complete surgical unit, Red Cross and hospital supplies and gifts of money.

The Queen was received by the acting chairman, the Honorable Mrs. Alfred Lyttleton, who explained the various activities of the union and showed her grateful letters from the Mayors of Coventry, Sheffield, Birmingham, Bristol and other bombed towns to which donations of money had been sent when these towns were blitzed.

Officers of the union here have been almost swamped with the primary work of distributing relief and have had little time to relay to the United States the gratitude of the recipients. One of them said today:

"We feel deeply grateful to the Queen for her visit today, which has borne testimony as nothing else could to the gratitude with which the people of England receive American help."

Italians Retreating At 30 Miles a Day

the damage wrought to many a Fascist base.

In Eritrea, British field forces pressed the Italians to the east from the region of Cheren—which is but 40 miles from the Eritrean capital of Asmara—and the fleeing Fascists were leaving all roads piled with the litter of abandoned war materials, British headquarters announced.

"Many hundreds" of additional prisoners were reported captured.

In Ethiopia, the British were declared going forward on two fronts—eastward on the Gondar Road on the main front, and to the south, where South African troops were reported consolidating Italian positions which had recently fallen to them.

In the Italian Somaliland, British patrols stormed and captured an Italian post 45 miles inside the Italian frontier, it was stated here officially, and were active in all other sectors.

All this activity afield—the broadest reported in weeks—did not overshadow the British offensive in the skies.

This was the summary of the royal air force:

All northern Libya assaulted by bombers; retreating Italian troop columns attacked on the roads; airdromes, railroad stations and tracks and lines of communication serving Bengasi hit heavily; "much damage" wrought to Fascist motor transports; four Italian planes destroyed.

Italian bases and landing grounds in Eritrea and Ethiopia attacked and 20 Fascist planes shot down, destroyed aground or captured; Italian motor transport vehicles set afire on the Gondar Road in Ethiopia; a complete motor convoy attacked in Eritrea on the Asmara-Cheren Highway.

In all this the loss of only two British planes—a bomber and a fighter—was acknowledged.

On still another aerial front, this one defensive, the R. A. F. reported shooting down three German bombers which sought to raid the British Mediterranean base of Malta and "severely" damaging others.

Petain Offers His Power to Darlan

him the post of foreign minister as well.

Laval would become vice premier—his old post—and minister of interior to give him direct control over the police and provincial prefects, but he would be responsible to Darlan, the "heir" of Petain.

Gen. Charles Huntziger, Petain's minister of war who signed the armistice agreement with Germany in Compiegne Forest, would retain his post and Paul Baudouin, one-time foreign minister, might be brought into the cabinet.

An inner cabinet would be formed around Darlan, Laval, Huntziger and Baudouin. Marcel Peyrouton, now minister of interior, might be salvaged in some capacity such as minister of colonies or empire affairs.

In addition to his demands for the premiership and the right to handpick a new cabinet and assembly, Laval had asked for full control over foreign affairs, propaganda and interior affairs.

Marshal Petain, however, rejected these sweeping demands as "impossible," it was said.

Whatever happens Pierre-Etienne Flandin, named foreign minister after the overthrow of Laval on December 14 and bitterly attacked by the Paris press despite his pro-German sympathies, will disappear from the government, it was stated.

It was admitted that if a breakdown comes in the negotiations Laval may immediately set up a second French government in Paris, based on the new Nazi-approved party of "national popular concentration" already set up there by Laval supporters in direct opposition to Petain.

Dive Bombing No Strain, Nazi Pilot Declares in Broadcast

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 5.—First Lieut. Eberhard Jacob, German pilot who dived on the British aircraft carrier Illustrious "almost to the masthead" in the epic naval-air battle last month in the Mediterranean, said tonight in a broadcast interview from Berlin arranged by the Columbia Broadcasting System, that his Stuka plane was three years old, and that dive-bombing at speeds past 400 miles per hour was "no particular strain."

Harry W. Flannery, C. B. S. Berlin correspondent, interviewed the 23-year-old veteran of campaigns in Poland, Norway, France, Belgium and Britain, who has been with the German pilots newly based in Italian Sicily to prey on British shipping.

C. B. S. said about 20 listeners in New York had objected to the broadcast by telephone on the ground that it was "discouraging" to Britain. Most of the criticism, it was said, was based on the young pilot's statement "I'm firmly convinced that the German Luftwaffe and U-boats will conquer Britain."

The pilot told this story:

"When we drew near these ships, (the Illustrious and two other warships escorting the British convoy January 10 near Malta), they tried to avoid an attack by constantly changing their course, while at the same time heavy fire from anti-aircraft guns of high caliber was opened on us.

". . . I could scarcely see the flashes from the guns aboard the airplane carrier that I had sealed orders for as my target.

"But once you start diving you don't care any more for gunfire. I dived a few seconds after the first plane and could clearly see the explosion of the bomb close to the bow of the carrier.

"I saw from where that bomb had fallen that the wind was a little stronger than had previously been estimated. I rectified my sights. I had the carrier which was just changing its course again well in my line of sight, and threw my bombs from the nearest possible height.

"In these attacks we dived almost to the level of the mastheads."

The British have admitted that 80 men were killed and 20 bombing planes destroyed in one direct hit by a 1,000-pound German bomb, but said the Illustrious reached port at Malta, under own power. Secretary Knox said today the Illustrious now had arrived at Alexandria, Egypt.

The German pilot said German Stuka dive-bombers were exceptionally accurate in attacking small tarkets, that his present craft had held up three years now, and that the terrific speeds in diving were "no particular strain on me."

When it was pointed out by the C. B. S. correspondent that German Stukas in the campaign in France were reportedly equipped with sirens in order to terrorize ground troops, Lieut. Jacob said:

"Our air squadron was not equipped with sirens. The pronounced noise was due purely to the high speed when diving."

Cuban Envoy Hands Credentials To Roosevelt

Dr. Aurelio F. Conchaso, Cuban Ambassador to the United States, yesterday presented his credentials to President Roosevelt.

He said he conveyed to Mr. Roosevelt "the earnest desire" of Cuban President Fulgencio Batista for cooperation with this country "in the defense of justice, democracy and the reign of law."

In a formal statement, Conchaso said it was "particularly gratifying" to him to state that Cuba's internal political difficulties during the past few days "have been happily solved for the good of our democratic institutions, safeguarded with singular success by President Batista."

Nazi Plane Crashes In Eire, 5 Killed

Dublin, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—A German plane crashed today in the vicinity of Schull, County Cork, killing five crewmen and seriously injuring a sixth, according to an official announcement. The plane was destroyed.

Schull is on the coast near the southwest tip of Eire.

Batista Spares Ex-Navy Chief

Havana, Feb. 5 (INS).—Spared from execution although he was the alleged master-mind in a plot to overthrow the government of President Fulgencio Batista, Col. Angel Gonzales, former head of the Cuban navy, asserted tonight that he is sailing for Miami, Fla., tomorrow night aboard the S. S. Florida.

Gonzales was detained for an extra day after his alleged confederates, Bernardo Garcia, ex-chief of police, and Jose Pedraza, former army chief of staff, were permitted to fly to Miami.

Tonight Batista restored constitutional guarantees which had been suspended Tuesday for 15 days.

Pope Has Confidence France Will Rise Again

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Feb. 5.—In his first pronouncement after returning from Rome to Lyons, Pierre Marie Cardinal Gerlier, Archbishop of Lyons, told his congregation that "the Pope has complete faith in the resurrection of France," it was learned here today.

Gen. Castelnau, president of French Catholic Action, said in the official organ of the Societe France Catholique, that Frenchmen are praying fervently for President Roosevelt and the United States "in this new and exceptionally grave phase of their history."

Exploitation Laid to ASCAP by Arnold

Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the anti-trust division, yesterday accused the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers with "exploiting composers" and charging "users of music for songs they do not play" as criminal proceedings were started against ASCAP in Milwaukee.

A bill of criminal information filed in the United States District Court by Victor O. Waters, special assistant to the Attorney General, named 19 corporations and 26 individuals.

Federal Judge F. Ryan Duffy set the arraignment for March 5. The charges, which constitute a misdemeanor, are punishable upon conviction by a maximum fine of $5,000, a year in jail, or both.

Eight specific charges of violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act were listed by the Justice Department. They included:

Elimination of competition by requiring ASCAP members to assign exclusive rights to the society for all public performances of music composed or published by members.

Administration of ASCAP by a self-perpetrating board of directors which supervises the distribution of revenue.

Membership in ASCAP conditioned on regulation publication by candidate of at least five musical compositions.

Fees to users are arbitrarily fixed. In the case of radio, fee is based on percentage of gross revenue regardless of whether music is used in all programs.

Discrimination in prices and terms among various commercial users of music.

"In plain language," Arnold said in a formal statement, "ASCAP is charged with exploiting composers by preventing them from selling their music except on terms dictated by a self-perpetrating board of directors."

Persons named as defendants were Gene Buck, president of the society; Louis Bernstein, vice president; Otto A. Harbach, vice president; George W. Meter, secretary; Gustave Schirmer, treasurer, and 21 other directors.

Also named were 19 music publishing firms which have had officers, agents, or representatives on the board.

Col. Batista's Coup

When Fulgencio Batista moved into the Presidential palace in Havana some months ago he was only assuming openly the power he had been indirectly but effectively exercising in Cuba for years. In 1933, while an army sergeant, Batista led the successful uprising against the Machado dictatorship. From then on he had been the most powerful figure on the island, ruling Cuba from his military headquarters at Camp Columbia.

Although Col. Batista's elevation from chief of staff of the Cuban army to chief executive of the Cuban Republic involved neither increase nor diminution of his power, it necessarily changed his point of view, particularly as to the relations between the civil and military authorities. As head of the army, Col. Batista was responsible for a steady increase in its power and functions. Thus, during his tenure as chief of staff, the Cuban army built and operated a great many rural schools in an effort to cut down illiteracy. As President, however, he favors limiting the army's functions while, at the same time, returning to the civil authorities control over the port police, lighthouses and fishing which had been under the Cuban navy's jurisdiction since 1933.

Certainly no one knows better than Col. Batista the danger of maintaining military forces which the civil authorities cannot effectively control. Yet it was hardly surprising that his efforts to restore the balance between the civil and the military created opposition among those who saw their former prerogatives cut off and their power reduced. The result was a flare-up which Col. Batista was able to put down speedily and effectively. Then followed the dismissal of the chiefs of staff of the army and navy, the chief of the national police and other high military and naval officials.

It is significant that Col. Batista's strong action has met with the approval not only of the parties that supported him during the recent campaign but also of opposition leaders. Thus, Senator Jorge Manch, congressional leader of the A. B. C., which supported Batista's rival, Grau San Martin, was one of the first to congratulate the President on his move to reestablish the foundation of civil authority.

So Col. Batista has survived the first assault on his authority as President of Cuba. He emerges from the crisis stronger than ever. But he will need all his strength to cope with Cuba's steadily worsening economic crisis. That crisis, far more than any possible cabal by military leaders, constitutes his greatest enemy.

In Extremis

At the Battle of the Lance the Crusaders went forth from Antioch chanting their hymns. At the foot of the guillotine the condemned Girondists sang their "Marseillaise" until there was no head left to sing. At Verdun the German shock regiments advanced to slaughter singing "Deutschland, Deutschland, Uber Alles." In each instance the music reflected the faith of the singers and the solemnity of the occasion. But when last month the Australians opened the assault on Tobruk it was with the rousing but irrelevant chorus of

> We're off to see the Wizard,
> The wonderful Wizard of Oz!

Twenty-nine years ago the Titanic went down with her passengers singing, "Nearer, My God, To Thee." But when the torpedoed City of Benares sank last September the passengers, including a great many children, sang as though seeking to emphasize their defiance of death and of the enemy by the very frivolity of the words and tune. Prof. A. S. Orton, of Emmanuel College, points to this contrast to illustrate "the puerility of this age."

> Roll out the barrel,
> We'll all have a barrel of fun!

It seems a bit unreasonable to cavil at any tune wherewith those who are facing death seek to comfort and encourage themselves. As long as men and women are able to sing at all in such circumstances there is hope for the human race.

What Prof. Orton was probably thinking of is the apparent inability of our generation to assume solemn attitudes even at moments of the greatest solemnity. Perhaps, as his comparison suggests, the decay of religion has had something to do with it. But at any rate in a universe which seems to become more and more meaningless courage is still abundant. It is the ritualistic attitude toward either life or death which is difficult. Thus an external flippancy may be merely the cloak in which sacrificial exaltation seeks to conceal itself from an age distrustful of all such flights. It may be that flippancy is the only alternative to stoicism or apathy. If so, the preference now accorded it is readily understandable.

Pleasing To Racketeers

Sharp controversy over the decision of the Supreme Court in the Hutcheson case may be anticipated. The Court concluded that four members of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters did not violate the antitrust laws when they broke a contract, called a jurisdictional strike and sponsored a boycott against a beer manufacturer. Obviously the decision will put an end to the Department of Justice's efforts to prevent the restraint of trade by unions fighting to control certain types of work.

The effect of the decision is to perpetuate the enormous powers exercised by some racketeers in the labor field. It seems to give strongly entrenched labor groups a right to shut out all competition, with full immunity from prosecution under the antitrust laws. In many cases unions are dominated by one or a few individuals with no pretense at popular elections. The Court's decision leaves these leaders free to control all workmen in some occupations, for if an attempt is made to form a rival organization the dominant union can call a jurisdictional strike and halt interstate commerce until the new organization is crushed.

Precisely that method has been used to destroy independent truckers in Pittsburgh. In New Orleans local A. F. of L. unions were indicted for trying to force out of employment a C. I. O. union certified as a proper bargaining agency by the NLRB. Of course, this case must now be abandoned. The Court has said, in effect, that a dictatorship may be set up in a labor union and used to crush competition, without restraint from the antitrust laws.

Particularly disturbing is the line of reasoning used to reach this decision. The Court read into Section 20 of the Clayton Act the statement of public policy of the Norris-LaGuardia Act. The meaning of Section 20 is itself a subject of controversy. The dissent of Justice Roberts, in which Chief Justice Hughes joined, insists that this section dealing with the issuance of injunctions against labor organizations was never intended to define substantive rights of persons and individuals, but merely to set forth the conditions under which relief through restraining orders could be granted. A still further doubtful element is introduced into the majority opinion by Justice Frankfurter, however, when he assumes that Congress intended to modify previous Court rulings under this section by passing the Norris-LaGuardia Act.

In the latter act Congress did set forth a broad policy of dealing with labor disputes, but it specifically related that policy to the terms of the act in these words: "Therefore, the following definitions of, and limitations upon, the jurisdiction and authority of the courts of the United States are hereby enacted." Then follows detailed regulations governing the use of injunctions in labor disputes, but nothing concerning any modification of the criminal provisions of the Sherman Act under which this case was prosecuted. In the opinion of the dissenting justices the Sherman Act remains untouched by the Norris-LaGuardia Act which deals with a different phase of the problem.

The Court seeks to justify its strained reasoning by pointing to its policy of giving "hospitable scope" to Congressional purpose. Justice Roberts points out, however, that Congress has been asked many times to give labor unions blanket exemption from the antitrust laws and it has persistently refused to do so. Instead it passed the much narrower Norris-LaGuardia Act restricted to conditions under which injunctions may be issued in labor disputes. Undoubtedly the effects of the decision will have to be corrected in some way. Congress may have to pass a resolution to the effect that the Norris-LaGuardia Act means what it says and no more.

Plugging The Leak

Establishment of a consular office at Vladivostok may be preliminary to a more effective watchfulness over the destination of our exports to Soviet Russia. We hope so. It would be the height of irony to find out after the war that the Nazis had been using weapons which they had obtained out of our arsenal through Russia. And yet such a construction seems to flow from the trade figures. In the first 11 months of 1939 our exports to Russia were $45,000,000; in 1940, $80,000,000. The character of the goods adds to the suspicion created by the figures. American cotton, for example, moved into Russia in sizable amount for the first time in five years; copper shipments rose sharply; and oil drilling machinery was bought in unusually large quantities. Russia's increased purchases here could be partly explained by the fact that Russia is now cut off from former European supply sources. Too, she needs to strengthen her own military establishment. Nevertheless apparently reliable reports indicate that goods entering Russia by way of Vladivostok are being used to replace Russian goods shipped to Germany, and that in some cases imports are going directly to Germany over the Trans-Siberian Railroad. It will be difficult, it is true, to check the ultimate destination of our exports to Russia. For instance, the Dutch in World War I outwitted the British by importing copper for home use and tearing down old constructions inside Holland for export to Germany. In the case of Soviet Russia any doubts, in view of the Russo-German tie-up, ought to be resolved by stopping the shipments in one way or another.

Struggle At Vichy

Admiral Jean Darlan has returned to Paris from Vichy carrying with him, it is assumed, the decision of Marshal Petain and his council of ministers regarding the demand of Pierre Laval for an important place in the government of unoccupied France. Once vice premier and the man designed by the aged marshal as his successor, Laval was deprived of his post last December. Since then he has left no stone unturned to regain the power and the perquisites he lost.

Laval's personal fate is unimportant. What is important is that the demand for his reinstatement in the Vichy regime has behind it the full weight of the Third Reich. The swarthy Auvergnat is the Trojan Horse whom Hitler wants to install at Vichy so as to make that government completely compliant to his will. The return of Laval to power would thus mean that Vichy is prepared to collaborate with Berlin not merely in the economic sphere but in the military and naval spheres as well. With Italy crumbling under the hammer blows of British and Greek military, naval and air power, with the day of the anticipated German assault on the British Isles approaching, Hitler cannot wait.

Thus far Marshal Petain has stood firm against these German demands and has resisted the effort to restore Laval to his former post. Now, as heretofore, he has a trump card in French North Africa whose cooperation with the British might easily enable the latter to give Graziani a coup de grace. Yet the German pressures on Vichy are steadily rising and they are being accompanied with ill-concealed threats of drastic German action against France and the French people unless Petain and his colleagues fall into line with Hitler's wishes. While resisting the more extreme German demands, there is a possibility that Vichy may open the door just a little in the prayerful hope that Germany might thus be satisfied.

Such a hope is likely to prove vain. Marshal Petain knows this. So do his present colleagues. That is why they have for so long held Laval at arm's length. But the sands for them are running out. They can no longer pursue a policy of delay. The day of decision is a hand.

Tattered Tag

Readers have fallen into a habit of keeping the isolationist label on some of our public men who are no longer isolationists. Those who want the President to negotiate a peace between the belligerents aren't isolationists, obviously. For a peacemaker would have to be an underwriter of the peace, and that means a responsibility for the map of Europe from which even the all-outers would shrink. The all-outers want to stamp out a menace, not to sit on frontiers, though, of course, they wish to see our country take a responsible position for the world's general polity. Col. Lindbergh, least of all, could be described as an isolationist, even a nationalist. In a way he is likeminded with the Federal and other unionists who feel that the national state has become outmoded. To him air power has destroyed the national frontier, and he seems to view the current strife as a race for bigger and better entities. The entity which would come under our dominance would be this hemisphere. And he would see us sit here, armed to the teeth against the day when a Hitler Legion attempted to dislodge us in a gigantic war of the spheres. Call the Colonel an imperialist, a fatalist, if you like, but not an isolationist. Of the same school, according to the President's revelation at his Friday's press conference, is Senator Wheeler, who seems to have been impressed as long ago as 1935 with the inevitability of rival imperialisms. Senator Hiram Johnson is one of the few isolationists who have remained consistently isolationist, and doubtless he would continue to do so, even if we should be isolated in fact by a Nazi victory.

Vain hope have these who strive to match
The lovelier flower of your face,
Yet may they in your presence catch
A share of your unequalled grace,
That though they perish, they may start
A garden blooming in your heart.

Need For Speed

Despite the extensive debate over the lease-lend bill, the damage and danger of undue delay in its consideration by Congress has not been given adequate attention. Secretary Morgenthau pointed out in his testimony before the Foreign Affairs Committee that a factory tooled to produce British-type planes would have to remain idle unless an order for 2,000 planes could be cleared, and that a number of other manufacturers will run out of orders for such planes by April unless new orders are placed. These are only two among a great many instances of delay on British orders due to lack of dollar exchange.

The effect of all these delays will be to slow actual deliveries to Britain in the coming months. That will weaken Britain's defensive position and so endanger American national security. The same delays will also weaken Britain's offensive position and thus her prospects of winning the war in 1942. For the British to be able to carry out the decisive offensive they plan for 1942, they must be able to place orders and obtain deliveries sufficiently far in advance to allow training of fully equipped forces. For these reasons, experts are fearful that delay in placing the necessary orders now may delay a British offensive until too late in 1942 to be decisive, and so prolong the war until 1943.

When the damaging effect of delay is so far-reaching, the public has a right to insist that Congress act now with speed as well as care. The more our democracy is challenged, the more need it has to be efficient.

Likes Laski Articles

I am writing this to tell you how much I enjoy reading Prof. Laski's articles which have appeared in The Post recently. His discussions and analysis of various phases of the British and international problems are exceedingly illuminating. We, in the United States, need more light on the British situation. A sound Anglo-American relationship can only be built up by thoroughgoing mutual understanding, which these articles promote.

Placing The Blame

To blame the wagon for kicking the horse is a mistake. If the people are going to blame the President for the failures of Congress, and if Congress is to blame the President for its own failures, and the President is to be blamed for getting us into international trouble, why not just give the power of the President to Congress and the power of Congress to the President?

On Fundamentals

In my recent letter to The Post relative to blaming the capitalist system for war, I did not intend either to uphold or condemn any system of government. I merely tried to point out that governmental systems have nothing to do with eliminating the influence of fear, hatred and selfishness from the heart of humanity.

As evidence for this contention I point to the fact that every nation within the range of this war, regardless of its governmental system, is polishing its cannons and getting the powder keg ready, which in itself is evidence that none of them has succeeded in eliminating fear, hatred and selfishness from the hearts of its subjects. Fearlessness, love and unselfishness do not need cannons for protection. They own nothing and want nothing and, consequently, have no reason for brandishing a cannon.

I do believe something can be done about fear, hatred and selfishness in the world. I believe it can be done by forgetting all about the subject of wealth and learning to look upon one another as human beings, rather than as capitalists, communists, totalitarians, Christians, pagans, warmongers, pacifists, etc. And I do not believe this can be accomplished by written peace avowals, systems of government, world courts, or by wars, but by intelligence.

"Legislative Tangle"

We have talked long and loudly over here about aid to Britain. We have admitted again and again that Britain is fighting our war, as well as her own. We have encouraged high hopes in Britain that we would do something really effective in aid of her. Now, when everybody admits that a crisis is approaching for England, what do we do? We make all possible speed to get into a legislative tangle that threatens to bog down our whole policy in a welter of conversation.

I wonder how such a spectacle strikes the British? I shouldn't wonder, if we shilly-shally around very long, if a deep, smoldering spirit of resentment began to be stirred up in British minds and hearts. Should they be defeated within the next few months, as they may well be, would they make any Herculean efforts to keep what was left of their fleet from falling into Germany's hands? If this happened, before we had stopped arguing about whether Congress was to continue to hinder the President in his task of attempting to defend this hemisphere, what would there be to prevent Germany from collecting a superior fleet and making a bold stroke against the only power left in the world which could oppose her colossal ambitions?

Perhaps this wouldn't happen. Perhaps it couldn't happen. But the very fact that we are even talking about it as a possibility should be enough to end all argument among our woolly-minded Senators and Representatives.

For Lucidity

In contrast to the lucid editorials of The Post and letters of a clearly patriotic type, we find on the same page a number of letters of a most confused and sentimental character. They begin with opening phrases that commend the Administration, but end with a strong plea for isolation; or again they make an appeal to patriotism, only to temper it with suggestions of inaction. Why cannot these writers state their views in a straightforward way, without subterfuge?

America's Blessings

The American people are the chosen people of our time, when they can, in the midst of world slavery, still give their leaders power and not have him force it upon them. Our predecessors gave us the blessings of free speech and free press. Let us pray to God that those amongst us who use this privilege of free speech will use it to the advantage of our Nation, that they shall know what they are talking and not talk what they know, and so point our "Achilles heel" out.

The future seems so doubtful
For we feel we'll never know

Answers Laski Views On Federal Union

I believe some reply should be made to Mr. Laski's articles in The Post of January 24 and February 1, since the subject of the first "An Anglo-American Union," is a question which seems to be receiving quite a lot of attention.

Prof. Laski feels that an Anglo-American federal union is not desirable because people will not accept such a proposal. This seems to be an answer to the question "Is such a union possible?" and it begs the question which the author himself posed, "Is such a union desirable?" And who knows that, a few months hence, the people will not accept such a union?

Mr. Laski's objection to an Anglo-American union seems further to be based on the misconception that such a union is claimed to be a panacea for all the ills that afflict this poor world. On the contrary, I believe that this union is being, and should be, advanced as primarily an instrument to bind the United States and Britain indissolubly together for a maximum war effort and to form the basis for a larger union at the end of the war which would guarantee, by its economic strength and democratic basis, our not having to fight this war all over again every 25 years. If that one end could be achieved, the union would be, I think we would all agree, worth while.

Mr. Laski's chief objection seems based on his reasoning that, since an Anglo-American union would not solve all economic problems, it should not be formed until distribution has been adjusted to production, until there has been set up some form of state planning or socialism. Mr. Laski is a Socialist and his view can, of course, be understood. Yet, in his article of February 1 entitled "Fusion of Interests," he says that lesser ends, including the socialism which he espouses, must be subordinated to the "larger end," which is defense against Hitler, otherwise less immediate ends (e. g. socialism) will never be realized. This is quite right. However, to many of us Hitler is not the only threat of his kind which society has had to face—he and all his successes are merely the product of the system of uncontrolled national sovereignty which now prevails. We feel, then, that the "larger end" of which Mr. Laski speaks is not merely defeat of Hitler but the changing of the system which made him possible.

Prof. Laski said in his article: "Not to understand this (subordination of lesser to larger ends) is to show a lack of proportion in the estimation of values which destroys utterly any title to statesmanship. To learn to put first the things that are first is the beginning of democratic wisdom." It seems, then, not too much to ask that Mr. Laski perceive more clearly the real "larger end," namely a union of democratic nations, and subordinate other ends, including socialism, in order that those other ends may some day have a chance of success.

Letters From England

Cambridge, England.
August, 1940.

My Dear W.:

As the evenings are growing shorter, despite summertime, I am occupying myself with writing to my numerous American friends, for I know that they are interested in hearing personal accounts of how things are going here as a counterweight to the headlines of the papers.

Well, first of all, we are all right. I don't say that we haven't any worries. We have lots, but of the future we have no fears. That is the united opinion of everyone and what Churchill said night before last correctly represents what we all feel. We are in this thing with the gloves off and are going to see it through to a successful finish if it costs us everything we have.

The military, naval and air situation is first class. With regard to the army, I suppose you do know of the wonderful organization which has sprung up in the last few months—the Home Guard. These are drawn from all classes of society from generals to coal-heavers or ploughmen. They are unpaid and do their ordinary job of work during the day and go on duty at night. The response has been so enormous that after enrolling 1,500,000 the government had to stop. These men know every inch of the country and are armed with all types of rifles from Winchesters to the 1917 Ross of which there is a very large number. When you consider that behind our regular army divisions we have this very efficient force you can realize that the invasion of this country is not going to be a walkover.

The general economic situation here is good. Of course we are being taxed out of existence but no one seems to mind. It is a marvelous tribute to the people that the only criticism of the last supplementary budget was that it was not drastic enough. I do not think many people are hoarding money in the banks in the hopes of saving it for a suitable time to invest. We all know that it is a life and death struggle and that if we were to lose, any money we had would be valueless.

Life here is remarkable. I wish one could transport ten intelligent citizens from every town of 50,000 people in the U. S. A. for a week's tour of England. They would get the impression, apart from soldiers everywhere, and defense measures everywhere, that nothing exceptional was happening, except perhaps the incessant droning of planes, which doesn't cease day or night. The shops are full of all sorts of food. The rationing is not at all difficult and I find very little difference at my table from normal times. We certainly do not seem to eat less. Very few people carry a gas mask. Personally, I do not think the danger in an area such as this is very great, although we must reckon with it. Compared with coast towns we have had relatively few air raid warnings. If they occur at night, we get up, dress and come downstairs. Coffee is made and we sit around, the maids go on with their knitting and if we are up for a long time most of us go to sleep and wait for the "all clear" to sound. I have a trench in the garden, but we have only used it once during a daylight raid. It is too cold at night and the risk of pneumonia is greater than that of bombs. But it is a funny life, never to know what is going to happen from one moment to another.

We have had a glorious summer, with a good crop which is now nearly all in. Everyone is raising food. On my small place I have to lift, among other things, 1½ tons of potatoes. We are practically self-supporting as far as vegetables go. I should like to see agriculture back in its old place in England after the war, but I am afraid that is too much to hope for.

Ever sincerely,

C. W.

Cambridge, England, Dec., 1940.

My Dear W:

We are all well and so far have suffered nothing. We have bombs drop nearby from time to time and, as you have already heard, there has been some damage to Cambridge, but it has not been in any sense serious. We have air-raid warnings and sometimes the house shakes with the force of exploding bombs, but one gets quite accustomed to it and, as I have more than often said, it doesn't interfere with the passage of soup from the plate to its ultimate destination. Of course, if we had a raid like that on Coventry it would be an entirely different matter, but so far we have been spared that horror.

J. and I have been in London only once since the blitz started. We went down as far as Oxford Street, and one saw a lot of damage, but it is not like Ypres or Arras, and everyone is carrying on as well as they can and putting up with it all in a very wonderful way. The Londoners certainly rank with the heroes of any war. We are all doing our best to support them and keeping our thumbs up.

There is not the slightest doubt in anybody's mind about the ultimate outcome the only doubt is when. I have always thought it would be a long war and the French debacle has done everything to prolong it. What a great many people like myself are thinking about is the aftermath. What we are going to do with the 20,000,000 Nazis between 16 and "8 who have had the Nazi idea dinned into them since '31 presents a very great problem.

The girls have been working very hard ever since the war started. They run a canteen and buy, cater and cook for anything from 25 to 40 every day. They have had no holiday other than a week at home, where they have slept a good part of the time. They look tired but there is no way of altering what they are doing. On our part we have three evacuees extra in addition to the girls.

I think we have turned the corner and the brave little Greeks have helped enormously. I hope they can keep it up with what help we can give them. They have discovered the weak point in the Axis and it is up to us to exploit it.

And so good night.

Ever,
C. W.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

If The Worst Happens

FOR REASONS which are obvious when we think about them the Cabinet officers who have been testifying could not discuss the most searching question raised by opponents of the lend-lease bill. The question is where this country would find itself if in the coming months the British resistance in the British Isles is overwhelmed. A responsible official could not answer that question publicly without doing great injury to the morale of the British and of all their allies inside and outside the occupied countries; nor could he discuss it fully without disclosing military information of the highest importance.

LIPPMANN

Although responsible officials cannot discuss this question, it is certain that they must consider it. For in adopting the policy of aiding Britain, a government would be lacking in statesmanship if it did not know what it was going to do if the policy failed. But while officials cannot talk about these things, there is in substance no mystery which the rest of us cannot readily comprehend. The plain answer to the question must be that if the powers of the lease-lend bill do not insure a successful resistance in the British Isles, they are more than ever necessary as a means by which to arrange to salvage for the defense of the Western Hemisphere what can be salvaged from the wreckage of British sea power.

THOUGH THIS question has been put by opponents of the bill, a brutally candid discussion will reveal the most conclusive of all the reasons why the prompt enactment of the lend-lease bill without emasculating amendments is an imperative American interest. This is a horrid subject to discuss. But there is something positively terrifying about the innocence and unworldliness with which many public men, who quite sincerely wish to aid Britain, have failed to grasp the reason why the President of the United States must now be given the means to negotiate. For there is at stake here—let us realize—not merely aid to Britain in the sense of supplying the British resistance. In the last analysis there is at stake also, should Britain fall, the dire possibility that the whole vast power of the British and French and Dutch empires will not only be lost to our defense but will be turned around and turned against us. This is the awful issue at the bottom of the whole debate—not merely whether we will support the Britain of Winston Churchill, not merely whether we could defend ourselves if Britain disappeared, but whether, if Britain is defeated, we must face in addition to the Axis a revolutionized Britain under a British Laval.

The idea is so repulsive that the strongest among us will shrink from facing it. But it must be faced. The events in France since the French defeat should by this time have made the most complacent realize that when an ally is defeated, he does not merely cease to exist; he becomes potentially an enemy. That is why it is so imperative not merely to aid Britain but to have all possible means of entering into practical arrangements with Britain for all possible eventualities. And that is why delay and by finicking hesitations about giving the President the power and the means to negotiate, we not only stand to lose our most powerful friend but to have him transformed by conquest and revolution into a powerful enemy.

WHEN THE OPPONENTS of the bill were testifying before the House Committee, Col. Lindbergh told us that our help to Britain would not be effective. However much we may hope he is mistaken, we dare not leave out of account the possibility that he may be right. Then President Hoover's Undersecretary of State, Mr. William R. Castle, told us that this bill would make the President "supreme in all military matters, British as well as American." Supposing that Mr. Castle were right, suppose that he were not indulging in great exaggeration, would it be an objection to this bill that in case Col. Lindbergh's defeatism is proved correct, the President of the United States would have a powerful hold on British "military matters," on the British fleet, for example, on the British bases, on the Royal Air Force scattered all over the British Empire? What would not the British people give today if Mr. Churchill had had a hold on the French forces similar to that which Mr. Castle thinks Mr. Roosevelt could have, but ought not to have, over the British forces?

As a matter of fact Mr. Castle was not speaking soberly and responsibly when he said this bill would make the President "supreme" in all British military matters. But it is true that this bill does give him a great influence in British military matters and, considering the worst that may happen, what could be more necessary or more desirable? If this bill enables the President to develop our aid to Britain so that, in the event of a defeat in Europe, the arrangements exist by which we can salvage the better part of the fleet and the merchant marine and much else beside, that is a conclusive argument in favor of the bill. When France was defeated in France, the collapse was complete because Mr. Reynaud and the Chamberlain government had not had the foresight to make the arrangements to continue the resistance from Africa. We should be lunatics to make the same mistake—to carry our partisan suspicion of Mr. Roosevelt to the point where we renounced this unique opportunity to reinsure our own security.

THAT SUCH arrangements can be made we know, and not merely because we have the explicit promise of the British government. That promise is worth a good deal but what gives it its final validity is the fact that it is underwritten by the situation itself. Marshal Petain has learned that he could not obtain, as he hoped, a chivalrous peace from Hitler, and in so far as he has any power to bargain with Hitler, it is because the French Empire is beyond Hitler's reach and the British resistance continues and American aid increases. The only protection of the French inside France is the unbroken force of Hitler's enemies outside of France.

Were the British Isles to be invaded or otherwise overwhelmed, the hope of the people in the islands would depend upon the British Empire overseas and the United States. This would still in some measure protect them against complete slavery to Hitler's undisputed power. Nothing else could protect them at all, nothing else could mitigate their fate. What Hitler would do as undisputed master of the British Isles can be imagined from what he has done in isolated Poland where, being beyond the reach of sea power or air power, he is undisputed master.

Terrible as it would be to take the decision, the British would, if the worst came, have to do the opposite of what Marshal Petain did: They would have to retreat overseas and continue to resist. But unless the arrangements had been made in advance, this great operation might not be feasible. The bill now before the Congress makes it possible to prepare such arrangements.

IS IT NECESSARY to argue that they would be of vital importance to this country? Is there anyone in his right mind who thinks it of no consequence to us whether the Axis acquires by conquest more warships than we can build in ten years? Is there a member of Congress who voted for the two-ocean navy and yet does not see that his vote was a tragic farce if the British fleet is captured by the Axis?

The more it is asserted by Col. Lindbergh and those who agree with him that Britain is past helping in Europe, the more it is asserted by Mr. Castle and others that this bill gives the President power in the disposition of the British forces, the clearer it is that this bill is most necessary. For then the bill gives us the chance, and it may be a good one, of saving Britain and of pushing back Hitler. But at the very worst it gives us a chance to save what it is essential to save if there is a catastrophe in Europe.

The New Ambassador

UNLESS THERE is an unexpected slip-up somewhere, the nomination of John G. Winant to be American Ambassador to Great Britain will go to the Senate shortly after these words are printed. An explanation of this mysterious appointment is in order. And whether or no the appointment goes through on schedule, the explanation throws interesting light on the trend of thought at the White House.

Winant was the President's man, chosen in the face of unusually determined opposition at the State Department. The clue to the President's insistence on Winant is to be found in Winant's close association with the labor movement, as assistant director of the international labor office at Geneva in 1935, and as director from 1939 onwards. The accent is on labor at the White House, both for domestic and British consumption, and Winant is being sent to London as a friend of labor, if not a labor representative.

Winant's appointment is of a piece with the elevation of Sidney Hillman to associate directorship of the defense effort. It trues up neatly, for whereas William S. Knudsen, the industrialist, is first, and Hillman is second in the OPM, at the London Embassy Winant will be first, and a businessman minister, now expected to be Averell Harriman, will be second. Labor leaders here were consulted before Winant was named. Furthermore, the President is authoritatively understood to have been much influenced by intimations from London that Winant's appointment would be extremely agreeable to the British labor leaders. In the course of his work at Geneva, Winant became particularly intimate with the famous British minister of labor, Ernest Bevin, and the New Dealers here hopefully anticipate that having a crony at the American Embassy will strengthen Bevin's hand in British politics.

BEVIN SEEMS, in truth, to be becoming a major preoccupation of the President and the New Deal group in the Administration. When Lord Halifax was made British Ambassador to this country, the White House made little secret of a disappointment which now appears to be forgotten. And at that time Bevin was frankly mentioned by persons extremely close to the President as the man who would have had the most enthusiastic reception.

Of course, Winant's labor affiliations were not the only reasons for his appointment. He is a high-principled, personable and industrious man, with a manner somewhat picturesquely homespun. Born in New York of modestly prosperous parents, he was educated at St. Paul's School and Princeton, married a charming wife with a substantial fortune, and returned to his old school to teach. St. Paul's is at Concord, N. H. He entered New Hampshire politics, was eventually elected Governor as a liberal Republican, caught the President's eye as a social-minded political moderate, and was made chairman of the Textile Mediation Board when his term expired. Then followed the two periods of work at the ILO, with an intervening two years as chairman of the Social Security Board.

He is, in fact, a good man with a good record. Moreover, he is a firm believer in the wisdom of the struggle against Naziism, and one of the few Americans who saw the real meaning of Munich when Munich occurred, and then began to urge American rearmament in the air.

Unfortunately, he is also generally acknowledged to be a poor administrator, an incurable holder of conferences, and an exceedingly slow thinker. For these reasons, and possibly because some doubted whether a man partly chosen to please the British labor party would command the confidence of Winston Churchill, the State Department's opposition to Winant was remarkably strong. The objections from the department caused the long delay in making Winant's appointment official. They were probably also responsible, at least in part, for the choice of a minister to work with and supplement the new ambassador. In addition Winant himself has invited Benjamin V. Cohen, one of the most brilliant men in Washington, to accompany him to London as legal adviser.

WHEN THE SEARCH for a successor to Joseph P. Kennedy first began, the specifications for the ideal man were rather exactly laid down. He was to be an individual of standing, quick sympathy and strong intelligence. He was to be able to spend an hour or so every other evening with Winston Churchill, and to transmit the British leader's hopes and fears, needs and purposes hot to the White House. In short, in his sole person, he was to be the British-American liaison which is now so sadly lacking.

The President may feel the need of such a liaison less than many other people, since he and Churchill are understood to have resumed their man-to-man talks on the transatlantic telephone. Certainly Winant is not the most likely liaison officer. With the aid of Cohen, or another equally able man, Winant may well perform with success the incredibly difficult task ahead of him. Yet one cannot help regretting that the virulence of office politics at the State Department, and his enemies' habit of stopping at nothing, made William C. Bullitt unwilling to take the London post when it was first offered to him.

Fair Enough

Error Of A Geographical Nature

THESE DISPATCHES have been having a little editorial snarl with James Florentine Bechtel, the editor of a paper in Dayton, Ohio, which purports to speak for Labor with an upper-case L. In a recent essay on the durable subject of racketeering in the union movement reference was made to dynamiting in Dayton, and Mr. Bechtel fearlessly but a little too rashly denounces this remark as a wicked falsehood.

PEGLER

I say it was rash of him to do this because, from his standpoint, the subject is one which it were better not to agitate. The fact is that I was guilty of a small geographical error, not a misstatement, because there were actually four dynamitings, one near Canton on November 11 and three more in a single night in Akron, about a week later. The Canton blast demolished a steam shovel operated by a small strip-mining company, and the bombs destroyed three building jobs on which C. I. O. labor was employed and killed an A. F. of L. man who, police say, was engaged in planting the explosives.

The man who was killed was Robert Floyd, a native of Oklahoma, where he had served two years in prison for grand larceny, and a member of the Operating Engineers' Union of the A. F. of L. Apparently he used a fast clock or misread the dial of the mechanism in the dark as he was delivering his message to the community, for he was demolished himself.

His brother, Horace Tilford Floyd, also a member of the engineers' union, was arrested and, according to the word of the Akron Police Department, has signed a confession on the basis of which the police arrested Harry D. Jones, business agent of the union in Akron and vice president, no less, of the Ohio Federation of Labor, on a charge of malicious destruction of property.

SINCE THEN the surviving Floyd brother and Jones have been indicted on this charge, Jones was released on $7,500 bond, while Horace Floyd has been held in jail in default of $15,000 bond.

The Operating Engineers' Union, which both of the Floyd brothers and Jones adorned, is the one whose sixth vice president, Joe Fay, of New Jersey, slugged David Dubinsky at the A. F. of L. Convention in New Orleans for daring to propose that undesirable characters be kicked out of the organization—a suggestion which Mr. Fay may easily have taken to be a personal affront.

Mr. Fay is a member of the Frank Hague mob in New Jersey, where he has been intimate with that sterling statesman and ornamental American character, A. Harry Moore, late member of the United States Senate and later Governor of New Jersey, who as Governor appointed Hague's undistinguished and professionally callow son to the highest court in the State at $9,000 a year for the expressed reason that he knew it would make the justice's daddy happy.

Fay has worked both sides of the street as a professional labor skate and is a rich labor leader and power in the A. F. of L. He is also closely allied with the so-called Common Laborers' Union, or shakedown, which collects, roughly, $1,000,000 a year in per capita fees from its locals, but never holds conventions or elections.

FAY HIMSELF, incidentally, won his last election to international office in the Operating Engineers' Union on a ballot which was a direct steal from Adolf Hitler's.

The ballot read as follows:

"In order to vote for a candidate make a cross in the square before the name of your choice."

There then followed in a descending row the list of candidates, one for each office, so that the members had a choice of one all the way down to and including the board of trustees, a triumvirate for which only three men were named on the ballot.

The Trades and Labor Assembly of Akron, the central body of A. F. of L. Unions there, was distressed by insinuations from the C. I. O. regarding the dynamiting of the Akron C. I. O. building jobs. The nature of the insinuations should be obvious in view of the union affiliations of the men arrested and the man who was killed. Of course, it is probable that the central body would not have known anything about any such enterprise and would have rejected such activity as archaic, if not on higher grounds.

Mr. Bechtel has made quite an issue of veracity and accuracy in his challenging article in his union paper, and it is therefore desired to present the facts as far as they are known to date and to plead guilty of a geographical error. I am indebted to this able journalist for his, perhaps, indiscreet criticism and trust that this correction will make him feel just fine.

U. S. Calling 13% of Draft-Age Men Compared to 28% in 1917

Quotas Would Be Stepped Up, However, If U. S. Were to Be Drawn Into War

Far more lenient than its predecessor of 1917-18, when approximately 28 per cent of all draft-age men were called to the colors, America's peacetime Selective Service now labels only 13 per cent of its potential defenders Class 1-A material and immediately available for service.

This relatively liberal policy, revealed yesterday at National Selective Service headquarters, is likely to continue, unless some greater emergency forces the country to dip deeper into its man power.

Officials also revealed that the national average of Class 1-A selections conforms closely to the District average. Of the 6,800 men classified here, only 825, or 12½ per cent, were placed in the category subject to quick calls.

War Would Change Rate

National and local draft planners explained the liberal classification policy on the following grounds:

First, it was said, the national emergency is still a limited one. Should the country find itself at war, then the draft would certainly be made more inclusive.

Local boards, which so far have been generally free with deferments, particularly for dependency and occupational reasons, would be forced to adopt less generous policies, it was said.

In another facet of the draft situation, conscription heads pointed to the possibility of trainees being selected for other branches than the Army. To date, and in the World War, selectives have been used only in the Army.

It was reported unofficially that the Navy does not want drafted men, maintaining that the one-year term of service is inadequate to train them for sea service, but that the Marine Corps might take them in the not-too-distant future. Spokesmen at Marine Corps headquarters refused to confirm the latter possibility, however.

Quota to Be Revised

Meanwhile, it was learned that the District's quota of 3,982 to be inducted by June will be revised in about six weeks, upon completion of the first census of the Nation's armed forces.

The count was undertaken to determine from which States, and local board communities soldiers, sailors and marines come, so that "credits" may be applied to draft quotas.

The quotas in local boards throughout the country will be decreased according to their representation in the fighting forces and hence their number of "credits."

Upon being informed of the number of credits to be allotted their particular area, board members will be able to govern the rate at which they must classify registrants against future calls.

All Washington local boards recently have greatly stepped up the rate at which they have distributed the questionnaire forms. A large March quota for the District, possibly approaching the 1,000-mark is anticipated, since the draft peak will come not later than April, according to reports from the War Department.

Torpedo Raiders

By John Cashel

Aerial Daredevils

A NAVAL SHORE Station, Somewhere in England, Feb. 5.—I have just discovered at first hand the answer to everybody's question:

"How are the torpedo pilots of the Royal Navy taught what has been described as the most skilled and most hazardous of all forms of air warfare?"

Two surprises . . .

They learn the rudiments of the delicate art of torpedo-dropping in a few months, only part of the time it takes to train a naval pilot. And they are taught their specialized art on land.

The young man we are watching already has airman's wings. He qualified as a pilot before he joined the school to prepare for another Taranto.

Here, he graduates as a specialist torpedo pilot and he does it in five intensive stages.

First—Having flown various training aircraft he now flies the type he will use in actual torpedo operations. Probably a Fairey Albacore, or possibly its predecessor, a Fairey Swordfish.

Second—Master of his machine, he does formation flying. Also, slung in a steel cradle between the fuselage of his aircraft, he carries a dummy torpedo, a shell weighted like the real thing. He gets used to the feel of that up-to-a-ton extra load.

THIRD—HE LEARNS team tactics, attack from all angles. He masters many methods and plans. He smiles when he sometimes reads that any enemy ship zigzagged to evade attack. He knows he will soon be helping to make another ziz-zag in the direction his formation leader wants it to go.

Four—Used to the feel of his dummy, he practices firing it at a target, and experiences that at first alarming sensation as his aircraft leaps from 10 to 40 feet upward the moment it loses its load.

He has pressed the release button at the split second when, after a breath-taking dive, maybe from 10,000 feet, his aircraft is on an even keel before it climbs steeply out of the hellish stream of imaginery enemy fire.

No inefficient aspirant passes through the fine net. Torpedoes cost money, something like $12,000 each. The fleet air arm can't afford avoidable misses or lost chances.

Five—Now our pilot is one of the fittest who have survived, and he begins exercises that in torpedo training are the last stage to the real thing. He practices firing actual torpedoes, with dummy heads only, at more and more difficult targets, stationary and moving.

HE PERFECTS that split-second touch when, at the bottom of his dive, the man matters more than the machine. His topedo sight is not, and can't be, as exact as a bomber's or a gunner's sights.

Sometimes the trainee practices dummy landing on boards that are supposedly the deck of an aircraft carrier.

Now, his fifth stage over, he leaves the school behind him, and goes aboard an aircraft carrier for real deck landing practice. There he becomes a fully-made torpedo pilot, ready for appointment to an operational squadron.

He was born as an airman many months before.

First, at a reception center, where he learned drill, seamanship, signaling, and studied general naval subjects.

Then at an elementary training school, where he flew in elementary trainers.

Next, elsewhere for intermediate and advanced flying training, including a spell at an armament training camp.

All this time he was at stations administrated by the R. A. F.

At "advanced" he earned his wings, enjoyed a week's leave, and then, for the first time, found himself under full naval administration at a royal naval college.

Afterwards to the torpedo school, where, as a specialist, we found him and the answer to the question of how the fleet air arm's torpedo pilots are made.

Dr. Keller Doubts Neimoeller Has Changed His Faith

During the World Relations Seminar of the National Christian Mission yesterday at Calvary Baptist Church, Dr. Adolf Keller was asked if he believed the news story of Martin Neimoeller's conversion to Catholicism.

Cautiously weighing his words, the Swiss churchman replied:

"For the moment, I do not believe it."

Adding that "perhaps there is a misunderstanding about it," he said he would await further news reports.

Willkie's Niece in Va. Undergoes Operation

Lynchburg, Va., Feb. 5 (AP).—Miss Marian Elizabeth Willkie, a niece of Wendell L. Willkie, underwent an emergency operation for appendicitis here today at Virginia Baptist Hospital.

Miss Willkie, a freshman at Randolph-Macon Woman's College, is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Willkie, of La Grange, Ill. The operation was performed by Dr. Don Preston Peters, who was assisted by Dr. A. W. Terrell, the college physician, who reported Miss Willkie's condition satisfactory late this afternoon.

Dutch East Indies Gives Quinine to Greece

A gift of 2,000,000 quinine tablets to Greece for military and civil purposes has been made by the Quinine Bureau of Batavia, it was announced yesterday at the Netherlands Legation by E. C. Zimmerman, Trade Commissioner of the Netherlands East Indies.

The East Indies' contribution to the Greek war effort has a value of 20,000 guilders (approximately $11,000), Commissioner Zimmerman said.

Understanding Aims

Advocates Loan To Britain

A WELL-INFORMED and able member of Congress, and of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, is Republican John M. Vorys, of Ohio.

SULLIVAN

In a colloquy on the radio he was asked by Commentator Fulton Lewis, jr., how many Republicans opposed aid to Britain. Mr. Vorys replied that in his judgment not one member of the House, of either party, opposes aid to Britain. He added that all the debate has to do with the form of the help.

This answer, made off-hand in an informal radio colloquy, may possibly be extreme. It is possible that a very small number of Representatives and Senators, on principle, oppose help to Britain in any form. But as a picture of Congress as a whole, Mr. Vorys' answer was correct. Congress favors help to Britain. Congress is going to give help to Britain. About the form of the help, there are many shadings of opinion. About the particular form of help prescribed in the pending bill, there is much and serious disagreement.

If this condition—the unanimity of intention to help Britain—is understood, public understanding of the whole situation will be clarified. For the fragments of debate and testimony, necessarily brief, which appear in newspaper dispatches and headlines, may lead the country to assume there is substantial opposition to helping Britain in any way. Such an assumption would mislead the country, mislead Britain—and mislead Herr Hitler.

THE PRACTICALLY unanimous determination to help Britain is accompanied by one qualification—and the qualification is as nearly unanimous as the determination. The qualification is that the help given Britain must be "short of war." As universally interpreted, "short of war" means that the armed forces of the United States shall not participate in the fighting. This qualification has been made repeatedly by President Roosevelt, by Republican Candidate Willkie, by formal declarations of both parties and their leaders. This qualification is consciously and continuously in the mind of Congress. We may some time change our minds about this—just as we are now changing our minds about the qualification we put into law in November, 1939, which said that Britain could get no help from America except by paying cash for it. For the present, "short of war" is a fixed qualification to the help we are now preparing to give Britain.

Accepting this qualification, the problem before the Administration and Congress is simple, though not without difficulty. The problem is: How to put the legislation to help Britain into a form which would command support as nearly universal as the purpose to help Britain commands. How to write a bill which will be passed by a majority so overwhelming that it will be notice to the world (including Herr Hitler) of the corresponding overwhelming American determination to help Britain. To put it the other way round, the problem is how to write a bill which will encounter the minimum of disagreement.

All the possible forms of help, all the proposed alternatives to the present bill and the bill itself, all the amendments and disagreements, come roughly down to two. One is the present bill. The other is to give Britain cash or credit, make her a loan or give her a gift. This would merely undo the limitation we enacted in November, 1939. It would release Britain from paying cash. With this limitation removed, Britain would continue to get war material from America as she has got it in the past—by buying it from American manufacturers (and by getting some from our Government by a kind of trade arrangement, as she got the 50 destroyers in exchange for naval bases). With a bill merely making a loan to Britain, everything would go on as it now goes on. If the Administration were willing to put the measure in this form, it would get the support of practically all who oppose the existing measure. The Administration would be able to show the world a unified America favoring help to Britain.

THE OPPOSITION in Congress to the present bill will continue so long as the present bill continues. This opposition is an opposition to the fundamental principle and mechanism of the bill. What the present bill does is to substitute the President, in place of Britain, as buyer of supplies. By the present bill, Congress would make an immense amount of money available to the President. With this money, the President would buy supplies, or make them in Government arsenals. The supplies thus acquired, the President would turn over to Britain, or to such other country as he wishes, in such quantities and on such terms as he wishes. Opponents of the present bill feel that it would put upon the President of the United States an immense discretion and responsibility, which would continue for the duration of the war, and which would amount to participation in the conduct of the war.

He is for war to the hilt, but in his own case he regards the hilt as the red mark made by his garters.

He has only a vague idea of what the lease-lend bill is and is too busy with the gossip columns to bother following the news except through headlines, but he denounces all people who honestly criticize it after a careful study.

He is completely satisfied with the defense program because of how it looks to him through the newsreels.

He declares the American way of life must be preserved and thinks this applies particularly to going to and from the job by limousine, putting in the fewest possible hours, suspecting the boss at all times, and never worrying about the future because the Government should take care of everything.

He is for licking the world if it takes his last cheer.

He will shout for hours about preserving America's institutions, and he thinks Institution One, Two and Three are Professor Quiz, three helpings of dessert and hitch-hiking. Close behind these he places Mickey Mouse, bigger night clubs and better free parking spaces at beach resorts.

He is willing to lay down YOUR life for HIS country.

He is sure we should be able to build 100,000 bombing planes a year, no matter how many letters-to-the-editor it takes.

He is particularly emphatic about the need to sacrifice and is willing to give up everything YOU have.

'The Philadelphia Story' Is a Brilliantly Told Tale

New Film at Palace Is Comedy at Its Zenith, With Katharine Hepburn, James Stewart, Cary Grant and Ruth Hussey Heading Cast

"THE PHILADELPHIA STORY." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the stage hit by Philip Barry, adapted to the screen by Donald Ogden Stewart, starring Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant and James Stewart, with Ruth Hussey, John Howard, Roland Young, John Halliday, Mary Nash, Virginia Weidler, Henry Daniell and Lionel Pape. Directed by George Cukor. At Loew's Palace Theater.

ADHERING FAITHFULLY to the high spirit and breezy movement of the original acting version, yet never giving the impression of a stage play that has merely been photographd by rote, "The Philadelphia Story" today arrives, at last, on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater to take its place among the foremost of the cinema's "sophisticated" comedies.

BELL

In his adaptation of the play which had its premiere in the National Theater in this city before going on to the complete conquest of Broadway, Donald Ogden Stewart has seen eye to eye with Author Philip Barry. In its new form "The Philadelphia Story" loses nothing of the humor of its dialogue or the cameo sharpness of its characterizations. In elaboration of scene and the mobility of the screen, it gains much.

There is scarcely need now to capsule the developments of a sprightly story that has to do with Tracy Lord's second marriage—so shrewdly dominated by her first husband—or the involvements contingent upon the assignment of a "reporter" and a feminine photographer of a "keyhole" magazine to the hot news of a mainliner-proletarian alliance. Everyone knows by now that the aristocratic and haughty Miss Lord found her rebellion futile; that her first husband was her real love; that her father's preoccupation with a famous Russian dancer was purely platonic and that the "affair" with the newsman after too much champagne in that moonlit, midnight garden—even with its unpremeditated swimming party—was as innocent as a chill and chaste star twinkling in the heavens.

The important thing is that the picture preserves all of the play's provocative qualities, all of its glistening humor and all of its undertone of serious character analysis, plus an expansiveness of scene that does Mr. Barry fuller justice than he ever has been done before.

Much of the effectiveness of the film, of course, can be traced to Katharine Hepburn's fine command of the role of Tracy, which she created upon the stage. Stigmatized only a few short months ago by a premature oracle of the celluloids as one of the stars who was "poison at the boxoffice," Miss Hepburn arises now in all her might to confound her critics. It is not improbable that her performance in her present role will win her an Academy "Oscar" for the best screen work of the year by an actress. "The Philadelphia Story," however, is no vehicle for the glorification of any single role. Miss Hepburn, more conclusively than on the stage, finds herself sharing the rich honors of the play with Cary Grant and James Stewart—the former as her renegade, but finally regenerated, first husband, Mr. Stewart as the writer who refuses to set down the story he was sent out to get. Each is in his element and proves it by the deftness of his work.

Stripped of its wealth of embroidery, the story of "The Philadelphia Story" is not too rugged, but it is so scintillantly and smoothly written and acted as to take on considerable importance as a model of what can be done with marital muddles in the hands of experts. These experts extend beyond authors and stars and include the principal members of the supporting cast. Mary Nash, as the distraught mother chained to the uppercrust proprieties; Virginia Weidler, as her younger daughter, wise beyond her years; Roland Young, the bibulously hopeful philanderer; John Halliday, the detached and unpredictable father, and John Howard, as the potential second bridegroom, with the heart of commoner and the mind of a cad, all contribute to the brittleness and brilliance of a film play upon which the producers have expended every resource at their command. Not to be omitted from the roster of those primarily responsible for the sparkle of a luminous comedy is Ruth Hussey, who would add luster to any magazine's photographic department.

To round out as nearly a perfect entertainment as is apt to be encountered in any season of theatergoing, the Palace this week also presents a colorful travel-reel, "Mediterranean—Port of Call," Pete Smith's "More About Nostradamus" and a new issue of the picturized news events. But it is the "news events" picturized in "The Philadelphia Story" that comprise the program's priceless piece de resistance. Miss this one and you cheat yourself of one of the best of the best.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Feb. 5 (INS).—Hot off the wire from New York is news that Columbia put in a bid of $200,000 for Gertie Lawrence's stock hit, "Lady in the Dark," before the opening night programs had been thrown away. That, my friends, is the biggest opening shot offer ever made for a stage show and so spirited has the bidding become between various studios that the boys are now up to $275,000, with Moss Hart still playing coy.

PARSONS

I was most amused to hear that none other than Greta Garbo had sent an emissary backstage to arrange an interview with Moss and that they had a secret huddle about G. G. starring in the movie version. I haven't seen the show, but from the reviews this fantastic farce about a sophisticated lady who gets herself hilariously psychoanalyzed should be a movie natural. If Columbia should come out the winner, they'll star Irene Dunne in the Lawrence role.

Did I tell you, or didn't I, yesterday that Buddy De Sylvia would move into the top production spot at Paramount? I did! He has been appointed by Y. Frank Freeman to take the place left vacant by William Le Baron. That means that Buddy is going to concentrate on Hollywood instead of Broadway. His first picture under the new arrangement is Bing Crosby's "Birth of the Blues," and Buddy's first official act was to sign Mary Martin as feminine lead, with 5-year-old Carolyn Lee in a comedy spot. "Rhythm on the River," the first one with Mary and Bing, was thoroughly panned by the critics, but it fared all right at the boxoffice and that's what counts.

Apparently Hal Wallis, now in New York, was intrigued with "Arsenic and Old Lace," the play about the sweet old ladies who kill 'em and bury 'em in the cellar. He called Jack Warner long distance and said that he had bought the play from the authors, Russel Crouse and Howard Lindsay, who also wrote "Life With Father." Warners may bring Boris Karloff for the part he creates on the stage—that of the crazy brother, who thinks he is Karloff. Marjorie Rambeau and May Robson are being discussed for the gentle murderers. Allyn Joslyn, another movie actor, has an important role in the show. The price paid is $100,000 and Warners were glad to pay it because of the competition for the film rights.

With all the studios bidding for Rita Hayworth, Harry Cohn has decided to keep her right at home. He made up his mind to that a long time ago, but it wasn't until a few days ago that he had a vehicle for her. You'll say it is rightly named when I tell you it is "But Beautiful." I told you a long time ago that Fred Astaire was about to put his name on a contract. Well, "But Beautiful" is the picture, costarring Fred and Rita, and Gene Markey producing with Jerome Kern, no less, furnishing the tunes.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Cary Grant in the Santa Monica Hospital — a flu sufferer; Quentin Reynolds' brother, Jim, has been long-distancing Priscilla Lane every day; Dorothy Lamour received a $10,000 bonus from Paramount and is she proud? The check was given her, not only because her pictures make money, but because she is cooperative with every branch of the studio; Ruth Chatterton opens in her play, "Pygmalion," at the Biltmore Monday night. While in Hollywood she'll be the guest of Jessie and Dick Barthelmess. All of Ruth's friends will be glad to see her.

Seats are going like hot cakes for the Greek air and stage benefit at Grauman's Chinese. The Charlie Feldmans are entertaining with a party in honor of Lady Mendl.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Feb. 5.

When Germany took over France they also confiscated all our American pictures they could find in that country. But the only one they're showing in the occupied countries is "Grapes of Wrath." And if that isn't terrific propaganda for Hitler, I don't know what is, because the foreword says this picture shows the condition of affairs in America.

HOPPER

For a year and a half little Joan Carroll had a contract with Twentieth Century-Fox—was kept there as a threat to Shirley Temple. As you know, Joan has made a terrific hit on Broadway in "Panama Hattie," but now Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer owns it, and again Shirley Temple scores. She'll play it on the screen.

It's about time Ann Sothern got her chance. Months ago Metro paid a big price for the song, "The Last Time I Saw Paris," especially for Ann. Whether or not it will be done in "Panama Hattie" remains to be seen, but Ann will be terrific.

The New York critics' selection of Katharine Hepburn as the best picture actress of the year will do Katie more harm than good, 'cause we always have resented their telling us who is best. Katharine gave a brilliant performance—no one can deny it. But I have a hunch Hollywood is rooting for Martha Scott. I know I am.

Jack Oakie's pantomime was so good in "The Great Dictator" that they asked him to put some into "The Great American Broadcast," in which he plays an operatic tenor. Here's what he does: In a crowded elevator Oakie feels his garter slip its moorings and fall down around his heel. In trying to replace the thing without attracting attention or bumping into people he goes through some very funny gyrations, and, of course, is unsuccessful. Leaves the elevator with garter dragging, and the door clamps down on him. It's called the "garter scene," and is so good they're using it as a running gag throughout the entire picture.

Ted Reed, now directing "Her First Beau," phoned Jackie Cooper the other day at his home, and was told Jackie was "soaring" off the edge of Palos Verdes bluffs in a glider. When he finally got Jackie out of the breezes, Reed put his foot down. "'Soaring,'" he said, "is all very well when we shoot it at the studio on a stage. But I won't have you risking your neck off the Redondo cliffs!—At least, not till the picture's finished. Then we'll both go!"

Little Eleanor Stewart, who plays the lead in "Pirates on Horseback," which is another Hopalong Cassidy, is cute as a button.

"Big Boy" Williams doesn't see any marriage with Lupe, 'cause he's not used to taking orders and doesn't like being told off in public. Well, who does?

John Qualen, who nearly wrecked his film career by playing the father of the Quints (because every time his face appeared on the screen after that the audience howled and remembered him only as the frightened father of five!), has never even seen those little girls. So now he's off with his family to visit them. Says people ask him so many questions about them that he feels he just must have some first-hand information.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, Feb. 5.

IN GINGER ROGERS' new picture Director Garson Kanin needs someone to play the role of Ginger's mother—someone who looks like Ginger. And so negotiations now are being made for Lela Rogers, Ginger's mother, to play that role in the picture. . . . Lela's name once was linked in the columns with that of J. Edgar Hoover. Her friends, Deems Taylor and Harold Ross, discussed this report at a restaurant table, and in tones which were not hushed. They knew Hoover was seated near by. Why should Lela get herself tied up with a copper?" Taylor asked . . . "I dunno," Ross shrugged. "Just because a flatfoot happens to be handsome . . ." Hoover rose from his table, approached them and said: "I won't raise a finger to help you when you're kidnaped."

ALEXANDER KING, the stage editor who collaborated with Clare Boothe in a new show about Haiti, returned to that country recently. As soon as he disembarked he went directly to the hotel room he had reserved. On the table he found an envelope addressed to "A. King." Inside was a touching letter: "I am a young widow (21), with one child, and Fates have been most unkind. Yours is a sympathetic face, and I feel that I can unburden my grief to you. With your sympathetic sense I'm sure you will understand and agree to see me, at your convenience. Sincerely" . . . It was a touching note, sure to elicit sympathy. But, except for the salutation, it was all mimeographed."

THE THEATER GUILD invited 50 members of the swanky Seventh Regiment, and their ladies, for the Friday evening performance of "Liberty Jones." The Seventh Regiment uniform is one of long tradition. Jefferson Davis saw those uniforms before the Civil War began, and when he was elected to the Presidency of the Confederacy he patterned the uniforms of his entire army after those of the Seventh Regiment . . . The 50 socialites wanted to wear their regimental uniforms at the theater, but the United States Army frowns upon such formal dress. And so the disappointed blue-bloods, obeying, will feel practically naked in their white-tie-and-tails.

AT THE WHITE HOUSE last week a dinner was given for The Open Road—an organization which sends groups of teachers and social workers on six-week trips to various sections of the country. The President was unable to attend the dinner. Mrs. Roosevelt expressed his regrets and told the guests that he had asked her to relate this story about Theodore Roosevelt: When T. R. was in the White House he once said: "If I could only be President AND Congress for one day!" . . . "What would you do then?" he was asked . . . "I would immediately enact a law," he replied, "compelling each Congressman to visit at least six States before qualifying for office."

WILLKIE MAHONEY, who wrote the gags for "Panama Hattie," now is bragging that he even receives fan mail from Greek soldiers. "If you don't believe me," Mahoney declares, "I'll show you the Italian postmark" . . . Mrs. Lyon Boston disrupted the long-distance telephone service when she visited her family in Boston. She told the operator: "This is Mrs. Lyon Boston in Boston. I want to speak to Mr. Boston in New York."

JANE COWL now converses in baby talk. She refers to herself as "Janie-Wanie" and says that her show "opened in Filumdelfium" . . . Anna Louise Strong, who just returned from the Orient, reports that the lines of combat between the Chinese and Japanese are not marked clearly and that postal employes are permitted to pass through the lines and make their deliveries. She reports the case of a man who mailed himself through the lines safely.

SONIA SLONIM, the French scenario writer, was publicized upon her arrival here last week. She was the only woman among the passengers who made the trip from Morocco on board the Guadalupe. Miss Slonim told the reporters at the pier that she had no stories to tell them. But last night at Sardi's she revealed this one: She was in Casablanca, Morocco's capital, waiting for her papers to clear. She went to a movie where, because of the war, only old silent pictures were shown. The feature that day was "Captain Blood" . . . In the audience were the French sailors whose fleet just had been sunk by the British at Oran. The sailors sat in silence during the scenes in which Captain Blood agreed to ally himself with the British fleet to fight the enemy. And in the final scene, when Blood triumphed and a closeup was shown of the flag of Britain waving victoriously, the defeated sailors of Oran rose from their seats—and cheered.

That Sarong Idea They Have In Hollywood

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Feb. 5.—We have it from an expert today. Dorothy Lamour hasn't been wearing a sarong all these years. It's been a lie.

Only genuine sarong in the history of Hollywood, according to our man, 's being worn by Miss Brenda Marshall. He said, furthermore, that a lady could take a bath in a sarong, if she were an expert, without ever getting it wet.

That was something Dorothy couldn't do. She took a lot of baths in a lot of tropical typhoons, but her sarong always came out soaking.

"Trouble with her sarong," reported Dr. Louis Vincenot, "was that it wasn't. It was just a Hollywood concoction. It would have given a native girl the shivers. Why, I understand it stayed on with hooks and eyes. Tch-tch-tch."

Is South Sea Expert

Dr. Vincenot is the movies' South Sea Island expert. He has supervised 55 pictures based on themes about life down where the trade winds blow. Now he's working on his fifty-sixth. It's called "Singapore Woman." Miss Marshall is the woman. She wears the sarong.

This consists of a piece of cloth about one yard wide and four yards long. She wraps it around her waist and it covers her legs below the knees.

Dr. Vincenot said that because Miss Marshall was a white woman starring in an American movie, he was letting her wear a brassiere kind of an arrangement, too. Otherwise she'd be wearing only a skirt, with the top part of her bare.

The doctor said he'd had a lot of trouble with the master minds trying to make movies about life in the tropics.

Jungles All Wrong, Too

"Take jugle pictures," he said. "You never have seen one yet except those in which all the white men tramp through the greenery in leather boots. People don't wear boots in the jungles. It's too hot. Their feet swell up. Got to cut the boots off."

Business of taking a bath while wearing a sarong is something that Miss Marshall won't have to do. Dr. Vincenot said it was easy. He produced a masculine South Sea Islander, with sarong, to demonstrate. Seems when you get in the tub you just lift up your sarong and tie it around your neck. Later you let your sarong down and sponge your chest.

Dr. Vincenot's man had pants on under his sarong. He said he never had taken a bath in a sarong. He said he never even wore a sarong, except when the movies paid him $11 a day. Even then he feels a little strange. He keeps his pants on all the time, except when he's actually before the cameras. Then he sheds 'em.

Astaire to Rest In Small Resorts

Under the orders of his physician, Fred Astaire has left Hollywood and will spend three months idling about in small Eastern and Southern resorts.

During the filming of Paramont's "Second Chorus," Astaire lost 15 pounds in weight. Exhaustion due to to the strenuous dance routines of the picture prevented his recuperation. His physician ordered him to take a complete rest.

Anna Neagle Again Victoria In Little's Film

"QUEEN OF DESTINY." RKO-Radio picturization, produced by Imperator, of a screen play by Miles Malleson and Robert Vansittart, starring Anna Neagle, with Anton Walbrook, C. Aubrey Smith, Walter Rilla, Charles Carson, Gretta Wegener, Felix Aylmer, Louis Casson, Pamela Standish, Gordon McLeod, Stuart Robertson, Olaf Olsen, Henry Hallatt, Wyndham Goldie, Malcolm Keen, Frederick Leister, Derrick de Marney, Marie Wright, Joyce Bland and Aubrey Dexter. Directed by Herbert Wilcox. Previewed January 27. At the Little Theater.

Any one who's ever written a love letter—as who hasn't?—knows that a bit later he's going to write one that's even better; that's the very thing star Anna Neagle and director Herbert Wilcox have done in the Little's newly arrived "Queen of Destiny." Again Queen Victoria is the object of their affections and their salute is even more splendid than it was in "Victoria the Great."

What's more, this second tribute is actually a different one. The same principals are here, of course, but new episodes of that amazing woman's life are the subjects of their adventures; a splendidly careful Technicolor job brings out rich detail of those royal houses of Great Britain that are now targets for destruction by the Nazis. Buckingham Palace, Balmoral and Windsor Castles furnish a background of rare authenticity.

With such exceptional technical sources to draw upon, it's small wonder that Miss Neagle and Wilcox took the treacherous path of following their memorable, successful first biography with a second. It's asking a lot for one character to be the subject of two films in a short period of time, but that "very little lady" is equal to it. Actually, "Queen of Destiny" was filmed over two years ago, shotrly after "Victoria the Great," as "Sixty Glorious Years," and the Little has been shrewd in postponing its first Washington appearance until the details of the first had been covered by the rush of history.

Her Triumphant Jubilee

While Miss Neagle always makes it clear that her Victoria is a woman, she never loses that consciousness of the flow of events. The two are completely intertwined. She is a young girl when married to the admirable Albert, but also the Queen. She is an impetuous wife playing at archery with her husband, but she's also a ruler, feeling her way way to power. She is a faithful helpmeet when Albert plans and finally triumphs with his Crystal Palace exhibition, but she's a sovereign opening the first world's fair, as well.

This royalty-with-the-human-touch has always been the British Queen's most endearing characteristic and again it brings triumph as theatric tour-de-force. Miss Neagle's portrayal is even more authoritative and moving than it was in the earlier film, while the climax she achieves as the Diamond Jubilee approaches is the summation of the colorful film.

Peace and Germany

Episodes for "Queen of Destiny" are all different from the earlier film. She suffers with the death of Gen. Gordon at Khartum, hears of Disraeli's Suez plans over the dinner table, at which business was generally forbidden; she visits her old seamstress when the latter has missed the Diamond Jubilee parade, watches the Scotch Highlanders dance and is forced by Albert to give first place to a blacksmith's son, second to her own. With Albert she dances to Strauss on her own wedding day and on her daughter's. Nor are the Charge of the Light Brigade, Florence Nightingale, the Iron Duke or Kitchener forgotten.

Anton Walbrook's Prince Albert is a particularly warming portrait, while all the other roles are drawn with understanding and not too much showy reverence. And with England at the crossroads she has reached today, the Queen's aims for peace, particularly with Germany, are striking—especially so since the film was completed almost a year before the war began.

Glamour Gal Now At Home on Range

Harry Sherman is bringing glamour to the ranges.

He has just completed "In Old Colorado," thirty-third of the Hopalong Cassidy series, in which Margaret Hayes played the leading feminine role. Miss Hayes won fame when she was chosen as the best artist's model of 1940 and also as the best photographers' model of 1940.

Today, he announced the casting of Frances Gifford in his next picture of the Cassidy series. Miss Gifford, a Long Beach high school alumna, is regarded as one of the most beautiful of Hollywood's young leading women. She has just completed "The Reluctant Dragon" for Walt Disney.

'Dancing Dynamo' Wins Film Role

A Cuban "dancing dynamo" in the person of 5 foot, 225-pound Sergio Orta has Hollywood.

Senor Orta arrived in the film capital, from New York, where he won sensational success at the Havana-Madrid and Club Bali, for his Cuban dance interpretations.

The Havana dance wizard makes his bow to screen audiences in the "Minnie From Trinidad" number in "Ziegfeld Girl" in which, together with Judy Garland, he'll do his authentic La Conga routine. In addition, Orta is directing the 14 couples and 60 showgirls who will also be seen in the Calypso number of the musical spectacle.

Stewart Fan Once Served Star Hash

James Stewart has received a letter from a man who "knew him when." Stewart, a struggling actor in New York, used to dine frequently in a cheap little basement restaurant. There was one waiter who always served him and listened to Jimmy's troubles as he dished up the hash. This same waiter wrote him a nostalgic letter recalling the days before "The Philadelphia Story."

Three pages of Stage and Screen appear in Sunday's Post.

Columbia

Moving into the Columbia Theater this morning, "Gone With the Wind" brings more from the Palace than the Technicolor film on which it is so brilliantly printed. It has added more records to an already imposing collection.

More than 400,000 Washingtonians have seen the film during its two year-apart engagements.

And one young man estimates he has seen the film 109 times!

He is David Payne, captain of the Palace Theater ushers, whose record, to be sure, is a professional one, but the fact remains that 109 times is a lot of times to see a picture which takes 3 hours and 40 minutes to unspool.

While Mr. Payne's record must be unique, several hundred filmfans have stopped theater attendants to boast that this is their second or third visit. For their benefit, the Columbia engagement (popular prices!) is so arranged as not to disturb their habits. Doors will open daily at 9 a. m., the film will go on the screen at 9:30 for its first showing, at 9 p. m., for its final runthrough of the day.

Meanwhile no one has estimated how many times Vivien Leigh has heard Clark Gable slam that door and resolve that she'll go back to Tara, that's what she'll do.

Ice Arena

Skimming into its final performances at the Uline Ice Arena, Third and M Streets Northeast, the "Ice-Capades of 1941" also glides into the home stretch thoroughly at home in the splendid new sports palace. A matinee Saturday afternoon at 2:30 preceded Sunday night's closing performance.

With champion performers, this skating revue puts a sturdy emphasis on comedy and the specialties of its stars. Russell Markert, of the Radio City Music Hall staff, directed the production and put it on ice as the saying goes. Once there, the company of 75 dances to the music of Peter de Rose, John LaTouche and Mitchell Parish, a formidable song-writing trio.

Star of the "Ice-Capades" is the English Belita, whose strides are as swift as her leaps are sure. She offers several charming numbers of which "Royal Blue" is the most captivating. Other leading lady of this ice saturnalia is Vera Hruba, the much-publicized Czech star. Miss Hruba is intoduced in a stunning dance to Wagner's Magic Fire Music and proves herself a true Valkyrie of the ice.

Comedians are harder to single out for praise because of their number. Doing their part to prove that ice revues can be as funny as they are dashing are Ruth Mack, Everett McGowan, Eric Waite, Joe Jackson, jr., Jackson and Lynam, Al Suretts and Serge Flash. Other principals in the group include Robin Lee, the Thaells, Pierre Benoit, Lois Dworshak and a superb fellow named "Red" McCarthy.

All in all, it's a good example of America's latest favorite indoor sport.

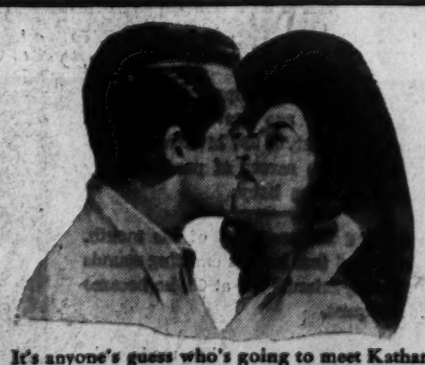
are three jolly chums from P-H-I-L-A-D-E-L-P-H-I-A

A blue-blooded heiress (spirited, sporting, scandalizing) gets herself engaged to a self-made stuffed shirt (pompous, petty and prudish)! When she sets out to deflate him, the feathers fly! You'll love the way Katharine Hepburn bowls him over.

Besides the stuffed shirt, there are two other fellows—they both think Katharine is rare, reckless and racy. Cary Grant is the ex-husband who's crazy about removing the 'ex' and Jimmy Stewart is a reporter who hates the assignment but loves the subject of it!

Champagne flows... moonlight beams... and things look pretty romantic to Katharine and Jimmy around midnight! They look pretty suspicious to a couple of other fellows but the whole scene will be a laughing matter to you!



It's anyone's guess who's going to meet Katharine and the parson at the finish line! But it's a fast and racy story to the amazing end! (No wonder the play rocked and shocked Broadway for a solid year.)

D. C. Guardsmen's First Day at Meade

Fort George G. Meade, Md., Feb. 5.—Special troops of the Twenty-ninth Division spent most of their first day of a year in camp today looking for a place to stay.

The District Guardsmen arrived here this morning, unloaded from trucks of the 104th Quartermaster Regiment into a corrugated field of frozen mud. Burdened with packs and barracks bags and foot lockers and all the housekeeping paraphernalia of an army, they pushed their way through carpenters, electricians, truck drivers and laborers to their barracks. Then they turned 'round and went back to the field again.

MAJ. LOUIS GOSORN, commanding the special troops, takes notes on their arrival at camp

The barracks weren't ready. Carpenters still banged away inside them. Heating plants were not in operation. So the troops sat down in the thawing mud to wait.

Maj. Louis M. Gosorn, commanding the special troops, set up his office on a table in the mess hall of headquarters company, while carpenters hammered away at one end of the long building and cooks knocked a stew together at the other end.

Details of the Twenty-ninth Military Police Company went out to replace or supplement civilian guards at busy intersections. The sound of hammers and power saws was everywhere.

This afternoon, the special troops clambered back into trucks and traveled a mile or so southward from their camp to that of the 104th Quartermaster Regiment, where they settled down for the night. They hoped to be in their own camp tomorrow.

The pilot of the upper plane stopped his engines and the pilot of the lower craft brought both down safely

Odd Jobs

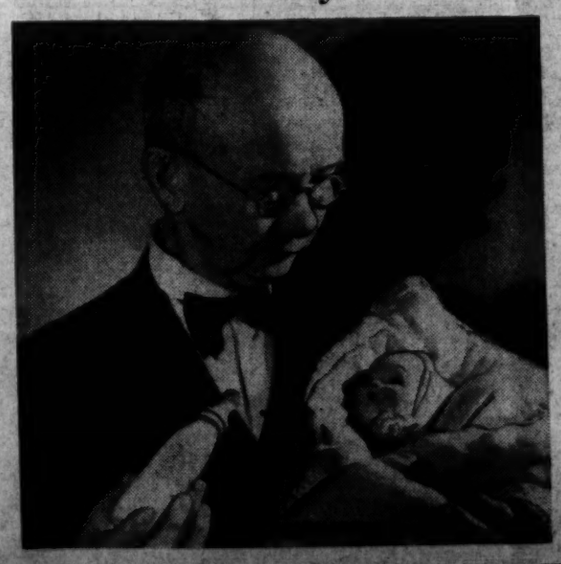
Man, 72, Cries Like a Baby To Make His Living

Shaving soap which slipped between his lips six years ago gave 72-year-old Thomas L. Meister, of 927 M Street Northwest, his unique career of professionally imitating a crying baby.

In getting the soap out of his mouth, Meister found that he was emitting sounds like a crying infant. So, at 66, he became a ventriloquist.

Since then, he says, he has made millions of people laugh by carrying a baby-like bundle in crowded stores and on the streets and "making it cry like the dickens."

He now makes a living by appearing at parties and entertainments. For recreation, he does the same baby act in railroad stations and bus depots.



But his ventriloquism is often too life-like. Three times he has been "arrested" by Washington police and nearly booked on kidnaping charges. And once, in New York, he led a 7-mile chase through crowded subways, followed by a special detail of suspicious detectives.

Here he hopes to entertain at one of Mrs. Roosevelt's White House parties.

Before discovering his "life's work," Meister says he worked at 65 different trades. He was chef in an army camp during the World War and has worked as a wood cutter, a museum lecturer and a farmer.

He also has become proficient at imitating animal sounds and claims he can "talk" to any animal that lives. Once, he says, he talked to an elephant, but with gestures. "That one took 15 minutes and 50 cents worth of peanuts."

The Old and New in Silhouettes

Long, Tall Look Sought in Lines Of Spring Styles

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor.

THE SILHOUETTE is the thing this season and the slogan might well be "Follow the straight and narrow." It's fashionable this spring to look as if you have been stretched out lengthwise—not to the toothpick stage, but with a new look of slenderness accomplished by clothing designs.

Gone is the figure hugging silhouette of 1940 and in its place appears the soft supple outline of 1941. The secret is that last year's model dress has been lifted out of its rigid, static state, making it more flexible and easy to wear.

The causal observer may think that all this will lead to larger waistlines. Actually, this is not true. Waistlines are just becoming more natural. There is still a tendency for the waistline to be clearly defined so that it continues to look small.

"Controlled" Hipline

In keeping with the slender silhouette, shoulders are narrower and less upholstered. Some skirts have a slight flare, but most of them depend on plenty of pleats, gathers, and godet treatments to provide fullness. To retain this straightness of line, seams are flat, and decoration and tucks—when used—tend to carry the eye upward. In some cases this is accomplished by concentrating pleats and other fullness toward the side. With all, there is a preference for the "controlled" hipline—that is, smoothness about the hips with pleats or slight flares starting immediately below.

Bodices fit into this new scheme of the natural way in dress by a moderate display of fullness. This fullness extends to the sleeve line, in some cases making the full kimono or dolman sleeve.

Suits, too, carry off the narrow silhouette with high honors. Whether the jacket is double or single breasted and has a notched or rounded collar, it will be cut longer, giving a softened, graceful look. It may be wrist or fingertip length, but usually hangs straight at the waist or is just nipped in the slightest bit.

Streamlined Century

Making much to-do about the silhouette is not peculiar to our streamlined twentieth century. Back in seventeenth-century France, when the Louises cracked their whips, women were concerned about the silhouette. When the hoop was discarded, women thought they would never look modish again.

The first of the nineteenth century marked the beginning of a series of distortions to which the female figure was subjected for approximately 90 years. By the middle of the nineteenth century the breadth of the silhouette reached a limit which has never been equaled. But by the late nineteenth century exaggerated breadth was no more, and the "hour glass" silhouette took its place in the public eye.

Giving all due credit to the grand dames of other ages and lands, the women of 1941 America appear silhouetted in the most flattering mode worn in several years. Every detail of it points to a natural upward trend. Straighter skirts tend to flatten would-be curves giving the appearance of a more slender torso. Even the hair is worn with a graceful becoming upsweep.

Not So Early

When trying to rout the school age generation out of bed on time mornings, it might give them pause to be reminded that college students in 1840 began their day at 4:30 a. m. with an importunate trumpet call to rise. At 5 a. m. they were expected to be dressed for an hour's study before breakfast.

This year's silhouette is not a radical change from last year's, as shown by this 1941 dress and suit in contrast to sketches of 1940 modes. The dress below, worn by Ida Lupino, actress, has a bloused, yellow jersey top and pleated skirt of yellow, blue and white. Shoulders are less pronounced with easy bodice fullness, compensated by slimming of hipline. The Forstmann tweed wool suit (right) champions the cause of bright colors in a new classic version with a quartette of smart pockets and box pleats for ease and grace

If Reducing, Eat by Calorie, Not Label

By Ida Jean Kain

THERE are no "reducing" foods. Don't be misled into thinking that you can eat something special and get thin. You can't!

Certain products are designed expressly for the overweight. They are so low in calories that they may be included in the diet with little danger of exceeding the calorie limit on which you can reduce. They help to give a sense of fullness and that is part of the normal satisfaction of hungar.

Among these are various breads. Many of the Hollywood stars favor a special loaf of this kind. It averages about 45 calories per slice—half as many as a slice of the average bread. Other excellent space fillers are the crunchy, low calorie wafers.

But the reducer's foods which really serve their purpose are labeled according to the exact number of calories per slice, wafer, or serving so that these may be accounted for in the day's calorie total. When a product professes to be "reducing" but fails to state the number of calories it supplies, you may be sure it reduces by virtue of an accompanying low calorie diet.

Calories Only Gauge

When there is no information as to the exact number of calories a food or beverage contributes to the day's menus, it is just wishful thinking to imagine that it will reduce. The whole question of weight hinges on the calories consumed and a food is fattening or nonfattening in direct ratio to the calories it furnishes. The calorie is the only gauge.

Once I heard someone explain that an apple is more fattening than most foods containnig 100 calories because of its sugar content. One hundred calories adds up to just 100 calories always, whether in the form of an apple, a potato, two tablespoons of sugar, a tablespoon of butter or a bonbon. But because they take up so much space, two apples or two potatoes are almost a meal whereas a couple of bonbons only make you want more.

Beware of Mere Claims

The first thing you want to know about a food is how many calories it contains and paralleling this, how many vitamins or minerals it supplies. Don't be impressed when the sponsors of, say, a candy bar, warn you that "the lack of minerals in your diet may result in obesity," then assure you that the bar contains "more iron than a quart of whole milk, five times as much calcium as a pound of spinach, and ten times as much phosphorous as a pound of butter." They haven't told you anything. Although milk is the most nearly perfect food, it is low in iron. Butter is a rich source of vitamin A—not phosphorous. And all the calcium supplied in spinach could be put in your eye.

If you have any doubt as to whether a certain product is valuable for its minerals and vitamins or whether it will aid in your weight loss, ask your doctor's opinion. Or, write to the company and request the calorie content. It is a consistent, low calorie diet that will get your weight down.

Learn to Sing Patriotic Songs

OUR glorious National Anthem, "The Star-Spangled Banner!" But how many know all its stirring words, the story behind it?

With our patriotic songbook, you may refresh your memory, learn anew America's rich store of song—song that in these perilous times has deeper significance than ever.

Thrilling is the story of "The Star-Spangled Banner!" During the night of the historic siege of Fort McHenry in 1814, a young American prisoner, Francis Scott Key, watched aboard an enemy vessel. At dawn, when he saw our flag was still flying, he penned the immortal lines:

"Oh! say, can you see by the dawn's early light,
What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming!
Whose broad stripes and bright stars thro' the perilous fight,
O'er the ramparts we watch'd were so gallantly streaming—"

Another great song is "Columbia, The Gem of the Ocean." It begins:

"Oh, Columbia the gem of the ocean,
The home of the brave and the free—"

The famed "Dixie" is dear to Northerners and Southerners alike.

"I wish I was in de land ob cotton,
Old times dar are not forgotten—"

Mary Haworth's Mail

Boy, 20, College Senior and Brilliant Scholar, Pleads 'Fear of Crowds' in Refusing to Take Best Girl to Dances and Parties; She Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 20, well liked by both sexes and considered attractive in appearance. For two years, I have been going with a boy who is a few months younger than I am. He is a senior in college and will graduate this June. However, he has several more years of schooling ahead, as he is planning to enter the medical profession.

Now, here is my problem: For the past four weeks I have not seen him, although he telephones me every evening and says he still loves me. He sustained an injury recently and gives this as his reason for not coming to see me; but I know that he goes to classes and drives his car on errands for his parents.

While we were "dating," he took me to the movies, the theater, horse shows, etc. (he is interested in horses and has a few of his own); but when I would invite him to my sorority dances he always declined to go. Also, whenever we were invited out among persons that both of us have known for years, he declined to go—always with the lame excuse that he is "afraid of crowds." Why is this?

Mother tells me I should go with other boys and enjoy myself. Three or four other young men have been asking me for dates, and I have gone out with one of them several times in recent weeks. We had fun together, but I found myself thinking of the other boy. He tells me, too, that he can't bear the thought of my going out with other boys; that he can't study or rest comfortably when I am out with someone else.

Should I go with other boys? Or should I sit and wait for the day when my friend will take me out and learn to be at ease among people? Mother says he is "very juvenile," even though he is graduating from college at such an early age, and even though he is a brilliant student. By the way, he telephones my younger sister and talks to her for 30 minutes at a time. I think his mother has him tied to her apron strings. Please tell me what to do.

GEORGINA.

Romance With Neurotic Always Means Heartache

DEAR GEORGINA: Bewilderment and heartache are the inevitable portion of any healthy minded individual who becomes deeply or permanently involved, emotionally, with a neurotic person—and your long-time beau's timid refusal to participate in group social activities is a neurotic symptom. His behavior implies that he feels incapable of making a "good impression" on "first appearance," in a situation where he would be required to compete with others, in the "play arena," on a free-for-all basis.

Rather than face down his fears and courageously risk making a "poor impression" on the first round, with the firm intention of working up from there—if necessary—to a happier acceptance, he chooses not "to play the game." In other words, he retreats from life on the social front, and tries to compensate for this retreat by making a "brilliant" showing on the scholastic front.

It is just this shortsighted indulgence of his neurotic fears that makes him a "bad bet" as a sweetheart or possible husband. If (1) he realized the peculiarity or abnormality of his reactions; (2) felt a proper concern to correct them, and (3) was seeking your own or anyone else's advice, guidance and assistance in "working his way out of them," there might be some justification for your continuing to invest precious time, hope and affection in the relationship.

As things stand, however, you can do no better than to follow your mother's suggestion to "go out with other boys and enjoy yourself."—for the admirable purpose of keeping a healthy emotional balance of your own, sustained (of necessity) through a normal social exchange with other normal personalities.

M. H.

Another 'Illuminating Slant on Divorce'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I take issue with your correspondent of January 30 who argues that "it is better to adapt to one's husband's infidelity, than to live without him, if you love him."

Never had it occurred to me that my husband could be unfaithful. To me, he represented everything that was good, fine and honorable. But he betrayed my trust, and the shock was indescribable. It took me three weeks to recover my equilibrium and start making plans for our two children and myself. When my faith in my husband died, my love died also.

I realized every problem and responsibility that divorce would bring, but I accepted them in preference to having my children and myself live with a man whom I now considered to be indecent, immoral and greatly dishonorable. I could not see how association with that type of man could benefit any of us. (Parenthetically, may I say that I had tried, in every way, to be "the perfect wife," physically, mentally and spiritually; and that I had known nothing but praise from my husband).

His "affair" (as he admitted) was based on a strictly sexual attraction, for which there was no excuse. Had he really loved the woman, I might have felt differently. As it was, his conduct was simply immoral—and I had no desire to continue living with him, just because I had been fooled by him previously.

The result of my disillusionment was a divorce and far greater happiness for myself and the children. The court granted reasonable alimony; I have found a part-time position which adds both to my income and interests, and yet gives me plenty of leisure to spend with the children. I do a great deal of civic work, on the side, and have never permitted the memory of my unfortunate marriage to "wreck my life."

Furthermore, my husband does not consider me a "cold, unforgiving woman" for leaving him. He absolutely feels that my self respect gave me no other choice. And if he wrecks his career, his future or his life because of my divorce, I must feel that he is responsible for that sad fate. I may feel sorry for him, but I certainly shall not blame myself, since it was his disloyalty—not mine—that precipitated divorce. My children are too young to pine for an absentee father. They are happy and gay; and when they are older I shall take my chances on winning their "stamp of approval."

I trust, Miss Haworth, that you will find this an equally "illuminating slant on divorce"—even though diametrically opposed to the position stated by "Another Mrs. X."

Too-Dry Room Is Harmful

Is your home atmosphere healthfully humid during the winter months? It needs the evaporation of over 20 gallons a day in order to keep the air properly moist when you have your winter heating system going. Not only is a too-dry atmosphere harmful to health, but it is damaging to furniture, musical instruments, fabrics. Particularly does wool suffer from dry air and that means carpets and rugs. So maybe threats to our property will arouse us at last to remedy the situation . . . goodness knows, it's been known long enough that dry air was bad for people!

New Rinse Will Preserve Fabrics

Stockings, lingerie and other personal items must be washed. But every trip to the tub takes a terrific toll of vitality and luster from the fabrics.

Soaps, minerals in water, and other cleaning chemicals loosen the dirt, but fill the pores with a film of alkaline and residual impurities.

A new scientifically prepared compound is now on the market that will bring back the original luster and restore the soft, luxurious feel. It has penetrating properties that get right down into the pores of the silk, wool and cotton, extracting the destruction-causing alkalines, revitalizing the fabrics, removing perspiration stains, etc. To use the rinse you make a simple solution of the compound in which to give the garments that have been washed a final rinsing.

Social Leaders Attend Lend-Lease Hearings

By Hope Ridings Miller

IN A FEW HOURS on Capitol Hill yesterday I heard more amusing stories, glimpsed more interesting people, and gathered more social sidelights than I've run into anywhere else in a week. In the crowded room where the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is in action, I saw a number of prominent women who are taking time out from Luncheons and tea parties to find out, first-hand, exactly what goes on in Congress.

Hope Ridings Miller.

Mrs. Cabot Lodge and Mrs. Courtland Barnes had front-row seats. Mrs. Bennett Clark, also a regular attendant at committee hearings, joined Mrs. Barnes later and the two soon had their heads together in a conference that had to be concluded outside the committee room. I wouldn't be surprised if they were mapping out some important plans that will hit the headlines in a few days.

I understand a record number of Capital hostesses have called off parties for today and are planning to be on hand when—and if—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh appears before the Senate committee. And that reminds me of another rumor I heard floating around Capitol halls. It seems the wife of a topflight official called the office of Senator Walter F. George, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, to find out when Col. Lindbergh is scheduled to appear. She had a frosty reception from the woman who answered the telephone, and very little satisfaction. The conversation, as told to me, went as follows:

"Could you tell me," asked the lady in question, "whether Col. Lindbergh is scheduled to appear before the Foreign Relations Committee on Thursday?"

"Don't think so," was the off-handed answer.

"But is there anyone there who would know?"

"Oh, I'll see," said the secretary who couldn't have been more bored about it. Two minutes later, she was back at the telephone. "Yes, Lindbergh will be there, some time Thursday." And bang wen the receiver.

AT LUNCHEON with Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, his sister, Miss Lucinda Rayburn, and members of the Texas delegation, reminisces on the Congressional reception at the White House were circulating up one side the table and down the other. Most amusing story of all was Representative Nat Patton's account of the President's greeting to him and Mrs. Patton. It seems that just as the Pattons were ready to approach the Chief Executive and the First Lady, the line was stopped for one of those periodic rests that the President takes while he is receiving a long line of guests. But when he looked up and saw the Pattons standing there, he didn't wait for the aide to present them.

"Why, hello, Cousin Nat," said the President, who is fully aware that Patton himself greets everybody as "cousin" and even went so far as to address Queen Elizabeth of England by that title when he was presented to her here at the historic British Embassy garden party.

"We must continue our cousinly relationship, Cousin Nat," laughed the President, "because I don't think I'm going to be able to get any of your royal 'cousins' over here again, any time soon."

Shortly after the luncheon, which took place in the Speaker's dining room (and I understand that room, incidentally, is to be the scene of a party that will make social news next week), Speaker Rayburn and his sister returned to his office to find a letter from their niece, Miss Virginia Rayburn, of Dallas, Tex., telling them that she is planning to be married some time soon. She was in Washington for the round of inauguration festivities and returned home only a few days ago.

SPEAKING OF forthcoming weddings—plans for two that will be of wide interest in Washington have just been completed. Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, niece of the First Lady, who made her bow to society at the White House in 1938, has decided on Saturday, April 12, as the date of her marriage to Edward Proctor Elliott. The ceremony will take place in St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Dedham, Mass. The Rev. Thomas Huntington Chappell will officiate and a reception will follow at the Dedham Country and Polo Club.

Miss Roosevelt is the daughter of Mrs. John Cutter, of Dedham, and Hall Roosevelt. She is a graduate of the Winsor School and studied at the Cranbrook Academy of Art. Mr. Elliott is a graduate of Liverpool University, where he was awarded a fellowship to carry on research in architectural design under Eliel Saarinen at Cranbrook Academy.

ORD PRESTON, JR., son of Mr. and Mrs. Ord Preston, of Washington, will become a benedict on February 22. His fiancee, Miss Marjorie Hope Ellis, daughter of Mrs. George W. Ellis, of Longmeadow, Mass., has just completed plans for the wedding. The 4 o'clock ceremony will take place in Christ Church Cathedral here and will be followed by a reception at the Colony Club in Springfield, Mass.

Mrs. Damon Morris Cummings, sister of the bride-elect, will be matron of honor and only attendant. Mrs. Cummings is the wife of Lieut. Cummings, U. S. N., who is now stationed in Honolulu. The couple will reside in Washington.

Engagement Announced

MISS NATALIE BAYARD MERRILL,
whose engagement to Henry Howard, of Washington and New York, is announced by her moher, Mrs. Grenville Merrill, of Merrillton, Newport, R. I.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

RIDGEWELL, the favorite factotum of Washington parties, who looks like an ambassador in his white tie and tails, says that this is the deadest season in years. Ridgewell is an authority, for he also furnishes men to help at smart parties. They are finding far less work to do this season. Not only have the embassies and legations clamped down on wide scale entertaining, but the common, or garden variety of resident as well.

DUDLEY HARMON

Of all the months in the winter, according to Ridgewell, the quietest is February. Small dinners and informal cocktail parties are about the only kind of social goings-on.

"JOCK" McLEAN is really doing something constructive about defense. He has built an airplane factory in Texas. His wife is as much interested in the project as he and has put some of her money in it too, they say. The McLeans have taken a house in Dallas.

Both like to fly and have a plane, but leave the piloting to others. Miss Evalyn McLean may go to Texas later on to stay with her brother and sister-in-law. This week she is visiting friends near Baltimore.

REPRESENTATIVES Sol Bloom and Hamilton Fish are keeping a death watch these days over House sessions. The other afternoon, very late, only two other Representatives were left in the enormous chamber, but both "Ham" and "Sol" stayed doggedly on until they had finished talking. Neither will leave before the other.

WALTER BRUCE HOWE, chairman of the campaign to raise funds for the National Symphony, will give a cocktail party on Sunday for some of the committee. The affair will take place at the Alibi Club, in the little old-fashioned red brick building in downtown Washington. This unique house is still lit by gas and is otherwise Victorian in atmosphere. Its telephone number is a carefully guarded secret. A men's club, it gets its name, supposedly, from the following rule: If a wife calls up and asks if her husband is there, the servants have orders to say "no." But if she asks if her husband had been there on such and such a night, he must always say "yes."

THE DRAFT is seriously interfering with Washington's stag line. One of those about to disappear from the social scene, though he will stay right on in Washington, is John Galliher. He expects to be named an ensign in the Navy Reserve. Beginning in March, he must attend a school and live at it, getting up at 6:30 every morning and turning the lights out at 10:30 at night.

SOCIAL NOTES: The Misses Joan and Bambie McKenna will entertain at a cocktail party on Sunday . . . Miss Natalie Askanazy will give one tomorrow . . . Edythe Corbin is going to Stowe, Vt., for some skiing while her sister, Dolly, hopes to head in the opposite direction for a vacation in the South . . . Hubert Chanler is spending a week's leave from sea duty with Mrs. Chanler. The former Gertrude Laughlin, she is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Laughlin, at Meridian House.

Boons Entertain Diplomatic Group At Cocktail Party

The Second Secretary of the Netherlands Legation and Mme. Boon gathered in a small, congenial group for cocktails yesterday afternoon at their home on Lowell Street.

Among those who dropped in were the Minister Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Baroness van Boetzelaer. Also from the legation staff, the Counselor and Countess van Rechteren Limpburg, the Commercial Counselor and Mme. Kleijn Molekamp, the First Secretary and Mme. van Houten and the Attache, Valck Lucassen. Still others there were the Military Attache of the Swedish Legation and Mme. Wessel, the Third Secretary of the British Embassy, R. G. Etherington-Smith; Count and Countess Lasocka, of the Polish Embassy; Mr. and Mrs. George Boncesco, Mrs. Robert Pell, Mr. and Mrs. Aldace Walker, Andrew Wylie, George Abell, Col. William Shipp, the Second Secretary of the Canadian Legation and Mrs. Escott Reid and many others.

Dr. and Mme. Boon will entertain at a similar party again next week.

Snowden Fahnestocks Hosts at Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock were hosts at a dinner last night at their residence on Massachusetts Avenue.

Also entertaining at dinner was Clarence Hewes. He expects to go to New Orleans next week for a visit.

Archduke Otto Entertained At Two Parties

Archduke Otto was entertained at a tea yesterday afternoon by the Rev. Dr. Joseph B. Code who gave the party in his Georgetown home. Later in the evening Lyle Kennedy was host at a small supper party in honor of the archduke, who was accompanied to Washington by his aide, Count Henri Dagenfeld.

Among the guests attending the tea were the Air Attache of the Spanish Embassy and Senora de Sierra, Senator George Radcliffe, Senator Richard Russell, Representative and Mrs. John McCormack, Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Hall, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, Lyle Kennedy, Prince Cyril Toumanoff, Miss Eleanor Connely, Judge and Mrs. A. A. Hoehling, Miss Bertha Joseph, the Misses Maude and Catherine C. Cody, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, the Most Rev. Henry J. Rohlman, Bishop of Davenport; Father Raymond A. McGowan, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, Dr. and Mrs. Richard Purcell, Judge Stroud, Miss Dorothy Walker, Dr. and Mrs. Tibor Kerekes, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, Mrs. Andrew Wheller, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Robert Wood, of Philadelphia, and Miss Mary Johnston Turner.

Attending the supper party which Mr. Kennedy gave later were Miss Eleanor Flood, Count Henry Dagenfeld, Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould, Miss Sheila Broderick, Clinton B. Palmer, Miss Suzanne Slingluff, Ralph Lunten and Miss Eileen Boland, and several others.

Miss Merrill's Betrothal Told

Of wide interest here is the announcement by Mrs. Grenville Merrill, of Merrillton, Newport, R. I., of the engagement of her daughter, Natalie Bayard Merrill, to Henry Howard, of Washington and New York.

The prospective bride is a niece of Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, wife of the senior Senator from Rhode Island. Her father, the late Rev. George Grenville Merrill, was rector of Stockbridge, Mass. She attended Rosemary Hall and was presented to society at a dance given by another aunt, Mrs. Nicholas Brown, at Harbour Court, Newport. Miss Merrill's sister is Mrs. Lewis Baker Cuyler, of Princeton, N. J., and her brother, Dr. George Merrill, is a pathologist on the staff of Johns Hopkins in Baltimore. Another aunt is the Viscountess d'Osmoy, of Nice, France.

Mr. Howard studied at Saint George's School, Newport, and was a member of the class of 1929 at Harvard. He is the son of Mrs. George Howard, of New York, and the late Mr. Howard, of Washington. He is the grandson of the late Sir Henry Howard, Minister to The Hague and Ambassador to the Vatican in the World War. Mr. Howard's maternal grandmother was Cecilia Riggs, of Washington, and he is a brother of Mrs. Francis Amory, of Boston.

Dorothy Porter Bride of Henry E. Stauffer

Ceremony Held At Wardman Park In Flower Setting

Wearing the ivory satin gown which her two older sisters had worn at their weddings, Miss Dorothy Porter was married yesterday afternoon to David Rinehart Stauffer, son of Henry E. Stauffer, of Chevy Chase, and the late Mrs. Stauffer.

The ceremony took place at the Wardman Park apartment of the bride's parents, Interstate Commerce Commissioner and Mrs. Claude Rodman Porter. The Rev. Albert Evans, of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, officiated in a setting of palms, ferns and white snapdragons massed beside an improvised altar.

The bride's frock was made with a peplum and embroidery of seed pearls at the waistline, neck and sleeves. Her long train was covered by an old net veil, a family heirloom, and over this she wore wrist length full veil attached to a tiny cap of net, with a lace diadem embroidered in seed pearls. She carried an ivory prayer book with a white orchid and a shower of lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Donald Collins Is Matron of Honor

Mrs. Donald J. Collins, of New Kensington, Pa., was matron of honor and only attendant for her sister. She wore a gown of gold faille with full skirt and close-fitting jacket. Her small hat was trimmed with velvet roses to match those in her bouquet. Henry B. Stauffer was best man for his brother.

Following the ceremony, which was witnessed only by the young couple's families, there was a reception for 300 guests. The bride's mother wore a gown of dull blue crepe trimmed in silver and rhinestones and a corsage of orchids. Assisting her in receiving was the bridegroom's aunt, Miss Sarah Clokely, who wore aqua chiffon and gardenias.

Pouring at the reception were Mrs. Guy Gillette, wife of Senator Gillette of Iowa; Mrs. James L. Baity, wife of the Assistant to the Comptroller General; Mrs. William E. Lee, wife of the Interstate Commerce Commissioner; Mrs. C. William Ramseyer, wife of the Commissioner of the Court of Claims, Mrs. Adam Weir and Mrs. George B. Porter.

Miss Lester Addresses Zonta Club

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Women of the Far East, not those of the Western world, now hold the position of leadership, Muriel Lester, of National Christian Mission, told members of the Zonta Club at their luncheon yesterday.

"We women have been so accustomed to thinking of ourselves as those who have made a fight in the last 30 or 40 years and gained emancipation with our entrance into politics and the professions, that we have overlooked the fact that we have lost our position of leadership in the last ten years," said Miss Lester.

"We have failed to do the things God expects women to do as protectors and preservers of the human race," she declared, asserting the war might have been averted if emancipated women had done their job "instead of looking at their own position to the exclusion of the interests of the human race as a whole.

"It is a horrible thing that we did not save the world from this," Miss Lester declared.

She said that what seemed the "sensible and obvious" things to do (meaning taking measures of defense) was but another step in the wrong direction. When guns seem more important than butter, the people are following Hitler's pattern of thinking, she indicated and added, that such an attitude might lead to extinction.

The basis of the Christian religion is the "Our Father" of The Lord's Prayer, said Miss Lester, pointing out that unless action is founded on the fact that the human race is one, it is not Christian but pagan.

Urging the need for daily prayer and study of the Scriptures, Miss Lester asserted it was useless to talk about saving democracy and Christian civilization unless the people of the democracies applied Christian principles in their lives.

In every nation, she said, Russia, Germany and Japan included, there are countless Christians who "refuse to uphold or bow to totalitarianism, militarism, imperialism or dictatorship."

Many of these people have been killed, she said, but "nobody knows how many have not been." They form a chain of Christian strength throughout the world, she declared, and in Russia, where Bibles have been destroyed, they have memorized chapters and entire books so that Christian teaching can be passed to their children and preserved to posterity.

More than 60 members and guests attended the luncheon, at which Mrs. Nan Street, the Zonta Club president, presided. Miss Etta Mai Russell, juvenile court worker for the Washington Council of Church Women, introduced Miss Lester.

Dance to Aid Church Missions

Missions of the Church of England, which have suffered financially through the war, will benefit from a dance being planned by the Young People's Fellowship of the Episcopal diocese of Washington. The dance will be given at the Raleigh Hotel, through the courtesy of Col. Curt C. Schiffeler, Thursday evening, February 20, at 9 o'clock, and proceeds will go toward the large sum which the Episcopal Church in this country has pledged to aid the British missions.

Reservations for tickets are in charge of Richard L. Cain, vice president of the Y. P. F. of this diocese and chairman of the dance. Assisting him are Lochrane Gary, Miss Dorothy Eckloff, Miss Maude Cutting, president of the Y. P. F. of the diocese; Stanley Machen and Miss Phyllis Orton.

Carolyn Lee Has a Dolly You See

Mrs. Lorraine Good (left), president of the Soroptimist Club, and Miss Estelle Zirkin, one of the members, yesterday presented a Soroptimist doll to Carolyn Lee, little star of the movie, "Virginia," who is spending most of her visit in Washington at Children's Hospital. Taken ill soon after she arrived for the President's Birthday Ball, Carolyn has been at Children's Hospital since. Like other little patients there to whom the club gives dolls, she was delighted with the Soroptimists' gifts

Dr. Anna Rice, of New York, a member of the National Christian Mission, and Mrs. Philip Lee, of Shanghai, were guests of honor and speakers yesterday at the weekly luncheon of the Soroptomist Club at the Willard Hotel.

Mrs. Lorraine Good, president of the club, opened the meeting and Miss Grace Goodpasture, a past president, presided during the program. She discussed the forces of destuction rampant in the world and urged a return to Christian principles and living as a remedy.

Mrs. Lee, a native of China, told of the emancipation of women in her country and of the work they are now doing there.

Miss Goodpasture presented a male quartet, Charles Beaschler, choir leader of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church; Herbert V. Pate, director of music at Calvary Baptist Church; Charles E. Stebbins, of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, and Harwood Hall, of the First Baptist Church, who sang two Negro spirituals.

A huge birthday cake was brought in, honoring Mrs. Caroline Stephen, a past president of the club, on her seventy-fifth birthday.

The current interest in Spanish is doing a great deal to boost the stock of the United States in Latin America, Miss Patricia Rey told members of the Washington Wellesley Club at a tea meeting held yesterday at the Thomas Circle Club. Recently returned from a 10-month tour of South American countries, Miss Rey reported that our southern neighbors are 100 per cent behind President Roosevelt and consider his good neighbor policy "about the best thing that ever happened."

One of the most unusual pieces she displayed was an old mustard jar in the shape of a calf's head, with a small spoon forming the tongue.

At the business meeting at which the club president, Mrs. W. B. Marshall, presided, Mrs. C. O. Thomas, who was the first president of the club, was elected chairman of the nominating committee. Lewis at 12:30. He has spent the past two summers in the Western national parks and will discuss "The National Idea."

Assistant hostesses will be Mrs. Walter Pratt, jr., and Mrs. Edmund Noyes.

CO-ED KNITTERS—A note from Pullman, Wash., in the Christian Science Monitor, says that the Bundles for Britain campaign has reached the dormitories and group houses on the Washington State College campus. Not only are the sorority girls knitting for the women and children of England but they are recruiting men knitters from the fraternities. When the escorts of Pi Beta Phi girls call, they are promptly furnished with needles and yarn and spend a quiet evening knitting. Every girls' dormitory and sorority has pledged an afghan for the Bundles.

NEW OFFICERS—The National Home for Jewish Children at Denver has installed the following officers for 1941: Mrs. Reuben G. Samakow, president; Mrs. A. A. Alloy, first vice president; Mrs. A. Harzenstein, second vice president; Mrs. LaMar E. Harper, third vice president; Mrs. A. Sherman, treasurer; Mrs. Harry Sirkis, recording secetay; Mrs. Wm. E. A. Y. C. Leader Denies Charges Of Radicalism

Charges of communism flung at the American Youth Congress and an Office of Education employe Tuesday by Gene Tunney, former heavyweight champion, yesterday received sharp replies from an AYC leader and Commissioner of Education John Studebaker.

At the same time the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties announced that 27 labor and civil rights groups from Pennsylvania to California had protested "the decision of the Administration to deny the Youth Congress the right to meet "in the Labor Department auditorium.

AYC officials expected the vanguard of 3,000 delegates to this weekend's Town Meeting of Youth to arrive here today. The sessions will open tomorrow night at Turner's Arena with an "open hearing" on the lease-lend bill.

Representatives of the National Foundation for American Youth, an organization sponsored by Gene Tunney, also were expected to arrive today from New York.

Tunney, who has led a fight against the Youth Congress for almost two years, charged in a statement made in New York Tuesday that the A. Y. C. was a "Communist front organization."

The statement demanded that William Hinckley, former chairman of the AYC, "be removed from his $2,900-a-year job in the United States Office of Education, because he is a known Communist fellow traveler."

Commissioner Studebaker said that he had heard "such remarks" about Hinckley before and had them investigated. He added:

"Mr. Hinckley is not and never has been a Communist. He is in no way subversive about anything. If these people who criticize him would work as hard as he does to improve the future of this country, they would be doing a great national service. . . . His salary, incidentally, is not $2,900. It is $2,600."

Joseph Cadden, secretary of the Youth Congress, said that Tunney's statements "are too preposterous to consider seriously."

Subpenas Lost, 7 Traffic Trials Are Held Up

Judge, jury and clerks in the Police Court jury branch had the afternoon off yesterday because witnesses due to appear were not notified—the subpenas were mislaid.

None at the courtroom knew that witnesses had not been summoned for seven traffic jury trials until the cases were called up.

Unable to rectify the matter, Judge George D. Neilson continued the cases for reassignment.

It was learned afterward that the subpenas for witnesses in cases set for trial today were attached to the others and also were mislaid. This fact was discovered in time to notify the principals. The papers later were found at Police Headquarters.

'Aspirin Bandit' Sought in Bizarre Slaying Of Beauty Known as 'The Egyptian Princess'

Wife of Greek Coffee Salesman Found Strangled in Bronx

By the United Press

New York, Feb. 5.—The possibility that New York's strange "aspirin bandit" murdered pretty Catherine Pappas, found strangled last night in the three-room apartment she occupied with her husband, was considered tonight by authorities.

Mrs. Pappas, who married John Pappas in Egypt two years ago and came with him to this country, was known to neighbors as "the Egyptian princess." They regarded her with awe, since she never spoke to them, though she took part in activities of St. Pyridon's Greek Orthodox Church.

She was found bound with a bath towel and strangled with a blue necktie, lying on an undisturbed bed. She was but partly dressed, as she had been when she served her husband's breakfast. Pappas said he did not recognize the necktie and could not explain a table set for serving coffee and cakes, as though Mrs. Pappas had admitted a friend to the apartment.

The apartment door had a peephole, he said, and his wife always scrutinized visitors through it before admitting them. She was afraid of strangers and would not have admitted one, he insisted.

Valuables Missing

Another odd circumstance was the discovery that a fox fur neckpiece was hanging between the Venetian blind and a window of the apartment. A $4,000 diamond ring, a gold cross and some cash were missing. Handbags had been ransacked. Those who held to a robbery theory believed the fur might have been placed in the window for concealment.

There were scratches on Mrs. Pappas' face but not enough to account for a bloody towel found in the bathroom. Her brassiere had been torn. She had not been criminally assaulted.

The "aspirin bandit" theory was advanced as a possibility by the district attorney's office. A bottle of aspirin was found on the dining alcove table. The "aspirin bandit" is a thug who intimidates housewives, asks them for aspirin and takes it while he robs their homes.

About all the police were sure of was that the murderer chews gum and smokes a certain brand of cigarettes. Mrs. Pappas did neither and a partly empty pack of cigarettes found in the apartment were of a brand different from those used by her husband.

Dead About 8 Hours

She had been dead about eight hours when her husband returned home last night. A coffee merchant, he is 49, 20 years older than his wife. The doorman said no one had entered the apartment since he came on duty at 1 p. m. Soon after Pappas went upstairs he called the doorman, Dillard Addeck. Addeck saw a crushed lampshade, a woman's shoe on the floor, and the door of a bookcase pried open. He thought there had been a robbery. Pappas pointed to the bedroom.

"In there," he said.

Addeck looked in. Mrs. Pappas was on the bed, clad only in stockings and underwear.

Pappas was questioned for six hours. When he returned to the apartment with an undertaker, carrying his wife's burial dress in a bright Christmas box, neighbors asked him who he thought committed the murder. His gaunt face was drawn tight and he polished his spectacles on a white silk handkerchief. He said nothing and they repeated the question.

"Don't speak," he said.

Spouse Preferred Marx to Cupid; Wife Wins Divorce

Newark, N. J., Feb. 5(INS).—Mrs. Margaret Carroll was granted a divorce today because her husband manifested his love in the wrong direction—toward the Communist Party instead of toward her. Her grounds were desertion.

Mrs. Carroll, of New Brunswick, explained to Advisory Master Matthews:

"I told him he would have to choose between his Communist friends and me and he said, 'I'll take the Communist Party.' "

According to his wife, George Raymond Carroll, a native of Lowell, Mass., was escorted over the city limits six times by New Brunswick police for his activities. In 1935 he went to Spain to help the Loyalists and she did not hear from him until last summer, she said.

Seven National Museum Trips Made in Year

Seven scientific expeditions of the National Museum ranged over entire North America and to remote sections of Siberia in the last year, museum officials reported yesterday.

The expeditions were for a variety of purposes, including collection of animals, fossils and geological specimens and archeological materials which will serve as reference types for American scientists, it was stated.

Expeditions included exploration in Russia and Siberia by Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, curator of physical anthropology; the extension of Pueblo Indian culture eastward by Dr. Waldo R. Wedel; collection of rare minerals in Mexican mines by Dr. W. F. Foshag, curator of physical and chemical geology.

A search for invertebrate fossils of the Devonian and Ordovician periods in the Rocky Mountains by Dr. G. A. Cooper; a survey of the Big Bend region of Texas by Dr. C. W. Gilmore, curator of vertebrate paleontology; collection of fishes and marine invertebrates from the Phoenix and Samoan Islands by Dr. Leonard P. Schultz, curator of fishes; a collection of Arctic plants by Capt. Robert A. Bartlett.

There was a total of 2,505,171 visitors to the various buildings of the museum in the last year, it was reported. The figure marked an increase of 250,000 over the year before.

Soldier Dependent Hospitalization Limited by Army

Army officials said yesterday that instructions have been issued to all medical unit commanders to limit the hospitalization of dependents of military personnel to emergency cases.

Crowding of existing hospitals as the result of the expansion of the Army makes the new policy necessary, it was said. It leaves much discretion in the hands of local hospital authorities, who may continue to hospitalize dependents if it does not interfere with the treatment of soldiers.

The new policy applies to dental service as well as hospitalization, but not to out-patient or clinical treatment. Naval officials said that no change is contemplated in the present arrangement for treating dependents at no cost to the Government.

Noted Rabbi Finds Wife, Son Dead in Car; Suicide Indicated

By International News Service

Philadelphia, Feb. 5.—Found dead of carbon monoxide asphyxiation, the wife and son of Rabbi Louis Wolsey, one of the most prominent of American Jewish leaders were believed tonight to have taken their lives in a suicide pact.

The rabbi's wife, Mrs. Florence Wolsey, 48, and his son, Jonathan, 24, were found seated in one of the family's two cars in the garage of their home in suburban Elkins Park.

They were found by Rabbi Wolsey and a friend, Dr. G. C. Tassman, of Germantown, when the Jewish leader, uneasy about the whereabouts of his wife and son, went to see if the family autos were in use.

Coroner Winslow Hushong said that he found a garden hose extending through a window of the car and indicated that the mother and son had placed it there before starting the motor.

"This is a clear case of suicide," he said.

Dr. Tassman, however, declared that he had not seen the hose and that he felt "there is a possibility that this might have been accidental."

Friends said that Mrs. Wolsey and Jonathan had been despondent recently over the fate of Jews abroad.

Mrs. Wolsey was the former Florence Helen Wiener, of Cleveland. Rabbi Wolsey came here from Cleveland in 1925 to head Rodef Shalom Temple, one of the city's most influential.

Democratic Business Leaders to Get Jobs

President Roosevelt is understood to have agreed to appoint a number of Democratic businessmen to key national defense jobs. This much has leaked out of the recent conference between the President and Democratic National Committee Chairman Ed Flynn, when the general subject of patronage was discussed. Flynn is said to have given the President a list of prominent Democrats he wanted placed and jobs are being sought for them. Furthermore, William Knudsen and Secretaries Knox and Stimson, all Republicans, are reported to have agreed to cooperate with the President in finding jobs for the Democrats. The President has been subjected to terrific pressure from Democratic sources because most of the important defense positions are held by Republicans.

Some patronage-eager Democrats, it is known, want to reorganize the Civil Service Commission. They would abolish the three-man nonpartisan board and replace it with a single administrator who would interpret the commission's rules and regulations more liberally. A similar plan was originally carried in the President's first Government reorganization bill. However, the reorganizers are said to have dropped the plan because they believe the commission is functioning better now than at any time in its history.

Robert W. Hambrook, senior specialist at the Office of Education, will fly to England aboard the clipper next week to study war-time educational conditions and how the English are training labor for defense jobs . . . FCC is being needled plenty by John Q. Public. Scores of letters from citizens have been received asking for free $150 radios with phonograph attached. FCC bought $150 radios for the commissioners and department heads so that they could study frequency modulation during the evenings at their homes.

The Administration is looking for a competent citizen to be chairman of Securities and Exchange Commission. If and when one is found Chairman Jerome Frank will be appointed to a Federal judgeship in New York State . . . Federal Home Loan Bank Board has asked for a $50,000 deficiency appropriation to hire additional lawyers in its examining division . . . Its business up 600 per cent, Export-Import Bank has asked for $40,000 to hire additional personnel here .

Agriculture recently asked the Surplus Property Division for six dead birds. It wanted to use them in an exhibit . . . Alien Registration will give its employes free instruction on punch-card machines. This will make it unnecessary for the division to turn over its staff.

President Roosevelt yesterday signed an executive order which will give a 25 per cent pay raise to most employes working on naval bases on British property in the Atlantic. The reason behind the general pay boost is the fact that the Navy has found it difficult to recruit personnel to go to the bases . . . SEC is microfilming its voluminous files to make space . . . Part of Alien Registration is moving into the old bus terminal across from the Justice Building . . . AFGE has established a new lodge at the D. C. Unemployment Center. G. C. Carr is president of the 62 members . . . R. E. Sneder has temporarily replaced Carl Gebuhr in the information office at Civil Service . . . UFWA is asking for overtime pay for "white-collar" workers at the Navy Yard. Union representatives are permitted to negotiate for the first time.

White House Secretary Sherman Minton will be appointed to a Federal judgeship when one opens up in the northern Indiana district . . . National Association of Regulars has urged members of the House Committee on Public Grounds to approve the bill which would give Federal building guards police status and pay raises . . . Remember the recreational contest. Send your entries to the Federal Employe Council in care of WJSV. Two winners will be sent to St. Petersburg for a week's vacation, all expenses paid.

Machine Age Fosters Culture, Savant Tells Patent Lawyers

No civilization has lifted a standard of culture beyond the ability of the sometimes despised businessman to pay for it, Dr. James Shelby Thomas, former president of Clarkson College of Technology, last night reminded 500 lawyers at the annual dinner of the American Patent Law Association in the Mayflower Hotel.

For better than an hour Dr. Thomas entertained the banquet with a dissertation on the theme that the machine age, far from being a destroyer of the spiritual and cultural values of society, actually makes possible the greatest renaissance the world has ever known.

"All civilizations," he said, "have been industrial. There is no other way to support them. There are two general types of culture: materialistic culture, about which nobody raves, and an idealistic culture, about which everybody raves.

"But we highbrows are about to forget that the materialistic culture throughout the history of mankind has done the obviously prosaic thing of paying for the idealistic.

"Far from being the most industrialized civilization the world ever saw, ours is the least. Any time prior to the invention and use of steam, say, 90 per cent of the waking hours of 90 per cent of the adult populations of the earth were devoted exclusively to getting insufficient food, poor clothing and miserable shelter. . . .

"Had Longfellow been required to swing a 14-pound sledge 12 hours a day for two weeks he never would have written that beautiful poem about the 'Village Blacksmith.' . . . Shakespeare was no more a poet than Thomas Edison, who helped make the world beautiful with light, and I notice that today most people prefer chandeliers.

"It will be evident to us all, I think, that what we need now is to get to work. I am much more concerned about the behavior of the employed than I am the unemployed. For the employed are the only people who can put the unemployed to work."

George Ramsey, association president, was the toastmaster.

7th Concert In Brahms Series Given

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress presents on Wednesday night the seventh concert in a series of eight devoted to the chamber music of Johannes Brahms. Artists: Pro Arte String Quartet (Antonio Brosa, Laurent Halleux, Germain Prevost and C. Warwick Evans), Gunnar Johansen, piano. Program: Piano Trio in C minor, Op. 101; Sonata in D minor for violin and piano, Op. 108; Piano Quintet in F minor, Op. 34.

Coolidge Auditorium in the Library of Congress again held a capacity audience last evening for the penultimate concert in the Brahms series presented by the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation.

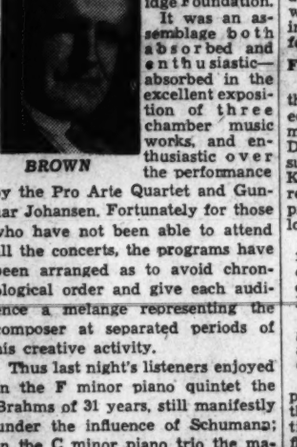
BROWN

It was an assemblage both absorbed and enthusiastic—absorbed in the excellent exposition of three chamber music works, and enthusiastic over the performance by the Pro Arte Quartet and Gunnar Johansen. Fortunately for those who have not been able to attend all the concerts, the programs have been arranged as to avoid chronological order and give each audience a melange representing the composer at separated periods of his creative activity.

Thus last night's listeners enjoyed in the F minor piano quintet the Brahms of 31 years, still manifestly under the influence of Schumann; in the C minor piano trio the mature Brahms of 53 with a fully independent style, and in the D minor violin and piano sonata the retrospective Brahms of 55 recalling the romanticism of his youth. All three of the works are in his best melodic vein and not too heavily weighted with his harmonic heaviness.

Upon Gunnar Johansen rested a large share of the interpretative responsibilities and he bore them with surety that did him credit. His phrasing was continuously clear, his gradations in dynamics were tastefully controlled, and both his touch and pedaling showed admirable musicianship. His performance was particularly fine in the two middle movements of the sonata. Antonio Brosa, too, deserves a special word of praise for his beauty of tone and finesse of phrasing in the sonata.

This current survey of Brahms' chamber music, which will come to an end on Saturday afternoon, brings to one's attention the resemblances between Brahms, the tone-poet, and Browning, the poet of words. Both men were essentially lyricists, who could sing sweetly when they chose and could also be formidably rugged when they became preoccupied with the intellectual content of their work. Both were sentimental at heart and outwardly gruff. Both maintained an attitude—Brahms as the standard-bearer chosen by Schumann and Browning as the champion of optimistic philosophy—and both were consequently poseurs to a certain extent.



Board Seeks Six Schools In Anacostia

Votes to Request $1,180,000 in Next Deficiency Bill For Construction

The Board of Education yesterday voted to ask for $1,180,000 in the next deficiency bill for construction of six white elementary school buildings in Anacostia and an additional sum for five sites, to keep pace with expansion of the community.

The request, which the board asked its secretary to forward to the Commissioners immediately after the meeting, included:

Land for construction of an eight-room addition to Benning School on Minnesota Avenue Northeast, and $230,000 for the building.

A $230,000 item for construction of an eight-room addition to Randle Highlands School, Thirtieth and R Streets Southeast.

Site and $180,000 for an eight-room extensible building in the vicinity of Pennsylvania and Alabama Avenues Southeast.

(The regular bill for 1942 carries an item for this site and for preparation of plans for a building, but Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, recommended that provision for a site be carried as a deficiency item "in order that it may be purchased at once.")

Board Regards Need Urgent

Site and $180,000 for construction of eight-room extensible building in the vicinity of Nichols Avenue and Atlantic Street Southeast.

Site and $180,000 for eight-room extensible building in the vicinity of Minnesota Avenue and Ely Place Southeast. (These are carried as items in the regular 1942 bill but Dr. Ballou urged that they, too, be moved up to be deficiency items.)

Site and $180,000 for eight-room extensible building in the vicinity of Forty-fourth Street and Alabama Avenue Southeast.

Dr. Ballou reported that school officers and representatives of the board on a recent visit to Anacostia "were impressed with the urgency of providing additional schoolhouse accommodations in several communities where housing developments are so extensive and are moving forward so rapidly that the present schools cannot provide for the largest influx of new pupils."

A detailed outline of the impending school load in these communities was presented at the board meeting January 15 by Dr. Ballou.

A report on emergency school building needs for colored schools, due to new housing construction, was received from assistant superintendents by the board. It was referred to the finance committee.

Facilities Held Inadequate

Stating that school facilities in the vicinities of the housing projects "are wholly inadequate" to meet the fast-approaching needs, Dr. G. C. Wilkinson, first assistant superintendent of schools, and A. K. Savoy, assistant superintendent, recommended that deficiency appropriations be sought for the following items:

Purchase of a site and funds for construction of eight-room extensible school in the vicinity of Forty-ninth and Hayes Streets Northeast.

Purchase of lands adjoining grounds of the Van Ness School and funds for construction of an eight-room addition on that site.

This report pointed out that "a private concern, with backing of the Federal Housing Administration, has under construction the first section of a housing project" near Sheriff Road and Forty-ninth Street Northeast. The first section, to be ready for occupancy by September 15, is scheduled to house 204 families.

Carrollsburg Dwellings, an Alley Dwelling Authority housing development at Third and I Streets Southeast, which will be ready in August, will include 600 children when it is fully occupied, it is estimated. Of these approximately 300 will be of elementary school age. Present schools within convenient radius will not be adequate to accommodate this increase, it was stated.

Board to Meet With Citizens

The board will advise citizens on the status of the public school budget for 1942, at its usual meeting with representatives of citizens' associations, parent-teacher associations and other groups at 8 p. m. Friday at the Thomson School, Twelfth and L Street Northwest.

The board approved the appointment of Milo F. Christiansen as temporary successor to Lewis R. Barrett, coordinator of recreation, who recently resigned. Christiansen has been in service in the Park Department.

Mrs. Imogene I. Rutdiger, who is currently serving as acting supervising principal of division 3 in the public schools, was named to be supervising principal of division 7.

Metallurgists Let Their Defense Job Speak for Self at Dinner

The District section of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers is an august scientific body which grew tired of hearing after-dinner speakers say the same thing in different ways.

Last night more than 150 members and guests of the organization and its Woman's Auxiliary gathered at the Columbia Country Club for a "speakerless dinner."

The organization's theme of "A. I. M. E. for national defense" was expressed by 18 dinner tables, each of which represented a type of durable mineral. Such minerals as manganese, mercury, asbestos and coal were on each table in the form of an ornate centerpiece, and each diner received a favor made from his table's substance.

Even the dinner was mineralogical:

White stalagmites and green oolites, Texas tourmaline hemispheres, sourdough's standby, solid yellow lube, molton copper blister, roasted pterodactyl, Irish dornicks, jade splittings, glacial ruby breccia and black gold.

In other words:

Celery and olives, grapefruit, hard rolls, butter, tomato boullion, roast chicken, potatoes, string beans, strawberry ice cream and coffee.

Following the dinner the lights were dimmed, revealing a lighted turning hemisphere numbered with the locations of the minerals represented by the tables.

News Bureau Chief, Writer Lead Gordon P.-T. A. Forum

Trials of a parent competed for attention with the problem of making democracy work at home, in a forum discussion before the Gordon Junior High Parent-Teacher Association at the school last night.

Mrs. Hugh Butler, chairman of the discussion, said that one difficulty in dealing with children is that "they think as fast as we do."

"From the time they're a few weeks old, they're thinking. They don't know as much as we do about the world, but they know how we feel about things, and that's the wicked part of it."

Brian Bell, chief of the Associated Press bureau in Washington, asked what to do when a child asks a question the parent can't answer—take a shot at the question and perhaps give a wrong answer, say you don't know, or "just not hear the question?"

Mrs. Elma Wharton, writer for the press section in the Agriculture Department and mother of four grown children, said the best thing to do was to say you don't know, and then advise the child where to look up the answer.

Bell explained that Mrs. Wharton's answer failed to take care of the questions he had in mind, but he declined to describe the questions.

Bell also asked whether "we don't take ourselves too seriously as parents." He recalled that Mark Twain, at 14, had described his father as "the most ignorant man he ever knew," while at 21 he had expressed amazement at "how much the old man learned in seven years."

Dr. Rex Buxton, director of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, said that Bell's story illustrated one point—that humor can take care of a lot of the troubles between parents and children.

Dr. Buxton said that the only working basis on which parents can get along with their adolescent children with a minimum of conflict is that of understanding for the other's point of view. He said, however, that parents must retain final authority for making major decisions.

Mrs. Wharton said that from early authority parents should early start developing a sense of teamwork and fair play with their children. She suggested that democracy in the home comes when there is a spirit of cooperation and trust between parents and children. She urged fostering in children a feeling of consideration for others and making the home a center of social activities.

Mrs. Butler explained to the group that Mary Haworth, Washington Post columnist, was unable to speak at the meeting. She urged the parents to read Mary Haworth and keep step with the children "because the children will take what she says when they won't take it from us," and declared that she was "building a new code of social behavior for young people."

Gunmen Cow Liquor Store Man, Get $225

For the third time in two months Isadore Paskow, 50, last night was forced to lie down on the floor of his liquor store at 201 G Street Northwest, while bandits robbed him—this time of $225 in cash.

Two colored men entered the store armed with a gun, and after forcing Paskow to lie on the floor, turned out the lights. From the cash register they stole $25, and from a box under the counter took $200.

A white man answering the description of the "paper bag bandit" politely informed Mrs. Mildred Wehausen, 22, manager of a High's ice cream store at 300 Tenth Street Southeast, that "this is a hold-up."

Drawing a gun, he added, "I'm sorry. But the boss is waiting outside." He made off with $9.

When she was knocked to the ground in the 1100 block of Neal Street Northeast, Marjorie Haufman, 29, of 635 Eighth Street Northeast, hung onto her pocketbook. Her assailant fled without seizing the purse.

Boys smashed the window of a Safeway store at 614 T Street Northwest and escaped with an undetermined amount of cigarettes.

Legal Aid Bureau Handled 2,593 Cases in 1940

A total of 2,593 free legal aid cases were handled by the Community Chest-supported Legal Aid Bureau in 1940, it was reported yesterday at the annual meeting of the bureau.

The figure marked an increase of 104 over the total number of cases handled in 1939, it was said. In 1933, the first year of the bureau's operation, approximately 900 cases were aided.

Of last year's total number of cases, 1,123 were in the field of domestic relations, it was said.

Persons needing free legal aid are referred to the bureau by numerous sources in the community. Dean William C. Van Vleck and Dr. Charles Pergler were elected to the board of trustees to fill vacancies. Trustees reelected were Dean Hill Stanley, Harryman Dorsey, Gregory Cipriani, Seiforde M. Stellwagen, Edward Stafford, Arthur Hellen, the Rev. Francis E. Lucey, S. J., Wilbur L. Gray, Sefton Darr and Godfrey Munter.

Civic Groups Clash Over Bus Issue

Proposed Express Bus Route on Thirteenth Street Draws Criticism

A fight between representatives of the Sixteenth Street Heights Citizens Association and the Citizens Association of Takoma Park, D. C., developed yesterday over the use of Thirteenth Street as a bus route as officials of the Capital Transit Co. testified they would provide an express bus route for upper Sixteenth Street for an increased fare.

Appearing before the Public Utilities Commission W. C. Magathan, president of the Takoma group said the addition of an express bus from the Sixteenth Street section "will even more congest downtown Washington." The Sixteenth Street group has petitioned the commission for an express bus which would travel most of the way downtown via Thirteenth Street, which is now used by the Petworth, Chillum and Takoma buses.

G. A. Corbin, chairman of the public utilities committee of the Manor Park Citizens Association, took the stand in support of Magathan's protest, and added "we have a prior right to the use of Thirteenth Street." He said the transit company "is attempting to build up a case for an increase in express bus fares all over the city."

Deane J. Locke, staff engineer for the company, asked the commission to dismiss the petition on the grounds Upper Sixteenth Street is now receiving adequate bus service. He produced statistics which purported to show that the residents of that area are not "now utilizing fully the buses in service." He added, however, if the residents are ready to pay an increased fare for express service the company would provide an express bus. The rate, it has been suggested, would be a flat 10-cent fare with no transfer privileges. The commission now has before it a petition from the company to raise the express bus rates for Takoma to 10 cents in return for improvements in the Petworth-Chillum-Takoma areas.

In response to a plea by the Sixteenth Street association, Commission Chairman Riley E. Elgen postponed for an indefinite period completion of testimony on the case in order to answer the company's side of the case, which was presented by Locke.

Syracuse Stops G. U.'s 11-Game Streak, 49-43

Orange Takes In-and-Out Cage Battle

New Yorkers Hold Lead Throughout Most of Game But Seldom Over 2 Points

Special Dispatch to The Post

Syracuse, N. Y., Feb. 5.—Georgetown's 11-game winning streak came to grief tonight as Syracuse's Orangemen won a 49-to-43 verdict in a sensationally played battle before 2,500.

A quick spurt before half-time put Syracuse in front, 25 to 20, and the Orangemen relinquished the lead only once in a tight second half. The Hoyas got in front, 34 to 33, only to have Stan Kruse and Capt. Paul Kartluke run rampant in a final drive that gave Syracuse its fourth straight win over the visitors.

The rangy Kartluke, who virtually beat Georgetown single-handed last year, again was a nemesis, caging 19 points, and teaming with big "Red" Stanton, a sophomore from Arlington, Va., to give Syracuse control of the backboards with their height. Stan Kruse, stocky Syracuse forward, contributed seven field goals and a foul, and whipped in three of his baskets in the final drive that turned the tide.

Kiernan Scores 17 Points

Eagle-eyed Jim Kiernan was a problem to Syracuse's defense all night, getting 17 points. Charlie Schmidli collected 10 and big Bill Bornheimer had 8, 7 in the second half.

The struggle left the fans limp. The lead changed hands 10 times, 8 in the first half, and the count was tied six times as both teams played themselves into exhaustion. Syracuse, with two players declared ineligible only yesterday because of scholastic troubles, used only one substitute.

The rivals were never separated by more than two points in the first half until the final minutes when Kartluke and Ray Willmott caged quick hoops to put Syracuse in front by five points.

American U. Stops Jacket Five, 45-30

American University opened its second scholastic semester basketball schedule last night with a 45-30 defeat of Randolph-Macon at the A. U. gymnasium and in the process unveiled a freshman prospect who Coach Staff Cassell feels has a bright future.

Tommy Simpson, of Arlington, Va., made his debut with the Eagle five by stealing the scoring show away from Capt. Dutch Schulze, the District's leading college scorer, in a game which saw every man on the A. U. squad score at least once.

The Boys Cooperate

Simpson, a football player, piled up eight points, all from the floor, to top Schulze's performance by a single point. The A. U. captain, however, was content to feed the ball to his teammates all night and only occasionally attempted a shot.

Simpson, along with Charley Doolittle, a Pennsylvanian, reported for basketball practice at A. U. for the first time on Monday. Doolittle, who has never played basketball before, is a junior.

Cassell substituted freely after A. U. quickly nullified the Yellow Jacket's opening two-point lead. The Eagles gradually pulled away and were never headed. They had a 27-17 lead at the half and in the second half they held the Jacket attack to a standstill.

Maryland U. Routed, 52-27, By Navy Five

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 5.—The luckless University of Maryland basketball quintet dropped its thirteenth straight contest to the Navy, 52 to 27, today before a graduation week throng in Dahlgren Hall.

The Middies, led by Bill Busik and Bob Zoeller, football "touchdown twins," had an easy time with the hapless Terrapins, using two full teams and four other substitutes.

Two in Farewell Game

The game marked the end of the collegiate basketball careers of Capt. Norman Ackley, forward, and big Charlie Smith, center, from Baltimore. Both are to be graduated Friday.

Ahead 19 to 4 in the first half, Navy put in its second "five" which permitted the Old Liners to pump in two double deckers and two foul tosses to bring the score to 21-14 at the intermission.

Navy's first team then took over and soon built up another comfortable lead to coast to an easy victory. The College Parkers had a hard time finding the basket in the first period and many of their long-range shots in the final stanza missed the mark.

Berie Ulman was Maryland's high scorer with 8 points.

Miss Hicks Golf Victim Of Jane Crum

By the Associated Press

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 5.—Medalist Elizabeth Hicks, of Pasadena, Calif., found the steady shooting of Jane Crum too much for her here today and was eliminated, one up in 20 holes, from the Palm Beach Women's Golf Tournament she won last year.

Miss Hicks and the Orangeburg, S. C., lass battled nip and tuck all the way, with the California star holding a 1-up lead at the end of the first nine. Miss Crum matched Miss Hicks' fine golf on the second nine, however, and managed to square the match at the end of 18. Both fired 75's, three over women's par.

After halving the nineteenth hole, Miss Crum banged in a birdie on the 125-yard twentieth to win.

Miss Crum's opponent in the semifinals tomorrow will be Grace Amory, Palm Beach society girl. Miss Amory carded a fine 34, one under par, on the first nine today to take a 6-up lead over Mrs. Miriam Phipps-Lyon, of Miami. The Palm Beach star then won easily, 7 and 5.

Dorothy Gardner, of Steubenville, Ohio, defeated Nancy McClave, of Maplewood, N. J., 1 up, while Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., trimmed Diana Fishwick Critchley, former British champion, 4 and 3.

In the semifinals, Miss Bauer plays Miss Gardner.

'Ace' Parker Signs 2-Year Grid Contract

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 5.—Clarence "Ace" Parker has made his choice, and it is football.

The former Duke athlete who won the 1940 National Football League's most valuable player award while virtually playing on one leg for the Brooklyn Dodgers, today signed a two-year Dodger contract, the terms of which virtually end any possibility of a career as a major league baseball player.

PARKER

Parker must report at the Dodger training camp August 15, practically the heart of the baseball season, and it was considered extremely doubtful that any major league club would even consider a part-time player.

The star halfback suffered a broken ankle last May while playing baseball with Syracuse in the International League. At the time he was hitting close to .400. The Pittsburgh Pirates acquired him and he was scheduled to report as a shortstop candidate at the Buc camp this spring.

The age factor loomed large in his decision.

"I will be 28 in May," he said. "Were I in the majors now I would stick to baseball. Or even if I were in the minors with a promising future and were several years younger. As it is, I feel it best that I play football two more years and then try to line up a college coaching job."

Dan Topping, owner of the Dodgers, declined to divulge the terms of the contract, but said that "it is the highest two-year contract ever offered in football."

Parker admitted that he would like to continue playing baseball, but that he considered his chances slim under the circumstances.

Lions Capture 33-26 Verdict From Army

By the Associated Press

West Point, N. Y., Feb. 5.—A fast breaking Columbia quintet handed Army its fifth straight basketball setback today, 33 to 26.

The Cadets lost an early lead, and were never really in the game during the second half. Columbia led 18 to 15 at half-time.

Orioles Defeat Rovers, Take League Lead

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Feb. 5.—Baltimore's Orioles took over the lead in the Eastern Amateur Hockey League tonight when their two scores in the last six minutes enabled them to defeat the New York Rovers, 2 to 0.

The final period was two-thirds completed before Baltimore was able to break through the Rover defense. At 14:45 Kowalski, playing his second game for Baltimore, scored on assists by Wynchnenka and Ripley and three seconds later Ripley registered unassisted.

Washington had held first place since the opening of the season, but four straight losses by the Eagles enabled the consistent Orioles to overhaul them.

Tonight's shutout by Frank Ceryance, Oriole goalie, was his second this season.

Grid Czar 'Railroaded' Is Charge

Thompson, Bell And Topping Say Whole Procedure Isn't Legal

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 5.—Dissension broke out in the National Football League today over appointment of Elmer Layden as commissioner of professional football.

Three of the league's ten club owners—Alexis Thompson of Pittsburgh, Bert Bell, half owner of the Philadelphia Eagles, and Dan Topping, of the Brooklyn Dodgers—charged that Layden had been "railroaded" into office illegally over John B. Kelly of Philadelphia, a Democratic political leader, and Frank McCormick, director of Athletics at the University of Minnesota.

The dissenting trio offered no objection as to the capabilities of Layden, former director of athletics and head football coach of Notre Dame, but asserted the appointment was illegal and could not be official until action could be taken to amend the constitution at the annual meeting of the League in Chicago next April.

Bell declared the entire league was entitled to vote on the selection.

Halas Had Rebuttal

George Halas, owner of the Chicago Bears, who with Bell formed the two-man committee that sealed the deal with Layden, retorted:

"Every voting member knew in advance of publication that Layden was to be appointed. Every step we took was legal. A majority is sufficient to elect a new officer and we have a substantial majority in favor of Layden. Bell knows that his partner, Art Rooney, cast has half vote for Layden. It is true we were unable to inform Bell of the official vote, but that was because he was traveling en route to Florida."

Layden, after serving Notre Dame for seven years, resigned Monday to accept the new post of commissioner at an annual salary of $20,000 for five years.

Bell in a statement from Philadelphia, maintained that he had been delegated with Halas to interview three candidates and the first he knew of Layden's appointment was when he read it in the newspapers.

Bell Is Surprised

"We interviewed two men without reaching a decision," Bell asserted. "I was waiting to interview the third when I learned that Layden had accepted. I do not know who made the announcement but it came from Chicago and that's where Halas lives."

To which Halas replied:

"Well, that's one thing Bell got right. I do live in Chicago. He knew all about the progress of negotiations. We interviewed Layden together in Pittsburgh last week. Then we talked to Thompson and Topping by phone. Layden's appointment was strictly legal. No announcement was made until Layden had been handed an official, binding agreement containing the signatures of a majority of our club owners."

From New York Thompson, new owner of the Pittsburgh club, said Halas and Bell were appointed to interview Layden. Kelly and McCormick, but that McCormick never was approached.

"They were given authority to make an unofficial offer to either of the three and report back to the league," Thompson said. "Bell wasn't even in on the signing of Layden."

Marshall termed the appointment of Layden "the most constructive and finest move ever made by the National League."

Gallaudet Host To Elizabethtown

February Graduation Takes Navy Captains From Teams

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 5.—When the football big-wigs get out their towels in the fall and weep over the loss of a few gridders—well, they're pikers compared with the Navy's winter and spring sports masterminds.

All set for what looked like a pretty good sports campaign, Navy's applecart was upset when Uncle Sam decided suddenly that he'd like to start a few more "admirals" up the ladder.

What's happened would make the average coach reach for the smelling salts and bury himself in a carload of towels—but not these Navy fellows—they're staving off a weeping wave in the tradition of the line.

The captain of every sport with the exception of golf departs Friday because graduation of seniors was stepped up to February instead of June.

Cagers Bow Out

It began today, when Basketball Coach Jimmy Wilson watched Capt. Norman W. Ackley, of Johnstown, Pa., and Center Charles W. Smith, of Baltimore, play their final game.

Tar boxers meet Virginia Saturday minus Capt. James P. Marion, jr., Greenwood, Miss., and two ring mates, but veteran Coach H. M. (Spike) Webb insists "boxing prospects look bright."

And the crew? Five 1940 regulars, headed by Capt. L. B. Pride, jr., of Madisonville, Ky., walk the graduation plank.

Capt. L. L. DeLatour, of New Orleans, and three other trackmen are packing sea bags, along with six lacross regulars topped by Capt. R. P. Seaman, jr., Garden City, N. Y.

Many Others Leave

Others leaving are Wrestling Capt. John L. Landreth, Whittier, Calif., and five mates; ditto for gymnastics, captained by B. T. Simonds, of Seattle; Capt. J. H. McPherson, Vallejo, Calif., and three other fencers, and swimming Capt. Hubert W. Wagner, of Titusville, Pa., and three tank regulars.

And last, but not least, cocaptains in baseball—Tommy Blount, of Rock Island, Ill., and H. R. Schoenbaum, of Huntington, W. Va., plus seven others.

Yessir mate. The haze hangs heavy in Crabtown.

Badminton Pros To Play Special Match Here

Ken Davidson and Huge Forgie, professional exhibition badminton players who have toured the United States and England, have been added to the program of the Atlantic Coast Badminton Championships and will play a special match at the finals on Sunday afternoon.

Play will open at Kensington Armory Friday at 6 p. m. The quarter-finals are billed for Saturday afternoon with the semifinals that night. Finals in all events including the Davidson-Forgie match will begin at 2 p. m. Sunday.

Davidson and Forgie recently were at the Earle Theater for an engagement and performed last year as part of the Shoreham floor show. This pair have built up a large following anxious to see them perform on a full size court under tournament conditions.

Entries from outstanding players continue to come in for all events, with 12 States represented. Pairings will be announced tomorrow.

Army's New Coach Vows Good Team 'Before We're Through'

By Bill Boni

Associated Press Sports Writer

West Point, N. Y., Feb. 5.—Earl Blaik, Army's new football coach, looked around the luncheon table. The platoon of newspapermen had had him under fire ever since coffee was served (Blaik took milk.) He had fired right back at point-blank range.

"This was planned," said Blaik, "strictly as an informal gathering. We don't know just what we're up against, but we have faith we'll muddle through. We may not be very good next fall, since opinion on our material is divided only as to 'bad' and 'not so bad.' But we're going to be good before we're through."

Red will be the Cadets' first civilian coach since 1911. Since he is a West Point graduate, class of 1920, naming him was not a complete break with tradition. But it's obvious the new broom means to sweep clean in the wake of a disastrous 1940 season which produced only one victory.

He has seen none of the returning varsity players in action, and what he knows about the upcoming freshmen he's learned only from the movies. The holdover lettermen include Johnny Hatch of Fort Sill, Okla., Jere Maupin of Glendale, Calif., and Hank Mazur of Lowell, Mass. They have toted most of Army's offensive load for the last two years, and at times each has looked quite good.

But past performances aren't entered in Blaik's book. He is starting one with pages that are quite clean.

"The team won only once last year, didn't it? Lettermen or plebes, they'll all look alike to me until I've seen them in spring practice."

That practice will begin about March 1, and last only long enough for Blaik and his staff to put together a team that in the fall at least can begin to tackle The Citadel, Virginia Military, Yale, Columbia and Navy.

It is noticeable about Blaik that he refers to all coaching activity with "we" instead of "I." This is in true Army style. The "we" means Blaik and his assistants.

This Morning

Without Shirley Povich

(While Shirley Povich is on his vacation his column is being written by other members of The Post sports staff.)

By Clarence Nixon

If you have any old second-hand heavyweights or light heavies cluttering up the place now is the time to drag them out and make yourself some vacation money.

It's all very easy. All you have to do is contact Joe Louis & Co. through its agent, Mike Jacobs, Twentieth Century Club, New York City, and your're a cinch to grab off a nice hunk of dough for that spring trip.

NIXON

It seems from the latest actions in the fight market that Agent Mike Jacobs is going in the wholesale business in a big way and is pushing his heavyweight commodity on the public as fast as he can. It may be Uncle Sam's draft or it might be that his champion is going stale all of a sudden, but be what it may, Joe Louis is getting a grand rush. Mr. Jacobs is not one to let a product go sour on the market. He apparently is making hay while the sun shines, as the old saying goes.

Already Champion Louis has defended his championship 13 times since he belted out poor old Jimmy Braddock in Chicago and his performance in his last few fights leave one wondering.

Anyway, Agent Jacobs is busier than a one-armed xylophone player arranging matches for Champion Louis. Time was when a heavyweight champion (and they were real champions) fought only twice a year and then only after a long training session and a colossal buildup. Now, under the masterful manipulations of Agent Jacobs, Champion Louis almost meets himself going in and out of the ring.

The latest turn in the Jacobs-Louis defense program is a match with a fellow named Gus Dorazio in Philadelphia on February 17. Sunday Agent Jacobs announced Louis would defend his title against Bob Pastor in Los Angeles in April should Arturo Godoy fail to go through with his fight with the champion on that date, his third with the Brown Bomber. Apparently Arturo wants no part of Louis, for he is spending a vacation with the homefolks in his native Chile and all of Agent Jacobs' warnings so far have gone unheeded. Now Jacobs is apparently using the Bob Pastor thing as a blackjack to bring Godoy around. Should Arturo go through with the match, Agent Jacobs will find another spot and time for the Dorazio affair.

Godoy has requested Jacobs to shift his date with Louis to May, knowing that is impossible as Agent Jacobs has Billy Conn lined up for Louis in June. And speaking of Conn, he's the boy to watch. It would not be surprising if Mr. Conn upsets all of Agent Jacobs' future defense plans.

Agent Jacobs, apparently, is very much upset by the way Red Burman treated his man Louis in last week's scrap. Burman proved very tough for the champion and Louis was a very perturbed gent in the first four rounds. Like Tommy Farr, Burman dished out more than Louis expected and as a consequence had the champion all flustered. Farr, you remember, took all the Brown Bomber had and stayed the 15-round limit in the title fight in the Yankee Stadium, much to the delight of the cash customers.

It is true that there are no real heavyweight challengers and a champion is expected to fight, but there is no reason for the boys to go around digging up this bum and that bum just for the sake of a fight. The people who pay the freight don't want those kind of fights.

Maybe Agent Jacobs and his man have seen the handwriting on the wall or maybe it's Uncle Sam's draft (Louis is holding a very low number in the military lottery and already says he wants to fight for Uncle Sam), that prompts all the activity in the heavyweight market. Any way, they're rushing Louis around as no previous champion has been rushed around.

So, if you have an old used up heavyweight hanging around, polish him up and you can peddle him to Agent Jacobs for a tidy sum.

Haight Goes South

Miami, Fla., Feb. 5.

Dear Boss:

From time to time I have referred to the color around here. I thought I had covered the situation fully, but it seems I only scratched the surface. Miami Beach has a publicity office, conducted by Steve Hannigan and his boys, and they put out a weekly bulletin. I have one here and it is a bit on the fashion side. I will quote from it:

HAIGHT

"Now let me tell you about colors which are important in Miami Beach . . . The new colors are Rendezvous . . . That soft red shade sometimes known as Nastartium . . . The shade that gives glow and interest to almost any skin type . . . and American beauty . . . a bright, bright cerise . . . Back-Talk Blue . . . a bright turquoise . . . also Honey Pink . . . a pale pastel . . . and lastly . . . Lonely Heart Blue . . . the pale, pale blue which everyone loves . . . All colors named with the central thought of romance, which is in the air at Miami Beach." Well, boss, they left out "Optic Black . . . worn by men who mistake a visiting auto mechanic's wife for a night club hostess."

I almost shudder to think what the pressroom boy would do to me if I came by their window at The Post wearing one of those Rendezvous ties. Speaking of ties, big strong men around here wear them with palm trees, islands and sailfish on them. In fact, nobody seems to mind what another person wears just so it has color. Girls in red, white and blue overalls pass unnoticed on the street. There's one thing that bothered me around here for some time. I couldn't find out the meaning of cabana. The best hotels advertised them and almost everybody seemed to have one. I finally found a cabana over at the beach and sneaked upon it. I found that it is nothing more than a glorified bathhouse. Some of them are the last word in luxury. I have to laugh when I compare these "don't-go-near-the-water" gadgets with the 1914 lockers at the Washington bathing beach where we dressed and undressed six to the square yard.

Although sunshine and the beach are perhaps the biggest lures here, the business people of Miami and Miami Beach don't frown when the weather gets too chilly for a "beach lay" as they call it. When the sun shines brightly and the weather is warm, thousands put on their scantiest attire and loll around all day. Of course, this means a big sale of hot dogs at the beach stands and a raft of nickels in the parking meters, but it is not stimulating to general business. Let half of the population just sit all day and they can't spend money. But when the day is cold, the beach becomes a virtually no man's land. Then the attendance at the race tracks, movies, cocktail lounges, etc., picks up accordingly.

Flagler Street looks like F Street in Washington on one of these beachless afternoons. Not to change the subject, but this happened at the racetrack the other afternoon. The men who sell the tickets on horses do so by pushing a button and the ticket is printed automatically. As these tickets are punched out, the "tote" records the betting. There is a rigid rule that a seller who punches the wrong ticket must pay for it. Of course, if another person wants the ticket before the machine closes he can sell it. The other day a man came up to a window and said, "Give me four——." The ticket seller pushed the No. 4 button and, just as the ticket popped out, the man added, "—tickets on No. 5." Being the $10 window, the ticket seller was stuck with ten bucks to win on the No. 4 horse. He found out the odds on

Roosevelt Beats Episcopal Five in Overtime Period, 37-36

Tom Robinson's Shot Beats Maroons; D. C. Champs Trail Until Final 3 Minutes

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., Feb. 5.—Roosevelt High School's Rough Riders were extended to the limit by an underdog Episcopal High five here today, but after pulling up on even terms as the regulation contest neared its close came through with a wild 37-36 extra-period victory. Tom Robinson's sidecourt shot in the last 20 seconds of the overtime period turned the trick. It was the Maroons' third loss in eight starts.

The District champions were on the short end of the score from the start of the contest until the last three minutes of the game, when they grabbed a 2-point lead only to see the Maroons tie it up with less than a minute to play. The score changed hands or was tied five times in the overtime and the Maroons were hanging onto a 1-point lead when Robertson came through with the game-saving goal as the timekeeper poised his gun for the final shot.

Maroons Lead at Half

The first quarter was unusually slow and saw Episcopal hold a 3-1 lead at the end of the period and by half-time the Maroons had boosted their margin to hold a 14-11 lead. Roosevelt cut it down to one point in the third, trailing, 20-21, as the period ended.

Roosevelt tied it up at 23-23 on a field goal by Perlo, but fell behind again when West counted to make it 25-23. With three minutes to go the count was deadlocked again at 28-28 when Howard, Roosevelt center, made his only field goal of the game to put his team ahead. With 40 seconds to play Tom Hamill tied it up at 30-all and the whistle sounded before either team could score.

The teams alternated in scoring field goals in the extra period until Tom Hamill converted a foul shot to put the Maroons ahead, 36-35, with the clock showing less than a minute to play. At this point, Robertson emerged from a midcourt scramble with the ball, dribbled into the scoring zone and fired a one-handed shot that swished through the net seconds ahead of the timekeeper's gun.

Hymie Perlo, veteran Roosevelt guard, topped the Rough Rider attack with 13 points, while Robertson contributed 9 points, most of which were scored at crucial moments. Tom Hamill sparked the Episcopal attack, hanging up nine points, while Berkeley and Burnett netted eight apiece.

Virginia Host To Maryland Five Tonight

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 5.—Basketball will highlight the home phase of the University of Virginia's sports activity this week, starting with the Maryland game here tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

Likely to snap an amazing series of defeats anywhere along the line, Maryland's quest will be led by Ochsenreiter, high-scoring ace, and George Jarmoska, forwards; Arthur Woodward, center, and Bob Fetters and Jim Wharton, guards.

The Cavaliers, losers of only two contests this season, probably will take the floor with a starting lineup of Bill Harman and Dick Wiltshire, forwards; Albert Lowman, center, and Billy McCann and Bill Preston, guards.

The week's feature, however, is reserved for Saturday night, when V. M. I. comes to Charlottesville for the second of a two-game series. And the Cavaliers can be expected to be, in the mood to repay the Cadets for the 42-39 loss of ten days ago at Lexington.

Preparations for Saturday's annual meet with Navy holds the attention of the Virginia boxers, and by way of comparison the Navy team overpowered North Carolina last week after the Tarheels had upset the Cavaliers a week earlier. In the other two of its three meets to date, Virginia defeated Virginia Tech and Maryland.

The freshmen boxers, who have figured in a win, loss and tie, will accompany the varsity to Annapolis for a Saturday afternoon preliminary with the Navy Plebes.

The Cavalier swimmers return to action here Friday afternoon against Duke, and at the same time the freshmen will be hosts to Massanutten Military Academy.

The freshmen basketballers meet Virginia Episcopal here Friday afternoon and have a Saturday afternoon engagement with V. M. I. freshmen.

St. Paul's Five Scores Over Landon, 24-18

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 5.—Held on even terms at half-time, the basketball squad of St. Paul's School finished strong to take a 24-18 victory today from Landon School of Washington.

Both sides were unable to find the basket in the first quarter, which ended 3 to 1 in favor of the visitors.

The half closed at 5-all. In the third period St. Paul's scored 11 points, four more than its opponent, and the locals tallied eight points to six for the Washingtonians in the final quarter.

With six field goals, Galloway, of the locals, was high man among all the players. Alford, of Landon, shot four fouls in as many attempts, as also did Rogers, local center.

Wisconsin's 'Track Twins' Defend Method of Running

Famous Milers Say Sport Writers Spoil Fans, Wanting Record Performances

By Jack Munhall

Chuck Fenske and Walter Mehl, Wisconsin's bespectacled twins of the track, yesterday unloosed a hot answer to charges that current amateur racing was conspicious for the lack of the good, old college day try on the part of the tempermental stars.

Fenske and Mehl, who were here on business for the National Youth Administration in which they are executives, used almost the same words as they declared that the public because of the sports writers expected too much.

"All the fans seem to care about nowadays," said Mehl, presently the outstanding miler in the country, "is records. But how can they expect us to be breaking marks every time we run, which is about every week. It's impossible, and besides that is not the proper way to judge a race.

Not Judged by Time

"We judge a race by the way it is run and not by the time. The important thing is to win. The public is spoiled by the newspapers. Not all of them, because I believe that people who really know track realize that it's silly to expect a world's record every time. These fans appreciate any good, close race."

Mehl, a last year's graduate of Wisconsin, and Fenske, who was graduated there in 1938, stopped here en route to Philadelphia, where they will run the mile in the Penn A. C. meet tomorrow night. They lunched at the Capitol as guests of Representative Frank Keefe, of Wisconsin, with other Congressmen, including Joseph Martin, and with John H. Lasher, NYA Administrator.

Fenske, who holds a master's degree in health education, is assistant director of the Wisconsin NYA, and Mehl works under him as an area supervisor. Both have been in their capacities since last June and appear deeply interested in their task of improving the physical welfare of the Nation's youth.

Fenske, at 25, and Mehl, at 24, look almost enough alike to be brothers. Perhaps this is proof of the saying that through association people grow to look alike, for the two race together, work together and pal around together.

Fenske, the older, is the shorter by 2 inches, standing 5 feet 9½ inches, but his 149 pounds are only 1 less than those surrounding Mehl's spare frame. Both have acquiline features, prominent noses and high foreheads and both are personable, though surprisingly preoccupied for such tender youths.

Doubtful of C. U. Meet

Witness Fenske's reply of "I can't seem to remember" when asked if he had accepted an invitation to run in the eighth annual Catholic University track and field games here at Uline Arena March 10.

Prodded to cudge his memory for the answer to that important question for local track followers, Fenske was the picture of puzzlement as he said that with "about 900 promoters asking me to run here and there I get all mixed up." He said, however, that he was interested.

Mehl, too, was evasive re the C. U. meet, declaring that he also had received a bid but that he wasn't sure whether he would run here or in San Francisco the following night, March 11, in the Olympic Club Games.

"Jim Kehoe has been telling me about the C. U. meet," said Mehl, "and it sounds good. But I haven't yet figured out my schedule for that week."

Mehl and Fenske—who hold world's indoor records for the mile (4:07.4, jointly with Cunningham), the three-quarters mile (2:09.3) and the 1,000 yards (2:59.7)—worked out with Kehoe, the former Maryland star, yesterday at College Park. They were to leave last night for the Philadelphia meet.

Both are good friends of Kehoe, now one of the country's leading middle-distance runners, whom they describe as "a good guy," and they predict he'll continue to climb toward the top.

Fenske has a low draft number and says he'll probably hang up his spikes if called to the Army for a year.

Bethesda Wins, 46 to 36, From Little Hoyas

Bob Cremins and Capt. Duke Hashagen went on a rampage yesterday to score 15 of Bethesda-Chevy Chase High's 20 goals as they downed Georgetown Prep, 46 to 36, on the latter's court. The pair hit their highest totals of the season, Cremins tallying 20 points and Hashagen 13.

The Bethesdans took a 13-9 first-quarter lead and at intermission held a 27-15 margin. At the end of the third stanza the count was 35-24, Bethesda.

Georgetown Prep started by playing the zone defense but shifted to the man-to-man, but to no avail as the winners managed to cling to their lead.

Ben Decker, of the Prep, led his team's scoring with 14 points.

Umpire Body Holds Banquet Tonight

The D. C. Umpires' Association will hold its twentieth annual banquet tonight at Schneider's Cafe at 7 o'clock.

Bucky Harris, Umpire Bill McGowan, of the American League; Joe Judge and Bozie Berger will be guests of the association. Charlie Keller, of the Yankees, also has been invited, but is not sure if he will be present tonight.

Coe, McAleer May Fight for Columbus U.

A couple of new faces probably will appear in Columbus University's boxing line-up Saturday night at Turner's Arena, when the Explorers meet Arkansas Tech in their second home match.

Frank Cuddy, who split his eye in a bout Saturday night with The Citadel's Dick Ulrich, probably won't be able to represent the Explorers in the 155-pound division. In case the doctor rules against his appearance, Max Coe will take over the middleweight chores.

Competition in the heavyweight class developed this week, as 19-year-old Jim McAleer pressed Ray Weir for the starting job in the unlimited division. Coach Jim McNamara, on strength of workouts between now and Saturday, will decide between the two boys. Weir won his first start of the season last week, to give Columbus an even break with The Citadel.

Elmer Jacobson, badly beaten by the Bulldogs' Southern Conference champion, Lou Lempesis, in last week's matches, again will try his luck in the welter division. The Explorers own a better welter in Buddy Lyons, but Buddy, sick most of last winter, has duplicated his ills this year.

So far he hasn't been able to start for Columbus and his brother, a doctor, probably will persuade him to quit boxing, McNamara said.

Otherwise, Columbus' starting line-up for Arkansas Tech will be the same that faced The Citadel last Saturday.

Charley Rohmer, stopped in the third round of his first match, will again appear in the bantam class. Lou Taub, victim of a disputed decision, will fight the 127-pound spot, and Bernie Jackson will handle the lightweight duties.

Jacobson will try again at 145 pounds, and either Cuddy or Coe will handle the middleweight spot. Charlie Cox, completely recovered from his cold, will fight at 165 pounds; Red Doherty will appear in the lightheavy spot, and either Weir or McAleer will handle heavy duties.

Washington Beats C. U. Quintet, 40-34

Catholic University's basketball team took another beating last night—this time it was a 40-34 dose administered by Washington College, of Baltimore.

The defeat was the Cardinals' seventh straight this year and the victory put Washington College into the four-team playoff in the Mason-Dixon Conference.

Coach Fod Cotton's boys did themselves up in fine shape in the first half by jumping away to a 9-0 lead and protecting their advantage until halftime—but after that things began to happen.

Washington's Lew Yerkes, who amassed 15 points for the night, went into action and in no time at all the score was tied at 23-23. Franny MacNiff dropped in a shot from a difficult angle to put the visitors out in front for the first time and Charley Fetter added another to make it 27-23.

Jack Reidy, Jim Mulvihill and Howard Schropp tied up the score again, but Washington's Sameli MacNiff and Yerkes came rushing back down the court to take the lead and never let it go.

In a preliminary, the C. U. freshmen defeated Devitt Prep, 36-15.

New Yorkers Hold Lead Throughout Most of Game But Seldom Over 2 Points

Special Dispatch to The Post

Syracuse, N. Y., Feb. 5.—Georgetown's 11-game winning streak came to grief tonight as Syracuse's Orangemen won a 49-to-43 verdict in a sensationally played battle before 2,500.

A quick spurt before half-time put Syracuse in front, 25 to 20, and the Orangemen relinquished the lead only once in a tight second half. The Hoyas got in front, 34 to 33, only to have Stan Kruse and Capt. Paul Kartluke run rampant in a final drive that gave Syracuse its fourth straight win over the visitors.

The rangy Kartluke, who virtually beat Georgetown single-handed last year, again was a nemesis, caging 19 points, and teaming with big "Red" Stanton, a sophomore from Arlington, Va., to give Syracuse control of the backboards with their height. Stan Kruse, stocky Syracuse forward, contributed seven field goals and a foul, and whipped in three of his baskets in the final drive that turned the tide.

Kiernan Scores 17 Points

Eagle-eyed Jim Kiernan was a problem to Syracuse's defense all night, getting 17 points. Charlie Schmidli collected 10 and big Bill Bornheimer had 8, 7 in the second half.

The struggle left the fans limp. The lead changed hands 10 times, 8 in the first half, and the count was tied six times as both teams played themselves into exhaustion. Syracuse, with two players declared ineligible only yesterday because of scholastic troubles, used only one substitute.

The rivals were never separated by more than two points in the first half until the final minutes when Kartluke and Ray Willmott caged quick hoops to put Syracuse in front by five points.

American U. Stops Jacket Five, 45-30

American University opened its second scholastic semester basketball schedule last night with a 45-30 defeat of Randolph-Macon at the A. U. gymnasium and in the process unveiled a freshman prospect who Coach Staff Cassell feels has a bright future.

Tommy Simpson, of Arlington, Va., made his debut with the Eagle five by stealing the scoring show away from Capt. Dutch Schulze, the District's leading college scorer, in a game which saw every man on the A. U. squad score at least once.

The Boys Cooperate

Simpson, a football player, piled up eight points, all from the floor, to top Schulze's performance by a single point. The A. U. captain, however, was content to feed the ball to his teammates all night and only occasionally attempted a shot.

Simpson, along with Charley Doolittle, a Pennsylvanian, reported for basketball practice at A. U. for the first time on Monday. Doolittle, who has never played basketball before, is a junior.

Cassell substituted freely after A. U. quickly nullified the Yellow Jacket's opening two-point lead. The Eagles gradually pulled away and were never headed. They had a 27-17 lead at the half and in the second half they held the Jacket attack to a standstill.

Maryland U. Routed, 52-27, By Navy Five

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 5.—The luckless University of Maryland basketball quintet dropped its thirteenth straight contest to the Navy, 52 to 27, today before a graduation week throng in Dahlgren Hall.

The Middies, led by Bill Busik and Bob Zoeller, football "touchdown twins," had an easy time with the hapless Terrapins, using two full teams and four other substitutes.

Two in Farewell Game

The game marked the end of the collegiate basketball careers of Capt. Norman Ackley, forward, and big Charlie Smith, center, from Baltimore. Both are to be graduated Friday.

Ahead 19 to 4 in the first half, Navy put in its second "five" which permitted the Old Liners to pump in two double-deckers and two foul tosses to bring the score to 21-14 at the intermission.

Navy's first team then took over and soon built up another comfortable lead to coast to an easy victory. The College Parkers had a hard time finding the basket in the first period and many of their long-range shots in the final stanza missed the mark.

Berie Ulman was Maryland's high scorer with 8 points.

Miss Hicks Golf Victim Of Jane Crum

By the Associated Press

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 5.—Medalist Elizabeth Hicks, of Pasadena, Calif., found the steady shooting of Jane Crum too much for her here today and was eliminated, one up in 20 holes, from the Palm Beach Women's Golf Tournament she won last year.

Miss Hicks and the Orangeburg, S. C., lass battled nip and tuck all the way, with the California star holding a 1-up lead at the end of the first nine. Miss Crum matched Miss Hicks' fine golf on the second nine, however, and managed to square the match at the end of 18. Both fired 75's, three over women's par.

After halving the nineteenth hole, Miss Crum banged in a birdie on the 125-yard twentieth to win.

Miss Crum's opponent in the semifinals tomorrow will be Grace Amory, Palm Beach society girl. Miss Amory carded a fine 34, one under par, on the first nine today to take a 6-up lead over Mrs. Miriam Phipps-Lyon, of Miami. The Palm Beach star then won easily, 7 and 5.

In the semifinals, Miss Bauer plays Miss Gardner.

Thompson, Bell And Topping Say Whole Procedure Isn't Legal

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 5.—Dissension broke out in the National Football League today over appointment of Elmer Layden as commissioner of professional football.

Three of the league's ten club owners—Alexis Thompson of Pittsburgh, Bert Bell, half owner of the Philadelphia Eagles, and Dan Topping, of the Brooklyn Dodgers—charged that Layden had been "railroaded" into office illegally over John B. Kelly of Philadelphia, a Democratic political leader, and Frank McCormick, director of Athletics at the University of Minnesota.

The dissenting trio offered no objection as to the capabilities of Layden, former director of athletics and head football coach of Notre Dame, but asserted the appointment was illegal and could not be official until action could be taken to amend the constitution at the annual meeting of the League in Chicago next April.

Bell declared the entire league was entitled to vote on the selection.

Halas Had Rebuttal

George Halas, owner of the Chicago Bears, who with Bell formed the two-man committee that sealed the deal with Layden, retorted:

"Every voting member knew in advance of publication that Layden was to be appointed. Every step we took was legal. A majority is sufficient to elect a new officer and we have a substantial majority in favor of Layden. Bell knows that his partner, Art Rooney, cast has half vote for Layden. It is true we were unable to inform Bell of the official vote, but that was because he was traveling en route to Florida."

Layden, after serving Notre Dame for seven years, resigned Monday to accept the new post of commissioner at an annual salary of $20,000 for five years.

Bell in a statement from Philadelphia, maintained that he had been delegated with Halas to interview three candidates and the first he knew of Layden's appointment was when he read it in the newspapers.

Bell Is Surprised

"We interviewed two men without reaching a decision," Bell asserted. "I was waiting to interview the third when I learned that Layden had accepted. I do not know who made the announcement but it came from Chicago and that's where Halas lives."

To which Halas replied:

"Well, that's one thing Bell got right. I do live in Chicago. He knew all about the progress of negotiations. We interviewed Layden together in Pittsburgh last week. Then we talked to Thompson and Topping by phone. Layden's appointment was strictly legal. No announcement was made until Layden had been handed an official, binding agreement containing the signatures of a majority of our club owners."

From New York Thompson, new owner of the Pittsburgh club, said Halas and Bell were appointed to interview Layden. Kelly and McCormick, but that McCormick never was approached.

"They were given authority to make an unofficial offer to either of the three and report back to the league," Thompson said. "Bell wasn't even in on the signing of Layden."

Marshall termed the appointment of Layden "the most constructive and finest move ever made by the National League."

'Ace' Parker Signs 2-Year Grid Contract

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 5.—Clarence "Ace" Parker has made his choice, and it is football.

The former Duke athlete who won the 1940 National Football League's most valuable player award while virtually playing on one leg for the Brooklyn Dodgers, today signed a two-year Dodger contract, the terms of which virtually end any possibility of a career as a major league baseball player.

PARKER

Parker must report at the Dodger training camp August 15, practically the heart of the baseball season, and it was considered extremely doubtful that any major league club would even consider a part-time player.

The star halfback suffered a broken ankle last May while playing baseball with Syracuse in the International League. At the time he was hitting close to .400. The Pittsburgh Pirates acquired him and he was scheduled to report as a shortstop candidate at the Buc camp this spring.

The age factor loomed large in his decision.

"I will be 28 in May," he said. "Were I in the majors now I would stick to baseball. Or even if I were in the minors with a promising future and were several years younger. As it is, I feel it best that I play football two more years and then try to line up a college coaching job."

Dan Topping, owner of the Dodgers, declined to divulge the terms of the contract, but said that "it is the highest two-year contract ever offered in football."

Parker admitted that he would like to continue playing baseball, but that he considered his chances slim under the circumstances.

Orioles Defeat Rovers, Take League Lead

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Feb. 5.—Baltimore's Orioles took over the lead in the Eastern Amateur Hockey League tonight when their two scores in the last six minutes enabled them to defeat the New York Rovers, 2 to 0.

The final period was two-thirds completed before Baltimore was able to break through the Rover defense. At 14:45 Kowalski, playing his second game for Baltimore, scored on assists by Wynchnenka and Ripley and three seconds later Ripley registered unassisted.

Washington had held first place since the opening of the season, but four straight losses by the Eagles enabled the consistent Orioles to overhaul them.

Tonight's shutout by Frank Cervance, Oriole goalie, was his second this season.

Mills will go to training camp with the National Leaguers and if he is not troubled with a sore arm will remain with the club.

February Graduation Takes Navy Captains From Teams

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 5.—When the football big-wigs get out their towels in the fall and weep over the loss of a few gridders—well, they're pikers compared with the Navy's winter and spring sports masterminds.

All set for what looked like a pretty good sports campaign, Navy's applecart was upset when Uncle Sam decided suddenly that he'd like to start a few more "admirals" up the ladder.

What's happened would make the average coach reach for the smelling salts and bury himself in a carload of towels—but not these Navy fellows—they're staving off a weeping wave in the tradition of the line.

The captain of every sport with the exception of golf departs Friday because graduation of seniors was stepped up to February instead of June.

Cagers Bow Out

Tar boxers meet Virginia Saturday minus Capt. James P. Marion, jr., Greenwood, Miss., and two ring mates, but veteran Coach H. M. (Spike) Webb insists "boxing prospects look bright."

Many Others Leave

Others leaving are Wrestling Capt. John L. Landreth, Whittier, Calif., and five mates; ditto for gymnastics, captained by B. T. Simonds, of Seattle; Capt. J. H. McPherson, Vallejo, Calif., and three other fencers, and swimming Capt. Hubert W. Wagner, of Titusville, Pa., and three tank regulars.

And last, but not least, cocaptains in baseball—Tommy Blount, of Rock Island, Ill., and H. R. Schoenbaum, of Huntington, W. Va., plus seven others.

Badminton Pros To Play Special Match Here

Ken Davidson and Huge Forgie, professional exhibition badminton players who have toured the United States and England, have been added to the program of the Atlantic Coast Badminton Championships and will play a special match at the finals on Sunday afternoon.

Play will open at Kensington Armory Friday at 6 p. m. The quarter-finals are billed for Saturday afternoon with the semifinals that night. Finals in all events including the Davidson-Forgie match will begin at 2 p. m. Sunday.

Davidson and Forgie recently were at the Earle Theater for an engagement and performed last year as part of the Shoreham floor show. This pair have built up a large following anxious to see them perform on a full size court under tournament conditions.

Entries from outstanding players continue to come in for all events, with 12 States represented. Pairings will be announced tomorrow.

Army's New Coach Vows Good Team 'Before We're Through'

By Bill Boni
Associated Press Sports Writer

West Point, N. Y., Feb. 5.—Earl Blaik, Army's new football coach, looked around the luncheon table. The platoon of newspapermen had had him under fire ever since coffee was served (Blaik took milk.) He had fired right back at point-blank range.

"This was planned," said Blaik, "strictly as an informal gathering. We don't know just what we're up against, but we have faith we'll muddle through. We may not be very good next fall, since opinion on our material is divided only as to 'bad' and 'not so bad.' But we're going to be good before we're through."

Red will be the Cadets' first civilian coach since 1911. Since he is a West Point graduate, class of 1920, naming him was not a complete break with tradition. But it's obvious the new broom means to sweep clean in the wake of a disastrous 1940 season which produced only one victory.

He has seen none of the returning varsity players in action, and what he knows about the upcoming freshmen he's learned only from the movies. The holdover lettermen include Johnny Hatch of Fort Sill, Okla., Jere Maupin of Glendale, Calif., and Hank Mazur of Lowell, Mass. They have toted most of Army's offensive load for the last two years, and at times each has looked quite good.

But past performances aren't entered in Blaik's book. He is starting one with pages that are quite clean.

"The team won only once last year, didn't it? Lettermen or plebes, they'll all look alike to me until I've seen them in spring practice."

That practice will begin about March 1, and last only long enough for Blaik and his staff to put together a team that in the fall at least can begin to tackle The Citadel, Virginia Military, Yale, Columbia and Navy.

It is noticeable about Blaik that he refers to all coaching activity with "we" instead of "I." This is in true Army style. The "we" means Blaik and his assistants.

This Morning

Without Shirley Povich

(While Shirley Povich is on his vacation his column is being written by other members of The Post sports staff.)

By Clarence Nixon

If you have any old second-hand heavyweights or light heavies cluttering up the place now is the time to drag them out and make yourself some vacation money.

It's all very easy. All you have to do is contact Joe Louis & Co. through its agent, Mike Jacobs, Twentieth Century Club, New York City, and your're a cinch to grab off a nice hunk of dough for that spring trip.

NIXON

It seems from the latest actions in the fight market that Agent Mike Jacobs is going in the wholesale business in a big way and is pushing his heavyweight commodity on the public as fast as he can. It may be Uncle Sam's draft or it might be that his champion is going stale all of a sudden, but be what it may, Joe Louis is getting a grand rush. Mr. Jacobs is not one to let a product go sour on the market. He apparently is making hay while the sun shines, as the old saying goes.

Already Champion Louis has defended his championship 13 times since he belted out poor old Jimmy Braddock in Chicago and his performance in his last few fights leave one wondering.

Anyway, Agent Jacobs is busier than a one-armed xylophone player arranging matches for Champion Louis. Time was when a heavyweight champion (and they were real champions) fought only twice a year and then only after a long training session and a colossal buildup. Now, under the masterful manipulations of Agent Jacobs, Champion Louis almost meets himself going in and out of the ring.

The latest turn in the Jacobs-Louis defense program is a match with a fellow named Gus Dorazio in Philadelphia on February 17. Sunday Agent Jacobs announced Louis would defend his title against Bob Pastor in Los Angeles in April should Arturo Godoy fail to go through with his fight with the champion on that date, his third with the Brown Bomber. Apparently Arturo wants no part of Louis, for he is spending a vacation with the homefolks in his native Chile and all of Agent Jacobs' warnings so far have gone unheeded. Now Jacobs is apparently using the Bob Pastor thing as a blackjack to bring Godoy around. Should Arturo go through with the match, Agent Jacobs will find another spot and time for the Dorazio affair.

Godoy has requested Jacobs to shift his date with Louis to May, knowing that is impossible as Agent Jacobs has Billy Conn lined up for Louis in June. And speaking of Conn, he's the boy to watch. It would not be surprising if Mr. Conn upsets all of Agent Jacobs' future defense plans.

Agent Jacobs, apparently, is very much upset by the way Red Burman treated his man Louis in last week's scrap. Burman proved very tough for the champion and Louis was a very perturbed gent in the first four rounds. Like Tommy Farr, Burman dished out more than Louis expected and as a consequence had the champion all flustered. Farr, you remember, took all the Brown Bomber had and stayed the 15-round limit in the title fight in the Yankee Stadium, much to the delight of the cash customers.

It is true that there are no real heavyweight challengers and a champion is expected to fight, but there is no reason for the boys to go around digging up this bum and that bum just for the sake of a fight. The people who pay the freight don't want those kind of fights.

Maybe Agent Jacobs and his man have seen the handwriting on the wall or maybe it's Uncle Sam's draft (Louis is holding a very low number in the military lottery and already says he wants to fight for Uncle Sam), that prompts all the activity in the heavyweight market. Any way, they're rushing Louis around as no previous champion has been rushed around.

So, if you have an old used up heavyweight hanging around, polish him up and you can peddle him to Agent Jacobs for a tidy sum.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 5.

Dear Boss:

From time to time I have referred to the color around here. I thought I had covered the situation fully, but it seems I only scratched the surface. Miami Beach has a publicity office, conducted by Steve Hannigan and his boys, and they put out a weekly bulletin. I have one here and it is a bit on the fashion side. I will quote from it:

HAIGHT

"Now let me tell you about colors which are important in Miami Beach . . . The new colors are Rendezvous . . . That soft red shade sometimes known as Nastartium . . . The shade that gives glow and interest to almost any skin type . . . and American beauty . . . a bright, bright cerise . . . Back-Talk Blue . . . a bright turquoise . . . also Honey Pink . . . a pale pastel . . . and lastly . . . Lonely Heart Blue . . . the pale, pale blue which everyone loves . . . All colors named with the central thought of romance, which is in the air at Miami Beach." Well, boss, they left out "Optic Black . . . worn by men who mistake a visiting auto mechanic's wife for a night club hostess."

I almost shudder to think what the pressroom boy would do to me if I came by their window at The Post wearing one of those Rendezvous ties. Speaking of ties, big strong men around here wear them with palm trees, islands and sailfish on them. In fact, nobody seems to mind what another person wears just so it has color. Girls in red, white and blue overalls pass unnoticed on the street. There's one thing that bothered me around here for some time. I couldn't find out the meaning of cabana. The best hotels advertised them and almost everybody seemed to have one. I finally found a cabana over at the beach and sneaked upon it. I found that it is nothing more than a glorified bathhouse. Some of them are the last word in luxury. I have to laugh when I compare these "don't-go-near-the-water" gadgets with the 1914 lockers at the Washington bathing beach where we dressed and undressed six to the square yard.

Although sunshine and the beach are perhaps the biggest lures here, the business people of Miami and Miami Beach don't frown when the weather gets too chilly for a "beach lay" as they call it. When the sun shines brightly and the weather is warm, thousands put on their scantiest attire and loll around all day. Of course, this means a big sale of hot dogs at the beach stands and a raft of nickels in the parking meters, but it is not stimulating to general business. Let half of the population just sit all day and they can't spend money. But when the day is cold, the beach becomes a virtually no man's land. Then the attendance at the race tracks, movies, cocktail lounges, etc., picks up accordingly.

Flagler Street looks like F Street in Washington on one of these beachless afternoons. Not to change the subject, but this happened at the racetrack the other afternoon. The men who sell the tickets on horses do so by pushing a button and the ticket is printed automatically. As these tickets are punched out, the "tote" records the betting. There is a rigid rule that a seller who punches the wrong ticket must pay for it. Of course, if another person wants the ticket before the machine closes he can sell it. The other day a man came up to a window and said, "Give me four——." The ticket seller pushed the No. 4 button and, just as the ticket popped out, the man added, "—tickets on No. 5." Being the $10 window, the ticket seller was stuck with ten bucks to win on the No. 4 horse. He found out the odds on

Tom Robinson's Shot Beats Maroons; D. C. Champs Trail Until Final 3 Minutes

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., Feb. 5.—Roosevelt High School's Rough Riders were extended to the limit by an underdog Episcopal High five here today, but after pulling up on even terms as the regulation contest neared its close came through with a wild 37-36 extra-period victory. Tom Robinson's sidecourt shot in the last 20 seconds of the overtime period turned the trick. It was the Maroons' third loss in eight starts.

The District champions were on the short end of the score from the start of the contest until the last three minutes of the game, when they grabbed a 2-point lead only to see the Maroons tie it up with less than a minute to play. The score changed hands or was tied five times in the overtime and the Maroons were hanging onto a 1-point lead when Robertson came through with the game-saving goal as the timekeeper poised his gun for the final shot.

Maroons Lead at Half

The first quarter was unusually slow and saw Episcopal hold a 3-1 lead at the end of the period and by half-time the Maroons had boosted their margin to hold a 14-11 lead. Roosevelt cut it down to one point in the third, trailing, 20-21, as the period ended.

Roosevelt tied it up at 23-23 on a field goal by Perlo, but fell behind again when West counted to make it 25-23. With three minutes to go the count was deadlocked again at 28-28 when Howard, Roosevelt center, made his only field goal of the game to put his team ahead. With 40 seconds to play Tom Hamill tied it up at 30-all and the whistle sounded before either team could score.

The teams alternated in scoring field goals in the extra period until Tom Hamill converted a foul shot to put the Maroons ahead, 36-35, with the clock showing less than a minute to play. At this point, Robertson emerged from a midcourt scramble with the ball, dribbled into the scoring zone and fired a one-handed shot that swished through the net seconds ahead of the timekeeper's gun.

Hymie Perlo, veteran Roosevelt guard, topped the Rough Rider attack with 13 points, while Robertson contributed 9 points, most of which were scored at crucial moments. Tom Hamill sparked the Episcopal attack, hanging up nine points, while Berkeley and Burnett netted eight apiece.

Virginia Host To Maryland Five Tonight

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 5.—Basketball will highlight the home phase of the University of Virginia's sports activity this week, starting with the Maryland game here tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

Likely to snap an amazing series of defeats anywhere along the line, Maryland's quest will be led by Ochsenreiter, high-scoring ace, and George Jarmoska, forwards; Arthur Woodward, center, and Bob Fetters and Jim Wharton, guards.

The Cavaliers, losers of only two contests this season, probably will take the floor with a starting lineup of Bill Harman and Dick Wiltshire, forwards; Albert Lowman, center, and Billy McCann and Bill Preston, guards.

The week's feature, however, is reserved for Saturday night, when V. M. I. comes to Charlottesville for the second of a two-game series. And the Cavaliers can be expected to be, in the mood to repay the Cadets for the 42-39 loss of ten days ago at Lexington.

Preparations for Saturday's annual meet with Navy holds the attention of the Virginia boxers, and by way of comparison the Navy team overpowered North Carolina last week after the Tarheels had upset the Cavaliers a week earlier. In the other two of its three meets to date, Virginia defeated Virginia Tech and Maryland.

The freshmen boxers, who have figured in a win, loss and tie, will accompany the varsity to Annapolis for a Saturday afternoon preliminary with the Navy Plebes.

The Cavalier swimmers return to action here Friday afternoon against Duke, and at the same time the freshmen will be hosts to Massanutten Military Academy.

The freshmen basketballers meet Virginia Episcopal here Friday afternoon and have a Saturday afternoon engagement with V. M. I. freshmen.

Both sides were unable to find the basket in the first quarter, which ended 3 to 1 in favor of the visitors.

The half closed at 5-all. In the third period St. Paul's scored 11 points, four more than its opponent, and the locals tallied eight points to six for the Washingtonians in the final quarter.

With six field goals, Galloway, of the locals, was high man among all the players. Alford, of Landon, shot four fouls in as many attempts, as also did Rogers, local center.

Wisconsin's 'Track Twins' Defend Method of Running

By Jack Munhall

Chuck Fenske and Walter Mehl, Wisconsin's bespectacled twins of the track, yesterday unloosed a hot answer to charges that current amateur racing was conspicious for the lack of the good, old college day try on the part of the tempermental stars.

Fenske and Mehl, who were here on business for the National Youth Administration in which they are executives, used almost the same words as they declared that the public because of the sports writers expected too much.

"All the fans seem to care about nowadays," said Mehl, presently the outstanding miler in the country, "is records. But how can they expect us to be breaking marks every time we run, which is about every week. It's impossible, and besides that is not the proper way to judge a race.

Not Judged by Time

"We judge a race by the way it is run and not by the time. The important thing is to win. The public is spoiled by the newspapers. Not all of them, because I believe that people who really know track realize that it's silly to expect a world's record every time. These fans appreciate any good, close race."

Mehl, a last year's graduate of Wisconsin, and Fenske, who was graduated there in 1938, stopped here en route to Philadelphia, where they will run the mile in the Penn A. C. meet tomorrow night. They lunched at the Capitol as guests of Representative Frank Keefe, of Wisconsin, with other Congressmen, including Joseph Martin, and with John H. Lasher, NYA Administrator.

Fenske, who holds a master's degree in health education, is assistant director of the Wisconsin NYA, and Mehl works under him as an area supervisor. Both have been in their capacities since last June and appear deeply interested in their task of improving the physical welfare of the Nation's youth.

Fenske, at 25, and Mehl, at 24, look almost enough alike to be brothers. Perhaps this is proof of the saying that through association people grow to look alike, for the two race together, work together and pal around together.

Fenske, the older, is the shorter by 2 inches, standing 5 feet 9½ inches, but his 149 pounds are only 1 less than those surrounding Mehl's spare frame. Both have acquiline features, prominent noses and high foreheads and both are personable, though surprisingly preoccupied for such tender youths.

Doubtful of C. U. Meet

Witness Fenske's reply of "I can't seem to remember" when asked if he had accepted an invitation to run in the eighth annual Catholic University track and field games here at Uline Arena March 10.

Prodded to cudge his memory for the answer to that important question for local track followers, Fenske was the picture of puzzlement as he said that with "about 900 promoterz asking me to run here and there I get all mixed up." He said, however, that he was interested.

Mehl, too, was evasive re the C. U. meet, declaring that he also had received a bid but that he wasn't sure whether he would run here or in San Francisco the following night, March 11, in the Olympic Club Games.

"Jim Kehoe has been telling me about the C. U. meet," said Mehl, "and it sounds good. But I haven't yet figured out my schedule for that week."

Mehl and Fenske—who hold world's indoor records for the mile (4:07.4, jointly with Cunningham), the three-quarters mile (2:09.3) and the 1,000 yards (2:59.7)—worked out with Kehoe, the former Maryland star, yesterday at College Park. They were to leave last night for the Philadelphia meet.

Both are good friends of Kehoe, now one of the country's leading middle-distance runners, whom they describe as "a good guy," and they predict he'll continue to climb toward the top.

Fenske has a low draft number and says he'll probably hang up his spikes if called to the Army for a year.

Bethesda Wins, 46 to 36, From Little Hoyas

Bob Cremins and Capt. Duke Hashagen went on a rampage yesterday to score 15 of Bethesda-Chevy Chase High's 20 goals as they downed Georgetown Prep, 46 to 36, on the latter's court. The pair hit their highest totals of the season, Cremins tallying 20 points and Hashagen 13.

The Bethesdans took a 13-9 first-quarter lead and at intermission held a 27-15 margin. At the end of the third stanza the count was 35-24, Bethesda.

Georgetown Prep started by playing the zone defense but shifted to the man-to-man, but to no avail as the winners managed to cling to their lead.

Ben Decker, of the Prep, led his team's scoring with 14 points.

Umpire Body Holds Banquet Tonight

The D. C. Umpires' Association will hold its twentieth annual banquet tonight at Schneider's Cafe at 7 o'clock.

Bucky Harris, Umpire Bill McGowan, of the American League; Joe Judge and Bozie Berger will be guests of the association. Charlie Keller, of the Yankees, also has been invited, but is not sure if he will be present tonight.

Coe, McAleer May Fight for Columbus U.

A couple of new faces probably will appear in Columbus University's boxing line-up Saturday night at Turner's Arena, when the Explorers meet Arkansas Tech in their second home match.

Frank Cuddy, who split his eye in a bout Saturday night with The Citadel's Dick Ulrich, probably won't be able to represent the Explorers in the 155-pound division. In case the doctor rules against his appearance, Max Coe will take over the middleweight chores.

Competition in the heavyweight class developed this week, as 19-year-old Jim McAleer pressed Ray Weir for the starting job in the unlimited division. Coach Jim McNamara, on strength of workouts between now and Saturday, will decide between the two boys. Weir won his first start of the season last week, to give Columbus an even break with The Citadel.

Elmer Jacobson, badly beaten by the Bulldogs' Southern Conference champion, Lou Lempesis, in last week's matches, again will try his luck in the welter division. The Explorers own a better welter in Buddy Lyons, but Buddy, sick most of last winter, has duplicated his ills this year.

So far he hasn't been able to start for Columbus and his brother, a doctor, probably will persuade him to quit boxing, McNamara said.

Otherwise, Columbus' starting line-up for Arkansas Tech will be the same that faced The Citadel last Saturday.

Charley Rohmer, stopped in the third round of his first match, will again appear in the bantam class. Lou Taub, victim of a disputed decision, will fight the 127-pound spot, and Bernie Jackson will handle the lightweight duties.

Jacobson will try again at 145 pounds, and either Cuddy or Coe will handle the middleweight spot. Charlie Cox, completely recovered from his cold, will fight at 165 pounds; Red Doherty will appear in the lightheavy spot, and either Weir or McAleer will handle heavy duties.

Mare Destroyed

Oakland, Calif., Feb. 5 (AP).—Frisky Day, 5-year-old mare owned by G. S. Howell, of Kentucky, suffered a broken leg and was destroyed after a workout accident at the Golden Gate Turf Club today. She was being worked with a pony which was believed to have kicked her.

Washington Beats C. U. Quintet, 40-34

Catholic University's basketball team took another beating last night—this time it was a 40-34 dose administered by Washington College, of Baltimore.

The defeat was the Cardinals' seventh straight this year and the victory put Washington College into the four-team playoff in the Mason-Dixon Conference.

Coach Fod Cotton's boys did themselves up in fine shape in the first half by jumping away to a 9-0 lead and protecting their advantage until halftime—but after that things began to happen.

Washington's Lew Yerkes, who amassed 15 points for the night, went into action and in no time at all the score was tied at 23-23. Franny MacNiff dropped in a shot from a difficult angle to put the visitors out in front for the first time and Charley Fetter added another to make it 27-23.

Jack Reidy, Jim Mulvihill and Howard Schropp tied up the score again, but Washington's Sameli MacNiff and Yerkes came rushing back down the court to take the lead and never let it go.

In a preliminary, the C. U. freshmen defeated Devitt Prep, 36-15.

Ship Biscuit Wins Hialeah Park Feature; Pays $51.90 Ticket

Phipps' Horse Leads All Way In Grade B

Son of Hard Tack Scores by 4 Lengths Over Red Dock; Robert L. Third

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 5.—Ship Biscuit, the only horse in the field not eligible for the $50,000 Widener Cup, performed as if he were the only one that belonged in it when he galloped out in front all the way in the featured Grade "B" Handicap here this afternoon. The Wheatley Stable's 4-year-old son of Hard Tack (sire of Seabiscuit) breezed home by four lengths and paid $51.90 for $2. He ran the mile and a furlong in 1:49 flat—four-fifths of a second slower than the track record, carrying 110 pounds.

The surprise colt had started twice here this winter and finished far back in the ruck. He did not have a chance in his last outing, however, when he broke after his rivals were on their way.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Red Dock followed the Biscuit horse home today. Third money went to J. B. Partridge's Robert L., a length and a half behind, while Many Stings, winner of last year's Widener, was fourth. Sickle T., the favorite, broke well and then ropped out of contention, never to threaten thereafter.

More than 12,000 fans sat stunned as Ship Biscuit, with Porter Roberts snugging on his back, proceeded to dash to the front in a few strides and open up a daylight advantage. They waited for him to falter, but Mrs. H. C. Phipps' colt had other ideas on this occasion. He widened the gap the farther he traveled. Red Dock was a forward factor all the way and held the late bid of Robert L. under control. Many Stings reached a favorable position, only to weaken in the final drive. He and Robert L. shared topweight of 118 pounds.

FAIRPLAX, a prominent contender from the start, responded determinedly to punishment when the final issue came and wore the leaders down in the final drive. WISE BEE broke a trifle slow, moved into contention swiftly in the early stages, continued gamely when placed to a drive and outlasted MAR LE. The latter set a rapid pace while saving ground, but hung right at the end. NO SIR, taken very wide turning into the stretch, then lugged in the final furlong, but finished fastest of all.

ARMY SONG, going forwardly under slight restraint until midway around the turn, moved up steadily on the outside, wore the leaders down and won going away. PANORASCOPE improved his position steadily while saving ground, finished gamely to punishment and wore REHEARSAL down in the final strides. REHEARSAL, used up forcing the pace, faltered in the stretch run. PRINCIPAL displayed good speed, but weakened as if short. HIGH ONE raced in the center of the track the entire trip and was weakly ridden.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,400; Grade C Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:06. Off 4:06⅘. DETROIT BULL, well up from the start and saving ground the entire trip, drew clear entering the stretch, but was ridden out briskly to the end. DEVIL'S CRAG gradually bettered his position, but bore out in the stretch run. PIPING ROCK, quickest away, showed the most speed, but faltered in the final furlong. BAR FLY saved ground and finished stoutly. HEATHER BROOM pulled up slightly lame.

SHIP BISCUIT assumed command under stout restraint rounding the first turn and, rated cleverly, had something in reserve through the stretch to draw away. RED DOCK, in near pursuit of the pace throughout, made a bid at the furlong pole, but was no match for the winner. ROBERT L. gained steadily on the outside and wore MANY STINGS down in the last stride. MANY STINGS moved up stoutly after leaving the backstretch, but faltered in the final drive. SICKLE T was compelled to take up sharply going to the first turn.

SEVENTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:04. Off at once. Winner, J. H. BESS B., rushed into a long lead in the early running, weakened rapidly in the final furlong and just lasted. RAHANEE improved his position steadily in the last half mile and outstayed MERRY SON in the stretch drive. The latter, forced to come wide into the stretch, finished stoutly. LANDLUBBER was blocked while trying to steal through at the furlong pole. ODDESA'S PRIDE and RADIO had no mishaps.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:30. Off 5:31½. Winner, Mrs. E. D. AMNESTY forged to front in run to first turn, drew out gradually and won with speed in reserve. CANTATA was in first flight from start, rallied when placed to pressure to move up menacingly in midstretch and weakened thereafter. EARLY SETTLER was hard ridden and had no excuses. GAMBIT was closest to pace for half and tired in closing stages.

Walter Haight Goes South

the No. 4 horse and he found out the animal was 40 to 1. Friends of the ticket seller kidded him about having to hold a $10 ticket on a 40-to-1 shot because, when this ticket seller played horses, he invariably played "chalk," or favorites.

The ticket seller tried to smile but when the race began he was scowling. Well, when the race was over a fellow passed the window and the ticket seller asked him where the No. 4 horse had finished. "He was last," was the reply. The ten bucks was taken out of the ticket seller's pay at the end of the week. Now, Boss, if you say that you knew all the time that this yarn was going to end the way it did, well——.

Always your ace,
MIAMI HAIGHT.

Selections at Hialeah Park

Dear Al:

Jockey Wendell Eads, leading Hialeah apprentice rider, and Herb Lindberg, veteran pilot, will resume riding today. Eads narrowly escaped serious injury during the running of the seventh race last Tuesday. Caught in a jam at the clubhouse turn, Eads was tumbled from his mount Jack Sting. The clever apprentice escaped with a bruised chin and hip. Lindberg injured his instep while the horses were at the starting gate in the first race. Ringmond, his mount, reared up catching his right foot in the gate. Edward J. Brennan, well-known Maryland racing official, and his wife were numbered among the new arrivals at Hialeah. Brennan, racing secretary at Delaware Park, Bel Air, Cumberland, Marlboro, Hagerstown and steeplechase secretary at Pimlico and Laurel, will interest horsemen in the various stakes to be run at both Delaware Park and Pimlico. Tom Lewis, of Charles Town, W. Va., purchased Purport, 3-year-old chestnut colt by The Porter—Procne from Robert Ramsey. Trainer M. Harrison, who handles the large string of thoroughbreds owned by W. C. Stroub, stated that Sirasia, winner of "The Back Street Purse" on Tuesday, would be pointed toward the $10,000 McLennan Handicap to be run Saturday, February 15. Whirlaway, Calumet Farm ace and one of the outstanding $20,000 added Flamingo candidates and $50,000 added Widener possibility, is about ready to make his 1941 debut judging from a 7-furlong move the 3-year-old turned in During Hialeah training hours yesterday morning. The chestnut son of Blenheim II—Dustwhirl went out 7 furlongs in the following fractions, :23 2-5, :48, 1:01, 1:14, 1:27. For violation of rule 209 of the Florida State Racing Commission, which requires every entry in a race to be registered properly, Peter F. Gene and Trainer J. Simon Healy have been suspended for the remainder of the Hialeah meeting, and their case referred to the racing commission. The horses, Sassy Lady, Donna Leona, Fickle Lady, Phenomenal, Tinder Gal, Homely Joe, Count One, Fortunate Boop and Miss High Hat in the care of Trainer Healy also have been suspended for the remainder of the meeting.

BILL.

First race—SAMPLER flashed good speed in his racing debut and needs only the right handling. ALL GLEE, a quick thing from the barrier, should do plenty of running. RUTH'S GIRL turned in an impressive performance against good juveniles.

Second race—SWING LEADER was third to Miss Thirteen. With switch in riders to Wendell Eads he may gather in the lion's share of the purse. CLASSIC BEAUTY possesses burning speed and she reeled off five-eighths yesterday morning in 1:01 easily. SASNAK is well thought of by connections and will bear watching.

Third race—MERITORIOUS evidently found the route against him in his effort back of Bolivar. Breaks from extreme outside and I look for no mistakes. PAVILION is making his season debut but on the strength of several brilliant trials he looks all over the contender. STARKEE, a winner last time out at Tropical Park, should give a good account of himself.

Fourth race—HISTRIONIC gave evidence of his fitness when he galloped home an easy winner recently. Encounters same caliber of platers and should win another. SUPREME CHANCE, also a winner last time, changed hands in that race, but in present condition he should do plenty of running. LA JOYA for the rest.

Fifth race—LOVELY DAWN breaks from an inside post position and under her light impost of 100 pounds may be hard to catch once she assumes command. PONTY was second to Bull Brier and previous to that a good winner. The main contention should come from this one. MOJA has failed to run her race although well supported in her last two appearances. This may be the right spot.

Sixth race—BASHI BAZOUK gave the fleet Pretty Pet the battle of her life in his recent essay. Under the guidance of Don Meade he seems much the best. TOWN BOY won his last and it was the former Widenerite's second triumph in three outings. Should go very well. JAYFCEE flashed brilliant speed to also win last time out and if able to break in from eligible list will be very troublesome.

Seventh race—PEANUT LADY is a rather steady mare and if she repeats her last winning effort she should find little opposition from this ordinary field. STAIRS, received a conditioner in a sprint affair other day. This route will be more to his liking. The Hirsch Jacobs plater is ready. SWING BAND worked a mile in 1:43 over at Tropical and clockers like this one.

Eighth race—MUCHO GUSTO keeps on winning despite his old age. In his last outing he merely toyed with his opponents and he seems favorably placed again. REX FLAG did not run his race last outing. A switch in riders to Arcaro should aid this campaigner. SIR ELMER

Eagle Hockeyists Battle Boston Tonight

Washington Aims to Snap Loss Streak

Writers to Vote on 2 Most Valuable Players in All-Star Games Tomorrow

Two handsome, 17-inch trophies to be awarded players voted most valuable to their teams will be presented at Riverside Stadium tomorrow night when the Washington Eagles entertain the Eastern Hockey League All Stars at Riverside Stadium, 8:30 o'clock.

Tonight in Boston the Eagles will endeavor to snap their losing streak at four games in a row when they meet the Boston Olympics in the Garden. Inasmuch as the Eagles have previously turned back the Olympics in six of seven games, they are conceded an excellent chance of snapping out of their slump tonight.

The Eagles will entrain homeward immediately after tonight's game and will await eagerly tomorrow night's All Star test against picked players from the Baltimore Orioles, New York Rovers and Jersey Skeeters.

Vote After Contest

The vote for the most valuable player will be taken among the ice hockey writers immediately after the game and the choices announced and presentations made on the spot.

Nine of the Eastern League's 15 leading individual scorers will be featured in tomorrow night's game, five being scheduled to represent the All Stars and four the Eagles. Numbered among these is Norm Burns, Washington's center who continues leading the league in points scored with 62 despite a recent slump which has enabled Atlantic City's Sammy Fasano and Heck Pozzo to close in on the runner-up spot with 58 points each.

Hal Dewey, Len Burrage and Paul Courteau are other Eagle scoring stars who will be featured while the Stars will parade standouts in Chick Webster, Baltimore; Frank Dotten, New York, and Swede Mattson, Hugh Bell and Roy McGregor, River Vale.

Three Coaches to Work

Seven Baltimore, three New York and four River Vale players are to represent the All Stars who will be coached one period each by Pick Hines, Baltimore; Alex Smith, New York, and Jack McKinnon, River Vale.

The players who are to compete for the All Stars are Frank Ceryance, goal; Bille Moe and Jack Dyte, defense; George Grigor and Chick Webster, centers; Ned Vitarelli and Jack Riley, wings, Baltimore; Elmer Kreller and Frank Dotten, wings, and Julian Sawchuck, defense, New York, and Hugh Bell and Swede Mattson, wings; Roy McGregor, center, and Eddie May, defense, River Vale.

Charlie Keller Gets Questionnaire

Frederick, Md., Feb. 5 (AP).—A draft board questionnaire was delivered in today's mail to Charlie Keller, New York Yankee outfielder. Keller held order No. 1,007, and his local board number was 89.

Draft board members said the ball player, married and father of two children, probably would be granted deferment.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 5.—Sportin' around:

Probable reason for the mix-up over the appointment of Elmer Layden as the Judge Landis of pro football is that he was hand-picked by George Halas. Halas, who owns the Bears, is the most powerful figure in the pro game. He's to the league what Ban Johnson was to the American Baseball league, and what he says has been more or less law . . . Until a militant independent such as young Alexis Thompson, owner of the Pittsburgh Steelers, called a halt . . . Which doesn't detract from the fact that Layden would make a fine, benevolent czar.

CONSIDINE

We played Errol Flynn three sets of tennis recently and escaped without a saber wound. Nice guy, by the way . . . Greg Rice, the runner, wears a miraculous medal when he gallops . . . Billy Soose, the good-looking challenger for the middleweight title, is one handsomt boxer who hasn't fallen for the lure of Broadway. Clean-living kid . . . What a figure Buck Newsom must be cutting around the Idle Hour pool hall of Hartsville, S. C., these days! He was hard to hush up back in the days when he couldn't get a break . . . Dom DiMaggio made the Boston Red Sox break a house rule and permit him to fly from San Francisco to Boston to receive his award as the Boston rookie of the year. They wanted him to go by train.

Something phoney about C. C. Slapnicka's moans over the "ingratitude of Rollie Hemsley, who wants to be paid what he's worth. Slappy says Rollie ought to sign up and shut up, because the Indians treated him nicely when he used to hit that bottle. Truth is that they would have bounced him then if he hadn't been a good catcher . . . Frankie Fullam, who did such a good job of refereeing the Louis-Burman fight, beat Burman eight years ago in Alexandria, Va., when Frankie was the fistic pride of Catholic University and Red was known as Kayo Burns . . . Frankie's one-time manager, big Joe Holman, the Washington sports writer, has had another book of his verse published . . . Jerry Lewis, who takes a poll at this time of the year on the outcome of next season's baseball races, asks us to name the winners—which we are glad to: the Indians and Reds.

Hockey has provided important foreign exchange for Canada since the outbreak of the war . . . Unmarried Canadians playing hockey in America are allowed to spend only $25 out of their weekly salaries in the United States. The married men are allowed $50, and the rest is paid into their Canadian bank accounts . . . Incidentally, attendance in the National Hockey League was up 8 per cent at the half-way mark.

Mail Bag: "How can you expect people to read your rotten write-up about the Louis-Burman fight? Your piece was rotten sportsmanship. Goodby to your rotten writing. I dare you to print this. (Unsigned.)" . . . "What a good piece that was you wrote on the Louis-Burman match!—Bernard M. Baruch."

"Where does Tom DiMaggio get off? (demand several readers). He says his brother Joe should make more than Greenberg or Feller or Foxx. Well, do you think he could switch from the outfield to first base, or go behind the plate as Foxx can, or does Tom really kid himself into believing that Joe draws as many people as Feller?"

"Please transmit a Bronx kiss to the loud-mouth manager of Fistiana's Jesse Owens, Billy the Great Conn," requests Eddie Ross, Burman's trainer. "Conn would drop dead if you asked him to fight Burman. Mike Jacobs spent four hours with the bum, calling Mr. Ray after the Louis-Burman fight, trying to get him to take Burman before his scheduled date to get stiffened by Louis. No dice. Could he be scared? Burman will be ready in the next 30 days for Conn, Nova or the not-so-bad big Baer. Excuse writing. I blowed my specs in the Garden the other night and am using a pair of Woolworth's."

The big move on to popularize wiring flowers by mail reminds us of the White Sox rookie who was sitting forlornly in the lobby one day, when he was accosted by John Carmichael, the sports writer. He explained to John that it was his mother's birthday, that she lived on the coast, and that he hadn't sent her anything. "Why don't you wire her some flowers?" John suggested. The rookie's face lighted up, but then fell again. "Heck, no. They'd be all wilted when they got there."

815-Pound Black Marlin Caught, Record Claimed

By the Associated Press

Kona, Hawaii, Feb. 5.—Charles Clapp, of Orange Cove, Calif., claims a world record for catching an 815-pound black marlin on a 39-thread line regulation tackle. The pervious record was a 730-pounder caught at Miami, Fla.

Clapp made the catch Monday near where President Roosevelt fished, without getting a bite, when he visited the islands several years ago.

The publication Field and Stream, which collaborates with the American Museum of Natural History on fishing records, said that the record for Tahitan black marlin is 976 pounds, set in 1926. The Miami record of 730 pounds was for blue black marlin, the magazine said.

Jake Schaeffer Scores 6th Straight 3-Cushion Victory

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 5.—Jake Schaefer, of Cleveland, runner up to Champion Willie Hoppe last year, scored his sixth straight victory in the world three-cushion billiard tournament today to maintain his position just back f the leaders.

Schaefer required only 38 innings to dispose of Paul Lewin, of Chicago, 50 to 17. It was his ninth victory in ten starts.

Another veteran, Otto Reiselt, of Philadelphia, was thwarted in his bid for his ninth victory, losing to Earle Lookabauch, of Chicago, 50 to 32 in 35 innings. Reiselt now has lost two matches in a row after going undefeated in his first eight starts.

'Red' Burdette Rolls 191 Game At Queen Pin

Lee (Red) Burdette, Bacas Bros., was the shining light in the Southeast League at Queen Pin with a 191 game that came within 9 sticks of equaling Elmer Wesley's house record game of last year. Burdette had eight marks, which included two double-header strikes. He followed with a high set of 414 which paced his team to the odd game over Bantam Press. Other highs for the night were: Ducky Cranston's 376 for Boyles Restaurant; Harry Brown's 389 for Quality Shop (which won an entry in the Red Megaw Tournament Saturday) Art Nelson's 361 for Shaffer Flower Shop; Brad Mandley's 375 for City Baking, while Jim Holloway's 384 helped the last-place Redmen take the odd game from Rosson Motor despite Elmer Wesley's 389 set. Boyles Restaurant took team highs with 653 and 1,719.

PENN RECREATION

Records went by the board in the Interior meet last night at Penn Recreation. National Capital Parks has had the high team set record in the past with 1,813. Last night the Parks boys rolled 1,818 and, for a while, thought they had set a new high until Reclamation took it away from them with 1,837, a new season record. Leo Bittner, Parks, was the top individual man for the game with 157 and was the reason his team took high game with a nice 632 count while Charley Dey's 407 set was what sparked the Reclamation boys to their record string.

PETWORTH LEAGUE

Bill Dietrich, Brotman's Market, was the only one outside of individuals of the Schaeffer Motors team of the Petworth League who won a high for the night, his 153 game being tops. Bill Clampitt's 398 was high set and helped his Schaeffer Motors team set a new record for team game with 682 and go on to take the set with a 1,823 count. Art Ball, a teammate, had a 149 game. Schaeffer won all three from Brotman's despite a 618 game by the latter team. Lou Jenkins had a 152 game for Wonder Bread but his team lost all three to City Awning with the help of Tony DeFino's nice 3391 set.

ARCADIA

"Bob" Bobb, Commerce & Savings, and Jack Willcoxon, National Bank of Washington, were the best financiers in the Bankers League at Arcadia, the former with top game of 143 and the latter taking the three-game count with 403. The National Bank of Washington boys were best for game with 596 pins while 1,727 sticks earned set high for Commerce & Savings, who also took all three from Hamilton while National Bank of Washington won three over Riggs, the leaders.

Green Hornet, Bockwinkle Meet Tonight

Seeking his fifth victim in six starts, The Green Hornet, masked wrestler in emerald, will meet Warren (Flash) Bockwinkle, of St. Louis, in tonight's feature match at Turner's Arena.

The Hornet already has demonstrated that he cares little for the rules of wrestling, and is determined to stamp himself as the "most wicked" grappler ever to hit these parts.

Most of The Hornet's matches have been won by reason of body bends. The Hornet merely hoists his opponent into the air and effects a collision between the small of his opponents' back and his (The Hornet's) knees.

Lou Plummer, a real villain himself, ran into The Hornet last week, and was rubbed out in 17 minutes in a riotous battle.

Red Brill, an old cowhand from Texas, will make his bow, meeting Milo (Strong Man) Steinborn. Plummer faces Joe DeValteau, and Fred Grobmier, master of the scissors, will engage Dick Stahl.

Oklahoma City Gets Indoor Tennis Tourney

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—The national indoor men's singles and doubles tennis championships have been awarded to the Oklahoma City Tennis Club, the United States Lawn Tennis Association announced today.

Clemson Boxer To Be Groomed For 'Heavy Title'

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Feb. 5.—New York and New Jersey ring enthusiasts plan to give a young Clemson College boxer "an opportunity to be the heavyweight champion" of the world, the Atlanta Constitution said today.

The fighter is 21-year-old Warren Wilson, of Atlanta, 200-pound Southern Conference heavyweight champion who graduates next June.

Sports Writer Al Sharp said he was told by Ben Gatins, Rumson, N. J., sportsman who winters in Atlanta, that he was joined in the plan by W. Strothers Jones, former polo player and member of the New York Stock Exchange, and Mrs. Rufus Finch, owner of a racing stable.

Wilson will be taken to New York for grooming after graduation, Gatins said, adding, "We aren't going to let him be just another heavyweight. Either he'll become the champion or he won't stay in boxing. If he doesn't make the grade nothing will be said."

Jeffra Title Fight Feb. 18 On Again

The Joey Archibald-Harry Jeffra 15-round featherweight championship match, which has rivaled in uncertainty the Furr - Armstrong title bout of last fall, definitely will be held in Washington.

It will be staged on the original date, Tuesday, February 18, and will take place at Turner's Arena, instead of at Uline Ice Arena.

With the match hanging in the balance, as a result of Archibald's four-round knockout at the hands of Larry Bolvin the other night in Providence, R. I., Promoter Joe Turner and his matchmaker, Gabe Menendez, decided at a conference yesterday to go through with the bout.

The Veskit Agrees

Turner and Menendez yesterday talked with Al Weill, Archibald's apologetic manager, and the "Veskit," as he is known around Jacob's Beach in New York, agreed to let his Joey fight at Turner's Arena at the local promoter's terms.

Efforts to locate Max Waxman, Champion Jeffra's manager, failed yesterday, but Matchmaker Menendez hustled up to New York for a conference with Waxman today. He is confident that he will get an O. K. from Waxman to proceed with the match at the arena, instead of the new Uline Ice Arena.

Turner's seats 3,000 persons, and a packed house, the promoters believe, will offset the heavy guarantee for use of the Uline Ice Arena.

Further impetus was given the Archibald-Jeffra bout with the announcement yesterday from Gen. John J. Phelan, New York Boxing Commission chairman, that his body definitely was recognizing the match as for the world's championship. Forfeit checks of $1,000 each, have been posted already by the managers of Jeffra and Archibald with the New York commission.

Brewers Seek Petey Berenson For Local Club

A spirited bid for Petey Berenson,, star of the Brooklyn Celtics, was being made last night by Coach Mack Posnack as he continued pointing the Washington Brewers for two weekend stands against the Baltimore Clippers.

The Brewers are to play the Clippers in Baltimore tomorrow night and will entertain them in a return American Basketball League game at Riverside Stadium Sunday night at 8:45 o'clock.

"Berenson would prove an ideal man for the Brewers," Posnack declared last night, "and if he is available we'll land him. We also were interested in a deal for Chick Reiser, of the Celtics, but the transaction fell through."

Arnovich's Draft Board Changes His Classification

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 6.—Morris Arnovich today wired Horace Stoneham, president of the New York Giants, that his draft board in Superior, Wis., had changed his classification from 1A to 1B because of dental deficiency.

Arnovich, outfielder purchased from Cincinnati in December, had expected to be called into military service around June 1. The new classification, which Arnovich said qualifies him for limited military service only, is expected to permit him to play the entire season with the Giants, which he is slated for a regular outfield post.

Cubs' Nicholson Rejects Salary Terms

Chestertown, Md., Feb. 5 (AP).—Bill Nicholson, Chicago Cubs' outfielder who ranked second in National League batting last season, said today he had sent his contract back to Chicago unsigned and that he planned to 'talk with" the club management.

Nicholson said he would stop in Chicago before leaving for spring training. He added he didn't expect "any trouble in coming to terms."

Coach Appointed

Davenport, Iowa, Feb. 5 (AP).—James Dockery, 25, basketball coach at St. Ambrose College here, today was appointed head football coach to succeed Larry ("Moon") Mullins, who resigned recently to become assistant coach at the University of Florida.

Baker Takes Scoring Lead In High Race

After seven weeks of enjoying the top spot, Jack Walsh, Tech High forward, last week tumbled from the individual scholastic cage scoring lead in metropolitan Washington as three rivals surged ahead.

The new leader was Paul Baker, Landon School center, who improved his average slightly to 10.56 points per game. Nick Carter, of Montgomery Blair, stole the scoring show in his team's loss to Bethesda to take second, with a 9.64 average, and third place went to Franny Counselman, gaunt Gonzaga star, with 9.61 points per game. The latter's 15 points against St. John's accounted for his rise.

Walsh, able to garner only 19 points in two games last week, dropped from first to fourth with 9.56.

Top position in total points went to Counselman, who has dropped 126 points in various baskets around the city in 13 games. Dick Hathaway's 121 counters in 17 games with St. John's is good enough for second.

$18,310,000 C. & O. Bonds To Be Offered

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 5.—A syndicate headed by Morgan Stanley & Co. will offer tomorrow at par $18,310,000 in bonds of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. as part of a $24,800,000 refunding operation.

C. & O. directors at Richmond earlier today approved the offering, which was designed to lower interest rates.

The carrier will add $4,000,000 of its treasury cash to the proceeds of the sale to redeem $29,100,000 in 3½ per cent refunding and improvement mortgage bonds, series "F," due December 1, 1963, at 105 and accrued interest. The balance of the money needed will be secured by sale of an additional $6,490,000 of the series "G" issue to banks.

The entire transaction is still subject to approval and authorization by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The board approved a plan presented by a committee which has been studying the refunding of $29,100,000 of the company's refunding and improvement mortgage 3½ per cent bonds, series F, due December 1, 1963, by which $24,800,000 of series G bonds, dated February 1, 1941, will be issued, and the remaining amount required for the redemption of the series F bonds, after authorization of the new issue by the Interstate Commerce Commission, will be provided from the cash funds of the company.

The series F bonds will be called for redemption at 105 and accrued interest.

The series G bonds will be in 25 series maturing annually beginning February 1, 1942, and will carry interest rates ranging from 0.35 per cent to 1.90 per cent for the first ten maturities, the average being 1.50 per cent, and from 2 to 2.90 per cent, averaging 2.58, for the next 15 maturities.

The first ten maturities will be for $1,380,000 each, the eleventh to twenty-fourth, inclusive, for $735,000 each, and the twenty-fifth and final maturity for $710,000.

Wheat Spurts, Mill Buying In Evidence

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 5.—The wheat market today staged its strongest sustained advance of the past several weeks, rising almost a cent a bushel. Some contracts at Minneapolis and Kansas City gained a cent or more.

Buying was inspired partly by a rally in securities, reports of improved flour business and decreased country sales. Mill buying presumably in connection with flour sales was in evidence while purchases credited to previous short sellers attracted by the wide premium quoted for May wheat over deferred deliveries helped to strengthen the May.

Wheat closed ¼-⅞ cent higher than yesterday; May, 82½; July, 76⅝-½; corn, ⅛ off to ¼ up; May, 62; July, 61¾; oats, ¼-⅜ higher; soybeans, unchanged to ⅛ off; rye, ½-¾ higher and lard, unchanged to 3 higher.

Seat Price Up $1,000

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—The price of a New York Stock Exchange membership gained $1,000 today when one went for $28,000.

Cotton Futures

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—Cotton futures quickly recovered from an opening dip today and followed a steady course the balance of the session. Final prices were 1 point to 2 higher.

Pressure waned after the recession. Old crop deliveries were sustained by trade houses and spot interests while chief demand for later positions came from outside interests.

Circulating in the trade were reports Secretary of Agriculture Wickard was seeking suggestions for a Federal cotton program from representatives of farm organizations, processors, labor and distributors.

Proposals said to be up for discussion included further reduction in cotton acreage, inauguration of another export subsidy program and use of the Government loan program to raise the price of the staple.

Worth Street textile dealers reported moderate business at firm prices. Spot delivery goods brought a slight premium in many cases.

Exports Tuesday, 10,488 bales; season so far, 694,390. Port receipts, 8,387; port stocks, 3,461,585.

London Stocks

London, Feb. 5 (AP).—The securities market leveled off late today after drifting downward throughout the session.

Chief check to buying was the uncertainty surrounding negotiations between Berlin and Vichy.

Demand for British government bonds revived near the finish and prices finished unchanged. The national defense 2½s even managed to gain fractionally.

Industrials also attracted a little more attention late in the trading and some closed above the day's lows. Oils moved uncertainly as Shell Transport tended upward and Mexican Eagle Oil pointed lower.

New York Dry Goods

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—The woolen piece goods trade was active today coincident with reports that retails sales of men's clothing were running well above last year.

Rayon acetate blends met good inquiry. One-way spun flakes were in good demand with a tight nearby delivery situation in the latter forcing a higher price trend. Silk piece goods were inactive.

Moderate business was booked in cotton goods specialties by the industrial trade. Prices were firm.

Your Income Tax

Prepared by Bureau of Internal Revenue, Treasury Dept.

What is a "Family"?

"In one household" is a phrase which confronts many taxpayers when they come to make out their income tax returns. What do the regulations mean when they classify as the head of a family one who actually supports and maintains "in one household" a certain number of dependents?

Income-tax regulations are not straight and narrow in interpreting this phrase. It may mean the taxpayer's personal residence, an apartment, rooms in a boarding house, living quarters in a hotel, or such other plase as she or he may occupy as a temporary or permanent residence.

It is not always necessary that a taxpayer and his dependents live under one roof the whole year round in order that he be allowed the exemption given the head of a family. If the common home is maintained, and the parent is away much of the time on business, or a child is away at school or on a visit, that is still "one household," and the exemption is allowed. It may be unavoidable for a parent to keep his dependent children with relatives, or in a boarding house, while he lives elsewhere—that constitutes "one household." But a person who, without necessity, gives the dependent of another a home, is not, under the income-tax regulations, the head of a family.

Another term that may be, in some cases, confusing or perplexing to many taxpayers is "living together," in the case of a husband and wife. Again the income-tax regulations are liberal in interpreting a phrase which, precisely defined, might do an injustice to a taxpayer. When a common home is maintained, and it becomes necessary for the husband to be away on business occasionally and temporarily, or the wife is absent on a visit, the $2,000 exemption still applies. The relation is not changed, neither is the exemption forfeited, if either husband or wife is unavoidably confined in a sanatorium. If, however, the husband continuously makes his home in one place, and the wife her home at another, they are not "living together" within the meaning of the Internal Revenue Code.

Stocks Wake Up, Stage Broadest Rally Of Year; Pivotal Gains Range to 3 Points

New York, Feb. 5.—The broadest stock market rally of the new year restored today part of the loss in quoted share values the last three weeks.

Leading steels, rails, coppers, motors, aircrafts and miscellaneous industrials recovered fractions to around 3 points. Transactions increased on the rebound, totaling 492,860 shares against 352,740 the previous session.

Final prices were around the best of the day. U. S. Steel ended at 63½, up 1⅜; Bethlehem at 84, up 2; American Telephone at 162½, up 2⅝; General Motors at 43½, up 1⅛; Douglas Aircraft at 70¼, up 2¼, and American Shipbuilding at 38, up 3¼.

The Associated Press composite price of 60 stocks rose .06 of a point to 42.2, the widest upturn since November.

Brokers assumed the turnaround originated chiefly from internal market conditions because business and political news did not change importantly overnight.

Many traders, it was said, switched to the buying side and covered outstanding short positions on the theory the list was set for a technical rebound. Selling had diminished noticeably the last few days, encouraging belief prices were making a turn.

Quick to respond to buying were steel, shipbuilding, copper and other industrial groups getting the lions share of war orders. Corporate reports showing substantial profit gains in arms supply industries previously had failed to bring much response from the declining market.

Business news continued to portray industry operating around the peaks of the war-time expansion of production. There was some worry lest the extension of Government priority control hamper output of consumer goods for the civilian market later.

A let-up in over-the-counter sales of listed securities was mentioned in brokerage quarters as a contribution to the rally. Sales of blocks of securities off the exchange in recent weeks, mainly from British holdings, have been the largest in memory of market observers, at least for recent years.

Aluminum of America snapped back 3 to 140 in the Curb list. Colt's Fire Arms jumped nearly 4 on a small transaction. Up fractions were Creole Petroleum, Bell Aircraft and American Gas & Electric. Turnover amounted to 92,000 shares against 79,000 yesterday.

Carrier Bonds Rally Briskly On Rising Nets

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 5.—A lively rally in numerous railroad issues kept the bond market in a rising mood today.

Gains in the carrier group ranged from small fractions to around 3 points while for the market as a whole advances were measured mostly in fractions. Sales of $7,820,200, par value, compared with $5,844,800 Tuesday when prices were shaded in many cases by small offerings. A combination of good earnings reports and indications carloadings currently were at the highest level since this time in 1930 prompted the increased interest in the rail department, brokers said.

Well up in front of the advance were such active issues as Southern Pacific 4½s at 46¾, New York Central 5s at 66¼, Missouri Pacific 5s at 22¼, Rio Grande Junction 5s at 45, Baltimore & Ohio 6s at 41½, Canadian Pacific 4½s at 78½, and Illinois Central 4¾s at 42¾.

United States Commissioner of Patents Conway P. Coe, Lawrence Langner, secretary of the National Inventors' Council, and Watson Davis, director of Science Service, are to tell you all about the work of the council, created by the Federal Government to serve as a clearing house for America's inventive genius in furthering the defense program, in the "Adventures in Science" program over WJSV at 10:15 tonight.

It seems that the National Inventors' Council isn't satisfied merely to wait for inventions to happen in the hit-or-miss fashion that most of us associate with inventions. No indeed! As the military and other government services require assistance in solving problems, the council calls such needs to the attention of inventors who specialize in various fields.

The National Inventors' Council was organized by Harry Hopkins when he was Secretary of Commerce and Patents Commissioner Coe. Dr. Charles F. Kettering, the mechanical genius of the General Motors Corporation, is its chairman.

Although closely associated with the Patent Office in its work, the council functions as an independent organization and is expected to serve in the present emergency as the Naval Consulting Board did in World War One. At the first meeting a few weeks ago, plans were made to give prompt consideration to all suggestions for aid to defense.

It all sounds like quite an invention.

Contract Bridge

This question concerns the play of today's hand. You hold the South cards at a five-club contract. West opens the king of hearts, which wins. He sees the guarded queen in dummy and shifts to a spade. You must take all but one trick, but you hold two possible diamond losers. Plan your play carefully.

Today's Hand

North-South Vulnerable

SOUTH DEALER

♠ J 10 9 — ♠ 8 6 3 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♣	2 ♡	Pass	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	5 ♣	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K ♡.

Declarer makes his five-club contract by developing a strip and end play. When West shifts to a spade, South wins and enters dummy with a club. He trumps the ten of hearts on the way back with a high trump, and another club lead exhausts the opponents' trumps. Two more spades are cashed and dummy plays the queen of hearts, declarer throws off the three of diamonds and West takes the trick. West must now lead a diamond up to declarer's ace, queen; or a heart, on which South discards the queen of diamonds, after ruffing in dummy. If West had held and played the thirteenth spade declarer would have thrown the queen of diamonds and ruffed in dummy. South makes eleven tricks at clubs, giving up two heart tricks.

If your liver doesn't secrete 20 to 30 ounces of bile every day into your intestines—constipation with its headaches, mental dullness and that "half-alive" feeling often result. So you see how important it is to keep bile flowing freely! And what finer aid could one desire than Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, used so successfully for years by Dr. F. M. Edwards for treating his patients for constipation and sluggish liver bile.

Olive Tablets are unsurpassed in effectiveness because they stimulate liver bile to help digest fatty foods, they tone up muscular intestinal action, at the same time help elimination. Being purely vegetable, Olive Tablets are wonderful! Test their supreme goodness TONIGHT! 15¢, 30¢, 60¢. All drugstores.

Despondency over the death of his mother several months ago was blamed last night for the suicide of Charles E. Berkheimer, 25, who killed himself with illuminating gas at 1303 Hamlin Street Northeast, his sister's home.

Berkheimer was found unconscious in the kitchen by his 11-year-old niece, Lorraine Walker, when the child returned from school.

4.98
For students and confirmed letter writers. Be good to your eyes. Read and write with this scientific lamp. The bronze metal shade with its wide 18-inch reflector throws enough light for your entire desk. . . . And it's just like daylight . . . without any of the glare of ordinary lighting. Economical, too, because it uses only a 15-watt fluorescent bulb (costing only 85c) which gives the equivalent of the usual 60-watt electric bulb. The base is really heavy . . . to prevent tilting . . . and has a convenient groove for your pens and pencils.

Simplex Flexies Shoes

FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

"Gosh, I don't know what I'd do without my Simplex Flexies. They're plenty smart and smooth as a song. Look inside of 'em. Not a wrinkle, not a rough stitch, not a tack to rub a gal's foot the wrong way. And soft! . . . as a baby's foot. But they sure give support. I started wearing 'em way back in my play-yard. Guess that's the reason I can go like a truck horse the livelong day, then trip the light fantastic at night." Simplex Flexies Co-Eds in Shining-Black Spring Patent.
